A REAL SERVICE to the community could be rendered by the commissioners now engaged in revising the Building Code through formulating regulations to insure for the tenants of houses averred to be steam-heated the warmth which is paid for and which the landlords impliedly agree to furnish during cold weather. Though no book of registry is anywhere provided in which complaints can be entered, general report is to the effect that this winter there has been a greater saving of coal than even a comparatively mild season has justified. Each passing year the evil becomes more prevalent, the owner's conscience more dulled, until it cannot be said any longer to consist merely of isolated cases, and something in the nature of official legislation is necessary. In an action decided this week the court held substantially that the failure of a landlord to supply adequate heat constitutes a constructive eviction if the tenant leaves: "the tenant need not have paid rent and could have removed from the premises," and "a specific agreement in the lease on the part of the landlord to supply adeqnate heat would have enabled the plaintiff to recover any damages which resulted to him by reason of the breach of this duty." But it is poor satisfaction for a tenant either to move in mid-winter or to prosecute a suit successfully; his rights should be safe-guarded without his having to go to extremities. Some houses are cold because the furnaces or boilers with which they have been equipped are not capable of raising the temperature to a comfortable degree. In other cases it is because sufficient coal is not supplied. Both deficiencies could be remedied by law and departmental inspection, and according to public opinion the time seems to have arrived when more effective rules should be promulgated. If there should be a migration from Manhattan of serious magnitude this year landlords may with reason attribute a part of it to the feeling of resentment which has been generated among tenants by their having to pay for what is not provided. Real estate agents in some very good sections have long reported a decided preference for non-heated apartments not to be accounted for by the difference in rent; for of the two classes of houses the latter is oftentimes the more expensive for tenants. But here they get all that rightfully belongs to them.

MEASURES more definitely and certainly protective of the boating interests of the vicinity will ultimately have to be taken in order to preserve their landing places from the encroachments of more powerful forces. Last year it required the Governor's veto to keep the Hudson River towing lines from being excluded from piers where they have always been accustomed to land. The protests of the building material trades and even the veto of the Mayor were unavailing with the Legislature. A few years previously the Board of Estimate had to interfere to protect a number of Hudson River steamboat lines against being turned away from wharves which they have occupied since early times. Ocean lines coveted their piers and were willing to pay a higher rent than the river lines could afford. At the present time there is a bill in the Assembly to amend the charter of the city in relation to the territory for the accommodation and use of canal boats and barges which would close the water front from Clinton Street to the Battery on the East River and from the Battery to Ninth Street on the Hudson River. Not a ton of coal could come into the financial district of the city without being trucked for miles, nor a load of building material, such as brick, cement, lime, stone, or any of the domestic supplies which are brought to the city by canal boats and barges, provided the point of departure for these freight carriers is south of a village named Castleton on the Hudson River. In practice this would give the Northern and Erie canal boats exclusive rights to three piers and bulkheads in the East River which they now share in common with the Hudson River towing lines. No other wharves in the quarter being available, the firms dealing in building materials and other supplies coming to New York on barges from the river towns would be left without landing places in the lower part of the city. Hence, the dealers in masons' materials and other building interests have a sound reason for the protests they are making, but unless the moral conscience of the Legislature is awakened to the injustice that is being done, the city will have to rely upon the Governor again for protection. The struggle for supremacy on the New York water front has only begun, and it promises to be waged without any consideration of equity or regard for the interests of the city until a better plan for the collection and distribution of freight can be provided.

NOTHING in the law prevents the City from contracting for a subway with five builders instead of one, or with as many as it chooses. It may give the whole work to one, or divide it among several. We understand that the existing subway system has had five builders thus far. Also there is nothing in the law prohibiting the building of a rapid-transit system in sections, one section at a time, or several concurrently, when the whole cannot be put under construction at once. Hence, providing that the means are available —and the Manhattan-Bronx real estate interests have not been convinced that they are not—there is nothing to hinder the Board of Estimate exhibiting a disposition to be impartial by making a beginning on the Lexington-Broadway route concurrently with work on Fourth avenue in Brooklyn. These were the fundamental remarks at the several meetings of civic bodies in the Bronx this week, and further stated at the hearing before the Board of Estimate. Added to these opinions is a very general feeling that unless definite action is taken at this crisis to give the two boroughs relief, none will be forthcoming for another decade. One of the orators of the week counted eighty-four million dollars that is being spent for Brooklyn-Queens—and not a nickel for additional facilities in Manhattan-Bronx, except for a change in the subway trackage at Ninety-sixth street. With the Elsberg law, under the terms of which new subway construction in the Bronx is absolutely prohibited, still on the statute books, and the McAdoo and Battery tunnels already beginning to draw population in other directions, they have reason for apprehension and for pleading with the Board of Estimate for consideration. Comptroller Metz reiterates that there is no money, and that relief can only follow the amending of the Elsberg law; but even President Coler of Brooklyn says there are or will be soon more means than the Comptroller has taken account of, and so supports the contention of the Municipal Art Commission and other civic bodies that have spoken to this question. Under the trying circumstances in which all concerned are placed, wisdom and fairness seem now to counsel suspension of further action for the Fourth avenue, Brooklyn, subway until the Elsberg amendments are enacted, if no way can be found before then of putting the proposed Manhattan-Bronx lines on the same footing; for the fact remains that the Fourth avenue Brooklyn tunnel can be put under contract in part, if the Board of Estimate is so disposed; and the Manhattan line in part, and the Bronx branches in part, with the moneys that are now available for Brooklyn and other rapid transit work divided equally. No requirement exists that cannot be reconsidered for setting aside at one time all the money needed to build and complete the whole length of the Brooklyn extension, or to give out the whole work at one time.

Brooklyn's case is no different in the equity of things, if as pressing, than the case of the Bronx; and the city's financial abilities should be fairly apportioned at this crisis, after all that has already been done for Brookiyn and the little for the Bronx.

Build a Freight Railroad Around the Water Front.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide:

It is of very great importance to the building and shipping interests of this city that a freight railroad should be built around the water front. A railroad of this kind built and kept at least 25 feet away from the street lines so as not to interfere with the light and air of buildings, would be a great boon. The shipping interests of this port have been very much neglected, especially the shipping of grain. There is very little grain shipped out from here. Other cities have bidden for it and captured it.

If such a railroad were built, freight cars loaded with grain and merchandise could be run on the docks and put on board vessels for foreign ports, with minimum expense. The public knowledge that such an enterprise would be permitted by our authorities would start the building of warehouses and office buildings all along the river front. These buildings would rapidly replace the dingy rookeries that now disgrace these portions of the city.

Properly planned, such a road, I think, would increase the towing and lighterage interests of this port.

Now that we have tunnels coming in from Jersey and Brooklyn, an elevated passenger service around the water fronts of New York, with the extension of the same up to the end of the city line, would be of incalculable benefit to our citizens. In Liverpool they have an elevated railroad which connects the docks, so that persons can go readily from one shipping point to another. The many benefits which would arise both for shipping and passenger service from the building of this road and making these connections, the city's interests being carefully guarded so that any one railroad or corporation could not control the enterprise, would be the rehabilitation of both the extreme easterly and extreme westerly sides of the city.

This city receives its greatest tax income from the land and buildings along the centre or backbone of the island, simply from the fact that the transit facilities all feed into this zone. If this railroad were placed on the extreme easterly and westerly sides of the city, it would make these portions so convenient that those sections would be completely rebuilt.

Compare the possibilities of such an enterprise with the schemes that have been proposed for building subways around this water front. In the first place, our sewerage system is not any too good now, and a pumping station would have to be maintained at every corner for the sewage to pass under such a subway, the grade of the street in many places not being over four or five feet at high water; then the great cost of such a subway; no solid bottom can be reached at less than 75 feet and from that to 150 feet below the curb; old docks and submerger cribbage which every builder in New York knows are there would make the cost of a subway many times more per mile than a Hudson River tunnel. Anybody can see by watching the handling of trains in the present subway what it would mean to break bulk in a freight train of 30 to 40 cars down in a tunnel.

I hope the Record and Guide will advocate for the best interests of this city an elevated railroad right around the dock front of New York, extending up on either side of the city lines for both passenger and freight business. Yours very truly,

A BUILDER.

The Lien Law a False Friend.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide:

I notice through your paper that some interest has recently been taken in the discussion of the Mechanics Lien law.

Even conservative people, engaged in building contract work, have not always been exempt from a try with the Mechanics Lien laws in attempting to protect their accounts. Anyone who has not tried this law out in detail is apt to be deceived into leaning on a false prop.

Aside from having the advantages of a quicker trial and keeping out of the hands of a jury I can see nothing beneficial in the Mechanics Lien law. Many seem to be deceived by the large number of satisfaction liens, not knowing that almost every satisfaction of lien means that the lienor has had to take the lien off voluntarily to save himself from foreclosure, or taken a lost hope in a trust mortgage, or a forlorn hope that he would stand a better chance by allowing the building to go on, etc.

If the lien is forced, either you must be prepared to buy the building in or the lien can be bonded and taken off the real property. Now, if the owner is stubborn or dishonest and has any backing, he proceeds to "fix up" bondsmen for the occasion. I personally know of several cases in which it was pretty clearly shown that the proposed bondsmen were of bad repute, and were only temporarily "fixed" with enough equities to swear in, and the court compelled the lienor to accept the bondsmen.

In all of these cases there is uniformly but one result: after waiting for several months to get judgment it is found that the bondsmen have in some way lost all of their equities and holdings, and there is nothing to attach. In other words, you are compelled by law to accept a transfer from REAL PROPERTY to FICTITIOUS property. What we need is a law in which when a lien put on real property is bonded it can only be transferred to something equally as real—say a recognized bonding company.

Property Owners Should Organize for Defence.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide:

I heartily agree with the sentiments expressed by many of the real estate men in your recent issues, wherein they state that they are radically opposed to any such law as that introduced in the Legislature at the request of Mr. Lawson Purdy, the president of the Board of Tax Commissioners. This proposed law must be another evidence to the real estate owners of New York City that the sooner they organize themselves into one united host for the protection of their own interests, as well as those of the city at large, the sooner they will get a fair deal.

So long as we remain disorganized or organized into separate little bands we may expect nothing else than that the charity societies of this city will mould our tenement-house laws, the fire insurance trust mould our building code, the city clubs and merchants' associations control all the twelve-thousand-dollar a year commissionerships, and now, as if to add insult to injury, we have Mr. Lawson Purdy, at the magnificent salary of eight thousand dollars a year (ninety per cent. of which he gets from the real estate interests), devising laws to squeeze the last drop of blood out of the people who carry nearly ninety per cent. of the enormous burden of 143 million dollars per year which is being used to run the city government.

Opposed to this bill? Certainly we are opposed to this bill. They might just as soon pass a law making lawyers and doctors file a statement of all their fees, so that the tax department might get a line on the amount of personal taxes they ought to pay.

Why does not Mr. Purdy get after the corporations who owe the city millions upon millions of dollars for taxes?

Real estate interests in New York City are now bearing all they can stand, and, indeed, if many more mistakes are made similar to the granting to the McAdoo tunnel people of the right to tap New York City, from Cortlandt st to 34th st through 6th av, the very heart of it, and rob the great upper West Side of Manhattan and the Bronx in the interest of New Jersey and a few department stores, it will not be a case of losing our property to the mortgagee, but it will be a case of the entire upper end of the city being sold out for taxes.

My word to every burden bearer in New York City is, Organize! Organize! And if you do not do it quickly, when you do get ready you will not have enough left to pay your initiation fee.

Wire Inspection.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide:

Underwriters Laboratories, Chicago.—After extended conferences with the representatives of manufacturers of rubber covered wires and cords, and following notices sent all manufacturers utilizing the services of Wire Inspection Bureau, we have withdrawn from our affiliation with that bureau.

Please accept notice that reports of Wire Inspection Bureau will not be accepted by us after Saturday, Februray 29, next. Stamps or labels issued by Wire Inspection Bureau and attached to rubber covered wires or cords after Saturday, February 29, will not be endorsed by us, and should not be recognized as having been affixed under the supervision of these laboratories, representing insurance interests.

During the progress of negotiations resulting in the action reported above, inspection departments, users and manufacturers have requested the inauguration of a system of testing, inspecting and labeling insulated wires and cords at factories which would receive our endorsement. The conduct of such a service, along the lines established by the laboratories for a number of other industries is under consideration.

In the event that action favorable to this plan is taken, notices covering the establishment of such service at factories will be promulgated through the usual channels.

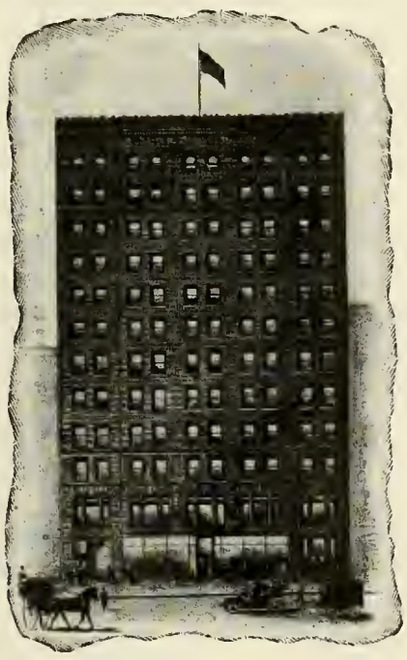
How to Know When Mortgages Mature.



The mortgage broker experiences his greatest difficulty in finding out when mortgages mature. The simplest, most complete and least expensive method requires only the Record and Guide Quarterly. Choose a different colored ink for each year of expiration. Thus, "July," written in red in the margin of the annual number for 1902, means expiring July, 1907. Thus the broker sees at a glance all the expirations which interest him. Full sets of the Quarterly are for sale at a greatly reduced price.

THE REALM OF BUILDING.

Builders' Exchange Assured.

PERMANENT EXHIBITION FOR BUILDING MATERIALS AND NEW ROOMS FOR THE ASSOCIATION.

On May 1 the Building Trades Employers' Association will move into the new building at 29-35 West 32d st, running through to 30-34 West 33d st. The building has a frontage of 100 ft. on 32d st and 50 ft. on 33d st, and is admirably located with reference to present and future transportation facilities. A half block from Broadway and 6th av, the new Pennsylvania Railroad terminal, and the Long Island tubes, a block and a half from the 33d st subway station and access through the Astor Court to the 34th st cars, the location is most convenient to the building interests and in line with the greatest future growth of the city.

THE NEW BUILDERS' EXCHANGE WILL BE IN THIS BUILDING.

The building is to be known as the "Builders' Exchange," and the Association hopes to make it as truly representative of the enormous building interests of the Greater City as the other great exchanges are of the industries they represent. The Association meeting rooms, offices and social features, restaurant, billiard rooms, etc., will occupy the whole top floor of the building, approximately 12,000 sq. ft. of floor space. It has been found most desirable on account of evening meetings and for the general convenience of the members that the business and social facilities of the Association should be on one floor. The new quarters will afford ample space for this arrangement.

On the second floor the Association will conduct a permanent exhibition of building materials and appliances, devoting the entire floor to this purpose. Extensive inquiries have been made of the results obtained in other cities from similar exhibitions, which indicate that they are extremely successful adjuncts of an association's work. In many cities it has proven a time-saver and a money-maker for the exhibitor, the builder, the architect and the owner. The general practice of loading the architect's and builder's offices with samples and literature is expensive and unsatisfactory. The Association has assurances from many large manufacturers and material dealers in the building trades that an exhibition hall, centrally located, where architect, owner and builder could meet and examine various materials, colors and decorative effects and mechanical devices, would fill a want that has long existed in the building industry. The exhibition will be in charge of an expert and the endeavor will be to make it as comprehensive and practical as possible. There are no doubt many firms in this city, to say nothing of those outside, who have sought in vain for a suitable place to maintain a permanent exhibit, and we are confident that this feature of the new quarters will prove highly successful.

The Association has rendered good service in the cause of industrial peace through the operation of the Arbitration Plan, and in the new home with added facilities hopes to be of greater usefulness to the building public generally, and to establish an exchange which shall be the headquarters for everything that pertains to the vast building industry of the city.

—A public hearing will be held by the Committee on Limits of Heights and Area, of the Building Code Revision Commission, on Friday, March 6, at 2 p. m., in the Aldermanic Chamber, City Hall. The Committee on Limits of Heights and Area is composed of Messrs. Charles G. Smith, chairman; Thomas L. Hamilton, Edward F. Croker, Patrick J. Byrnes, and Charles H. Cullen.

High Cost of Steel and Its Effects.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide:

The daily papers during the past month have contained articles relative to the prospective action of the Steel Trust reducing their prices on structural steel which seemed to have finally ended by the Trust declaring that the part any reduction they might make would be so small in comparison with the total cost as not to affect or stimulate any owner or builder to go ahead with any new operation NOW rather than wait.

This argument is undoubtedly true. It would be useless for any one branch of the building industry to cut prices unless all other branches joined with them. But the facts are that, at present, the cost of all materials going into a building have suffered a decline and to-day are being sold cheaper than last year or the year before. The only two items that have not been affected by the dull times are steel and wages. Builders, iron men, carpenters and all employers are offering to do work cheaper than ever—basing their estimates in most cases on a smaller percentage of profit, and in some cases with no profit at all, in the hope of keeping their plants moving and their organization together.

Now, how would it do if the United States Steel Corporation would agree that, if the labor organizations would agree to cut their present standard of wages ten per cent., the steel companies would reduce their price ten per cent. also, this cut to apply only to such cities or localities where such reduction in labor prices were made? The writer knows of several cases where even the public talk of the cut in steel prices started the planning of large operations, but which were abandoned later on. In a month or two money will be plentiful for good building transactions and there are plenty of builders who believe that in a year, when their buildings would be completed, there would be a good demand for them and would be only too ready to jump in now and take the risk if any inducement were offered them.

The building business is dead and will be so for this Presidential year unless some active and energetic stimulant is given it, and it is foolish and bad business for the labor organizations to let their men walk the streets as they are now doing waiting for the "bosses" to do it all. If the workman is to be benefited by the good times and share in the prosperity AS HE HAS DONE IN THE PAST THREE YEARS, he must be willing to help along when the times are bad. So far the employers and the material men have done it all, but their cut in costs of materials and their sacrifice in the profits have not been enough, and now it is up to the mechanic. Let the Steel Co. make the offer: IF THE WAGES IN NEW YORK CITY ARE CUT TEN PER CENT., THE COST OF STRUCTURAL STEEL WILL BE CUT TEN PER CENT. The labor organizations are well banded together and can act on this matter in two weeks, and if they refuse this offer we will know where to put the blame. In every branch of the business there are plenty of men idle and begging for work and would gladly accept less wages if their union permitted. Nine-tenths of a loaf is better than no bread at all, and it is getting to the "no bread" situation very fast.

IT IS UP TO THE UNITED STATES STEEL CORPORATION FIRST. Let us hear from them. If they do their part, then it is up to the labor organizations. CONTRACTOR.

Legislative Digest.

President Francis M. Howland, of the Association of Dealers in Masons' Building Materials, calls attention to Assembly Bill No. 227, introduced by Mr. C. F. Foley, entitled, "An Act to amend the Greater New York Charter in relation to territory for the accommodation and use of canal boats and barges." The bill is similar to one introduced last year, vetoed by Mayor McClellan, passed over his veto, and finally killed by the Governor. The bill is intended to give over Piers 5 and 6, E. R., to the Northern and Erie canal boats exclusively and drive away the Hudson River barges. It reads thus:

Section 874 of the Greater New York Charter is amended to read as follows:

All that part of the water adjacent to the wharves of the City of New York, as hereinbefore known and bounded, commencing at the easterly side of pier new number 4 [to and including the east side of pier number 8] to the centre of the bulkhead between piers number 6 and number 7, East River, shall hereafter from the twentieth day of March to the thirty-first day of December in each year shall be set apart, kept and reserved for the exclusive use and accommodation of canal boats and barges engaged in the business of transporting property on the Hudson River "NORTH OF CASTLETON," or coming in tide water from the canals of the State, arriving in said city from the city of Albany or any port or place north or west thereof, and for the use of lighters in loading or unloading such boats or barges; "and no lease shall be made of any of the piers, wharves or bulkheads included within said boundaries that shall permit the use thereof during the period above specified, otherwise than for the lying at, loading or unloading such canal boats and barges, and for the accommodation of merchandise unloaded from or to be unloaded thereon."

Such a law would be particularly injurious to the dealers in building materials, but also to those engaged in trucking coal and some other supplies. President Howland, of the Association of Dealers in Building Materials, says it would close the water front for materials such as members of this Association handle, from Clinton st to the Battery on the East River, and from the Battery to 9th st on the North River, necessitating the hauling of heavy trucks long distances, at uncalled-for expense.

Points on the Material Market.

No banquet of the New York Lumber Trade Association will be held this year.

A slight increase of inquiries for lumber is noted, but in general, as the Lumber Trade Journal says, business is primarily of the hand-to-mouth order in local retail yards. Prices remain stationary on all classes of lumber.

The twenty-third annual convention of the New Jersey Lumbermen's Protective Association met at 842 Broad st, Newark, on Feb. 25, morning and afternoon. The morning session was for members only. After the afternoon session there was a banquet.

The National Oak Flooring Manufacturers' Association was organized at Cincinnati, at the Business Men's Club, on February 7. The only difference in the rules for grading adopted from those of the National Hardwood Lumber Manufacturers' Association is in the one word, "practically." In the rule of the flooring men the word "practically" is inserted in the description that clear "shall be practically free from defects," etc., instead of "shall be free," etc., as in the Hardwood Lumber Manuacturers' rules. M. B. Farrin, of Cincinnati, was elected president, and W. S. Starrett, of the same city, secretary-treasurer.

The National Hardwood Manufacturers' Association has elected the following officers: President, John B. Ransom, Nashville, Tenn.; first vice-president, Frank F. Fee, Little Rock, Ark.; second vice-president, John H. Himmelberger, Morehouse, Mo.; treasurer, C. M. Crawford, Coal Grove, Ohio. For the Executive Board: W. M. Ritter, Columbus, Ohio; Clinton Crane, Cincinnati, Ohio; C. M. Crawford, Coal Grove, Ohio; R. H. Vansant, Ashland, Ky.; G. E. W. Luehrmann, St. Louis, Mo.; William Wilms, Chicago, Ill.; C. R. Lamb, Minneapolis, Minn.; W. A. Gilchrist, Memphis, Tenn.; R. M. Carrier, Sardis, Miss.; John W. Love, Nashville, Tenn.

Fire Insurance from an Economic Standpoint

By P. B. ARMSTRONG.*

ABOUT once every five years some prominent group of building owners of New York City arise in righteous indignation over the excessive cost of fire insurance, but invariably fail to present any statistical matter, based upon the official returns by which they prove conclusively that they are grossly over-charged in the cost of their fire insurance.

It is not surprising that they are not familiar with the details as to the premiums paid and the losses sustained because all of these matters are compiled by the insurance companies themselves and are not given to the insuring public.

P. B. ARMSTRONG.

Neither are these building owners aware of the aggregate premiums paid by them as a whole, nor the percentage of expense that is placed as a tax upon their premiums except in a general way.

In order that they may be thoroughly informed in these matters, it can be stated as a fact that MORE THAN 50 PER CENT. OF THE PREMIUMS PAID FOR THE INSURANCE OF BUILDINGS ON MANHATTAN ISLAND AND THE BRONX IS ABSORBED ANNUALLY IN EXPENSES IN THE MAINTENANCE OF AN AGENCY SYSTEM THAT IS WHOLLY UNNECESSARY AND WHICH WOULD BE ABOLISHED IF GOOD COMMON SENSE PREVAILED.

The premiums paid for insurance on Manhattan Island and the Bronx amounts to more than $20,000,000 per annum. The average fire loss for the past 10 years has absorbed not over 27 per cent., which percentage has held good for the past 40 years.

According to the official returns made by all companies to the New York Board of Fire Underwriters, the premiums paid for fire insurance for the six months ending July 1, 1907, amounted to $11,559,200.48. To this there can be safely added 10 per cent. for insurance placed in non-represented companies $1,155,920.05, making the aggregate premiums paid therein for the past six months $12,715,120.53, which makes the aggregate premiums paid for the past six months more than sufficient to pay the entire fire losses for two full years. In other words, the insuring public of New York City has paid $4 in premiums in order to get back $1 in fire losses.

What is far more important to the building owners than this lies in the fact that taking every specific fire loss that has occurred in the City of New York say for the past twenty years, according to the returns to the New York Board of Fire Underwriters, it is found that the average fire loss upon buildings is less than 10 per cent. as much as it is upon contents. Therefore if there has been a loss of 27 per cent. upon general property, theoretically at least, there has been a loss of less than $2.70 on each $100 of premiums paid on buildings. Taking into consideration the deviation of rates between buildings and contents, the loss upon brick buildings could in no event absorb in excess of $5 out of each $100 of premiums paid by the building owners on such buildings.

This should prove conclusively that the present system of fire insurance is not so adjusted as to admit of the building owners procuring their insurance at approximately first cost. In order to make it more plain to these building owners that gross injustice is being done to them, it is only necessary to show the manner in which the fire loss, by reason of modern building laws has been reduced.

The following is a copy verbatim from the official report of the Committee on Fire Patrol to the New York Board of Fire Underwriters, showing the percentage of loss for the ten years ending Dec. 31, 1891, and the ten years ending Dec. 31, 1905:

Average fire loss for second decade, 3,393%.

Therefore it will be seen that the fire loss on buildings for the last decade was but a fraction over one-third as much as it was during the earlier decade, and still each and every building owner is perfectly conscious that he is paying more for his insurance to-day than ever before, instead of paying at the maximum one-third as much.

The writer has been engaged in the business of fire insurance for a period of forty years, and a greater portion of that time in an official capacity, and is therefore competent to state that the most rank form of injustice is being perpetrated upon the building owners, especially of New York City, through the present system of fire insurance.

It is antiquated and out of date, but the remedy is in the hands of the building owners themselves. Its expense ratio is outrageous, as is also the percentage of fire loss that is charged to these building owners.

The brick, stone and iron buildings of New York City, including Greater New York, should be insured in a class by themselves, and the expense chargeable to these building owners should be limited to a maximum of 15 per cent. of the premiums paid, instead of say 50 per cent. as they are now charged with.

The profits of the business should be divided into four parts, of which three parts should go to the policyholders and one part to the stockholders.

By this means the policyholders would receive their insurance at a net cost of about one-third as much as they are obliged to pay to-day, through the present system of fire insurance, and must continue to pay so long as the present system prevails.

The building owners of Manhattan and Bronx pay annually more than $10,000,000 for fire insurance on their buildings alone. Therefore if the building owners themselves were to organize a company of their own, and confine its insurance to brick, stone and iron buildings, to the exclusion of their contents, they would effect a saving of more than the capital invested once every six months.

On the other hand, by means of the economy effected under the plans herein outlined, the stockholders of such company would receive many times the compensation for the capital invested that the present system of fire insurance will admit of.

Building Operations.

Building Outlook in the Hoboken Tunnel District.

Plans are under way by a syndicate of Jersey City real estate operators for the early erection of a number of high-class apartment houses, to be situated near the entrance of the new Hudson River tunnels at Hoboken. According to press reports, half a million will be spent in the construction of four or five buildings of this character, each costing from $75,000 and up. Many new operations are under way, and it seems reasonable to attribute that the west bank of the Hudson will see a great building boom this spring. A large office building and hotel combined is being planned by Architect Kenneth M. Murchison, 320 5th av, Manhattan, to be constructed at the entrance to the McAdoo tunnel and the Lackawanna ferry terminal at Hoboken, to cost in the neighborhood of $200,000. The Hoboken Land and Improvement Company, owner of the site, is to make the improvement. The proposed structure is to be of brick construction, with limestone trimmings, to cover a plot 85x120 ft. Test borings for the foundations have been made, and according to the plans the structure will be the most complete building of the kind in Hudson County, and will equal many of the modern New York hotels. At the southwest corner of Lewis st and New York av, Union Hill, a handsome new theatre building will be built this summer by the Haas Amusement Company. The old frame buildings are now being demolished. Architect E. E. Quaife, Jersey City, has just completed plans for two apartment houses to be erected by Henry Schumacher, of 10 Gates av, on the northwest corner of Ocean and Lembeck avs, to cost about $50,000. At Erie and 14th sts, the Board of Finance (Oliver H. Perry, chairman) will erect a public bath, for which $80,000 has been appropriated. Plans have already been prepared by Geo. W. Van Arx, 15 Exchange pl, Jersey City. At West Hoboken the Congregation Beth Jacob has purchased from the First Presbyterian Church of West Hoboken property at the southeast corner of Clinton av and Hague st, for a synagogue. The North Hudson Hospital Association, Weehawken, N. J., Herman Walker, chairman, will receive plans in competition for the construction of a modern fireproof hospital building at Weehawken. The Mount Sinai Congregation, Jersey City, will erect a new church, for which Architect Cicarelli, Second National Bank Building, Hoboken, is preparing plans, and on the block bounded by 26th and 27th sts and Avs D and E, the Board of Education, Jersey City, will erect a new public school.

Hoboken to Have Skyscrapers on the Water Front.

Hoboken is to have other skyscraper warehouses on the water front similar to the one now in course of construction by the American Trading and Warehouse Company on the tract at the foot of 12th st. It is the intention of the company to practically cover their tract with these skyscrapers, and the skyline of Hoboken will be very substantially changed by the improvement. Of the ultimate eleven stories of the first warehouse, nine have already been completed. Rodatz & Co., of Chicago, are doing the work. The new company, which is controlled by Chicago capital, will operate its warehouses in conjunction with the new Hoboken Manufacturers' Railroad, and special tracks have been built to join the Hudson st tracks with the continuation of the line on River st. It is said that the new company and the Hoboken Land & Improvement Co. are the two owners of the new road. The system of new docks which the company intends to build has not yet been started, but it is believed that they will be built at once, and will be very extensive.

The Week.

The real estate market showed considerable improvement during the week just past. Not so much in the actual number of sales consummated as in the feeling generally felt in offices of brokers. There are more inquiries reported, offers nearer to the asking price received, and consequently the chance of deals going through is far brighter. Several men who have been in the real estate business for years have expressed their surprise at the firmness of realty prices. One of them said the other day: "I have always had the greatest respect for Manhattan realty as an investment. I always thought that it was the safest place in which to invest capital. Today I am more so than ever. That there was not a serious slump in prices convinces me absolutely that I am not alone in my belief. I will take this class of investment every time."

Among the residences sold was 107 East 37th st, a 4-sty high-stoop house about 125 ft. east of Park av. This property is in the Murray Hill section. The side streets east of this avenue are being gradually acquired for high-class residences. The old buildings are being remodeled and brought up-to-date. People realize that this location is very central. It is convenient to the business as well as the shopping district. Prices have materially advanced during the past few years. The 4-sty dwelling, 51 East 53d st, also changed hands. The new owner is going to occupy it. It is on a lot 20x100. There were several houses disposed of in 131st st. The 5-sty triple flat, 53 East, 25x100; the 3-sty dwelling, 161 West, 16x99.11, and the 3-sty and basement residence, 210 West 131st st, changed to new owners.

The Columbian Realty Co. sold the Jermyn apartment house, on the southwest corner of Broadway and 61st st. This property was acquired in a trade for the entire square block, Broadway, St. Nicholas av, 171st and 172d sts, last November. This last mentioned property has since been purchased by Mrs. Elizabeth S. Potter, the wife of Bishop Potter. Charles F. Stoppani is reported to be the name of the new owner. Several sales were closed in the Washington Heights section. The northwest corner of Fort Washington av and 177th st, 50x100, vacant, was sold to a builder, who contemplates erecting a 6-sty apartment house. This property was held at $35,000. The 5-sty triple apartment house, 552 West 184th st, 40x99.11, went to an investor. The 4-sty brick building, 421 5th av, on the southeast corner of 38th st, 25x100; this property was bought from the Anderson estate by Mr. Isman, the present seller.

The Bronx contributed among other sales a trade which involved 1709 Bathgate av, a 5-sty triple flat, 37.6x114. In exchange a vacant plot, 32.6x100, on the northeast corner of Grant av and 165th st and the northwest corner of Sheridan av and 163d st, 69x100.5, were given. A number of flats and apartment houses found new owners in that section north of 59th st.

There were a number of good-sized mortgages recorded during the week. The Fleischmann Realty & Construction Co. gave one for $300,000 for three years from Feb. 1, bearing interest at 6%, to the Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., covering the following properties: Jerome av, 2386 to 2410; 7th av, northeast corner 146th st, 40x100; 7th av, southeast corner 146th st, 40x100; 7th av, northwest corner 144th st, 199.10 to 145th st x100; 8th av, southeast corner 145th st, 40x100; Charlotte st, 1503 and 1505, 75x100; Wilkins av, 1458 to 1462, 112.6x100; 147th st, 283, 25x99.11; Jerome av, southeast corner Kingsbridge road, 260x irreg; Clinton pl, Davidson av, 181st st and Grand av, the block, 200x200, and Andrews av, east side, about 513 ft. north of 183d st, 25x100.

Linda L. Thomas gave a mortgage to the Lawyers' Realty Co. for $140,000 for three years on the property, 17 West 57th st, 25x100. This mortgage bears interest at 5½% until Feb. 21, 1909, and at 5% thereafter until due. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. loaned to the 130 West 57th Street Co. $475,000 on the property, 80x100, at that address, where a new apartment house is being erected. The mortgage runs for 2½ years at 6% per annum.

The Hudson Navigation Co. received a loan of $4,000,000 from the Union Trust Co., of Albany, as trustee, on the property in Hudson st, south side, extended at bulkhead line of Hudson River, running south along bulkhead 131 ft. by 180 ft. east to the west side of West st by north 130 ft. to the south side of Hoboken st. This loan covers also all rights to wharfage; also that pier or bridge built on piles between Hoboken and Watt sts, opposite to a portion of the bulkhead just described. The pier extends west 715.6 ft. to pier head line and has a width of 64.11 ft., being part of the pier, new number 32, old number 41, with rights to wharfage; also water lots subject to payment to City of New York of $1,000 per annum; also the leasehold property described as being land under water, between outer end of the pier 32 as established in 1897; also steamships owned by this company. This is a trust mortgage and due Feb. 1, 1938, and bears interest at 6%. Charles W. Morse is interested in the Hudson Navigation Co.

The total number of mortgages recorded for Manhattan this week was 120, as against 146 last week, and in the Bronx 80, as against 118 last week. The total amount involved is $6,395,336, as against $3,154,479 last week.

The total number of sales reported is 56, of which 9 were below 59th st, 30 above, and 17 in the Bronx. The sales reported for the corresponding week last year were 159, of which 55 were below 59th st, 75 above, and 29 in the Bronx.

THE AUCTION MARKET

The week just past was vastly important from an auction standpoint. A small number of parcels were offered at forced sale, and most of those sold went to the plaintiffs and parties in interest.

At the stand of Joseph P. Day, on Wednesday, however, several properties were put up at voluntary sale. The 5-sty tenement, 76 St. Marks pl, located 100 ft. west of 1st av, 25x97.6, was purchased at private sale. This property was advertised by the order of the executors of the estate of Nicholas Schultz. The estate of Jacob Meyer sold 29 East 63d st, a 4-sty brownstone front dwelling, 20x100.5, to George C. Franciscus, for $50,500. This house is about 120 ft. east of Madison av. Charles D. Morrison purchased for $24,000 the 3-sty stone front dwelling, 223 West 78th st, on a lot 20x102.2. The property, 36 Grove st, was knocked down to Laura Opper for $14,000. This is a 3-sty dwelling, 21x100. The 5-sty flat with store, 4218 3d av, was bid in at $24,950. The size of the plot is 25x93.5x24.11x91.10. The parcel, 2415 Arthur av, was sold at partition sale, Ernest Damiane getting it for $3,525. It is a 2-sty frame dwelling, 25x113.

At the same stand, on the same afternoon, 413 and 415 East 123d st, two 3-sty dwellings, 37x100, were purchased by Gerard Kuehne, Jr., for $13,000. This was Supreme Court sale. The amount due was $12,713.98; taxes and other charges amounting to $163.34. The Landlords' Realty Co., representing a party in interest, purchased 26 West 140th st, a 6-sty flat, 41.8x99.11. The price paid was $43,462. The amount due was $14,316.91; taxes, $742.49; subject to a first mortgage of $37,000. The adjoining house on the west, a similar structure, was sold to the same people for a like amount.

There was present on Thursday the largest gathering the salesroom has held for a long time. It is questionable whether the rooms in Vesey st have ever held at one time a greater number of people anxious to purchase. The great majority of those in attendance were from Brooklyn. The sale of the Wright estate was the attraction. It was noticeable that many of the usual frequenters of the room were not present, but their places were taken by women and those interested in Brooklyn realty. There were six Manhattan properties offered. With the exception of one parcel, they brought good prices. The structure in question was 14 and 16 Vandewater st, a 5-sty and basement building. The building is at the present time occupied by a lithographer and a printer. The gross rental is $6,820. The price paid for it was $48,500. The size of the plot is 51.9x110x39.10x123.11. The 3-sty building, 181 Prince st, about 25x95, was knocked down for $17,300, after spirited bidding. A 3-sty building occupied by a junkman, 455 West 28th st, 25x49.4, brought $9,100. There was some rivalry among those anxious to buy 9 Bleecker st. This is also a 3-sty building, about 20x49. The purchase price was $16,600. Pearl st was also represented when 280 was put up for sale. This is a 4-sty with attic and basement brick building, electric elevator. The lessees pay $1,800 a year rent. The size of the plot is 19.9x89.10x irreg. The price paid was $21,325. The storage warehouse, 208 East 52d st, was the last Manhattan parcel to be sold. It is a 4-sty and basement brick fireproof building. The first floor is used as a stable. The property is about 20x100.5. It is leased to Jan. 1, 1914, at $1,600 per annum. The price paid was $19,000.

The amount involved in the auction sales this week was $1,568,056, and since January 1, $9,554,305. Last year the total for the week was $383,056, and from January 1, $4,675,230.

Manhattan Dwellings as an Investment.

Above all, this class of property is growing scarcer each year. The advance in land values in the heart of the city is increasing so that private dwellings of expensive construction are being torn down and the families moving into apartments which are being erected in their place, or the plot is being used for business purposes. Each day a prospective purchaser finds it more difficult to secure a desirable private dwelling.

ALFRED M. RAU.

This assertion is accentuated when one considers that during the past fiscal year less than fifty dwellings have been erected on the entire island of Manhattan.

The tenant who is seeking one has fewer to choose from and consequently must pay nearer the owner's figure or he is unable to secure one.

The houses still in existence in good sections are bringing larger returns on the investment than ever before, and considering that very little is being added to the lot value for the building when purchasing a private house, the structure itself is practically considered as being of no value.

There are numerous reasons why people should invest in private dwellings. It is easier for an owner without experience to control one private house than it is for him to run a flat. It is easier for the owner to collect one rental than twenty, which he would have to do in either a business property or an apartment house. In nine cases out of ten the owner to-day makes no repairs on private dwellings, the tenant now realizing that the entire running of a house rented by him must be borne by him. The municipal departments do not bother the owner or the tenant of private houses; their rules being far less stringent on this class of property than on any improved realty in the city. It is far easier to place mortgages on dwellings than on commodity or mercantile buildings, and above all the net return is fully as large and to-day in the heart of the city is greater than the return from apartment or business buildings.

The sale of a private dwelling is an easier matter to accomplish than the sale of an apartment or business building.

The return from these houses is indicated by an example of private dwellings in the vicinity of Empire Square, where the possibilities for advancement of values is as great as in any other section of the city, and where 17-ft. four-story houses are quickly taken up on a rental of $1,800 per annum, the tenant paying water and all repairs, where in 1906 the same houses leased for $1,500 per annum and in 1905 for $1,350 per annum, and where 20-ft. houses are to-day renting at from $2,000 to $2,200 per annum, while in 1906 the same houses were rented for $1,800 per annum and in 1904 at about $1,650 per annum, and in some cases where the houses are unusually well situated the rentals are fully 10 per cent. above the price here quoted.

Houses in this section are seldom vacant and the class of tenants improving steadily. There are no losses from tenants, as they are fully alive when renting houses to the fact that they must give good security for the full performance of their lease. The tenants fully realize this, as they see properties in their immediate vicinity being converted month by month for business or other uses and the lapsing of any lease shows them conclusively that the next tenant in the same building will probably be paying an increase of rental.

Houses in this section are being converted from time to time for business purposes by making small alterations, the cost of which is infinitesimal, while the increase in rental being as much as double in some instances. This is more fully accentuated in the scetion known as Long Acre Square, where any house that has been used as a private dwelling and is converted for business will bring fully fifty per cent. more than it has been returning as a private dwelling and where in addition to the advance in rental a big increase is yearly being felt in the price of the lots on which the houses stand.

Taking the rentals now prevailing in such sections as mentioned herein as a true basis for calculation the owners of such properties will receive an average return of ten per cent. per annum on the equity they own in such properties, without fear of their mortgages being in any manner top-heavy, so that they may be called or without the necessity of having their propertles encumbered with any second mortgages. In the event of the owner buying such properties for personal uses, such as conversion for his own business or as his home dwelling, he can get fully one-third more accommodation and will maintain the character of his household proportionately better than should he spend this same amount of money in an apartment.

Wright Estate at Auction.

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT SALESROOM IN VESEY ST.

The prices obtained at the Wright estate in the salesroom at 14 and 16 Vesey st were, as a whole, very satisfactory. There were all told thirty-eight parcels put up for sale. Of these six were in Manhattan and the rest in Brooklyn. In point of attendance there was a larger number present than at any previous sale. This was the opinion of several people who are regular attendants at sales of this character. It was noticeable the number of people present who were strangers to auction room sales. There was a large number of ladies present, attracted, no doubt, by the Brooklyn offerings. The amount realized by the sale was $372,750. The terms of sale allowed, at the option of the purchaser, as much as 65 per cent. of the purchase price to remain on mortgage for one, two or three years from March 31, 1908, at 5 per cent. Much of this property has been in the Wright family for fifty years, and one or two parcels were purchased in 1828. All the holdings were free and clear of mortgages.

The results of the sale were as follows: 181 Prince st, north side, 50 feet east of Sullivan st, 25.3x95.1x25x94.8 feet, 3-sty building, to Charles F. Farnolo for $17,300; 455 West 28th st, north side, 75 feet east of 10th av, 25x49.4 feet, 3-sty building, to W. Doyle for $9,100; 9 Bleecker st, north side, 125 feet west of Bowery, 20.1x60.10x20x60.3 feet, 3-sty building, to J. J. Campbell for $16,600; 14 and 16 Vandewater st, south side, 344.3 feet south of Pearl st, 51.9x123.11x39.9x110 feet, 5-sty business building, to R. L. Stated Prices Often Misleading.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide:

I do not favor the bill introduced by Senator Saxe, which, if enacted, would compel the insertion in deeds of the amounts of their consideration. This bill interferes with the privacy of a citizen, by compelling him to disclose matters which are strictly personal, and seems to be designed solely for the purpose of enabling the tax commissioners to correctly estimate the values of real estate for the purpose of assessing it for taxation.

Real estate is being continually bought and sold, and the purchasers and sellers are able in some way to discover its value, and to agree upon the contract price; and if they do, it is only fair to assume that the city, by paying proper salaries, and by employing competent men, can find persons who can reasonably discover and appraise the values of real estate in the sections within their jurisdiction.

The mere insertion in the deeds of the actual consideration paid in each case will often be misleading, and work an injustice to the owners of adjoining property if properties are assessed upon the basis of such sales. A number of classes of cases occur to my mind in which the actual considerations which would be expressed in the deeds under this law do not represent the true value of the property. I will, for convenience, divide these cases into classes:

First: Cases where a builder assembles a parcel of lots or several buildings for the purpose of a large improvement; the purchaser in such case will buy several of the lots or houses at a low or reasonable figure, and then to complete his plot he will buy the remaining piece from a reluctant vendor at an excessive price. The consideration expressed in the last deed might be construed by the tax assessor as the controlling consideration, and all values of similar property in that locality might be assessed on that basis, which would be unreasonably high.

Second: The plaintiffs at foreclosure sales often purchase property at much below its actual value, the public, knowing from the advertised notice of sale that the property is encumbered up to or above its real value, and that the plaintiffs will protect their interests up to the amounts due, do not enter the bidding. I have in mind a case where the property in question sold a year ago for $22,000, and was recently bid in by the plaintiff in foreclosure for $8,000, the amount due being about $14,000. There was no competition at that sale, and if $1,000 had been bid by the plaintiff for the property, it would probably have been knocked down to him at that figure.

Third: Trades or exchanges: In these cases, both parties are apt to have enhanced ideas of the values of their respective properties, and the deeds following such contracts of exchange contain considerations in excess of the real value.

Fourth: Purchases made for special reasons by corporations or individuals who require special sites or special plots, paying for such reasons excessive considerations. We may also place in the same class purchases by persons who are ignorant or indifferent as to the actual value.

In every year there is liable to be a sufficient number of transactions of the character enumerated in the foregoing classes to seriously vitiate the results which the appraisers might reach by an examination of the considerations expressed in the deeds. If they could and would seek out and discover the facts attending each sale, and would make due allowances for misleading considerations, they might, by comparing the results thus obtained with the remaining expressed considerations, form a fair opinion as to the value of the property in the area under consideration; but such a serious investigation cannot reasonably be expected. Moreover, the assessors are supposed to be acting in the interests of the city, and we can, therefore, fairly assume that in cases where there are several sales in the same neighborhood, they would either take the last sale, the highest sale, or else an average of several sales, so that by the introduction of the element of an excessive expressed consideration, an excessive assessment of all properties in that neighborhood would result.

As the proposed law appears to be based upon a false principle, and as its application might work unjust results, it does not seem that it should be enacted.

A Business Tax.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide:

All sorts of stones are thrown at Real Estate by the tax measures directed at it. How long is this to last without doing more harm than it has already done? A large city requires a large income, and there is a limit to the drain, which already reaches from 20 TO 35 PER CENT. OF THE GROSS INCOME OF THE AVERAGE PIECE OF PROPERTY. The nominal personal tax supplies very little of the means required to support the city. How can an income be secured other than from real estate and personal taxes? Easily enough: tax ANOTHER SOURCE WHICH CANNOT ESCAPE, namely, the gross sales of every business conducted in this city. The city of St. Louis has such a tax in force. It is more popular than the real estate or personal tax, because its cost is charged to business expenses, and in most cases a profit is made on it. The justice of the tax is evident when the city's large outlays for fire and police service, wear and tear of the pavements, and the number of other large incidentals caused by business are considered. During the Civil War the government collected a large sum of money by taxing sales, and the writer is positive that the collection of the tax was simple and was freely paid.

The City of New York's credit must be built up by increased income. Real estate is abused by onerous taxes because it cannot run away. Business cannot run away, either, and a reasonable tax on sales will produce a big income and hurt nobody. As I stated above, business, if taxed, will make a profit on the tax, just as it does on high duties. Relieve and lower the real estate tax by taking up this new source of revenue. Private capital should furnish the new subways—municipal ownership should die (the city can always demand and get a share of all new public utilities profits), business should be taxed (its life depends on the metropolis), and we will then again feel that the securities issued by this city are the best investments for everybody (speculators are the chief buyers now). REAL ESTATE.

Real Estate Board of Brokers' Dinner.

BROKERS FORGET ALL ABOUT "HARD TIMES" AT THEIR ANNUAL DINNER AT THE WALDORF-ASTORIA.

THE twelfth annual dinner of the Real Estate Board of Brokers was held at the Waldorf-Astoria on last Thursday evening. It was an occasion for jollification. Brokers were exceedingly busy before the dinner putting through sales and leases. As one broker remarked, "I wish I could collect the commissions on these 'dream deals' that are being closed tonight."

In point of numbers, all previous records were broken. Something over four hundred covers were set. A legislative binder was placed before each guest, which contained the menu, a pamphlet prepared by Professor Alfred G. Reeves on Land Title Registration, a list of the speakers and a photograph of the room, which was taken early in the evening.

The ballroom in which the dinner was served was arranged to represent the Senate Chamber at Albany. This was in honor of Gov. Hughes' appointment of the Torrens Commission, which reported favorably on that system, and also of the work accomplished by that Commission. The ices were served in little boxes, and on the cover of each box was a humorous slap at the suburban element. A signboard was in evidence displaying the legend "Lots for sale. No mosquitoes." The sorbets were to have been served in a small replica of the Singer Building, but, unfortunately, the models were not completed in time. These, however, are going to be furnished to the guests on request.

No real estate dinner would be complete without a sale of some kind. Last year, it will be remembered, the tables were laid out representing the streets of New York, and the lamp-posts were auctioned off. This year at the back of the guest table was a picture of the Singer Building, on glass. An electric light behind it showed it off to advantage. Joseph P. Day was elected, by acclamation, the auctioneer of the occasion. He cleverly gave some "brain impressions" and hypnotized the brokers. He pointed out all the advantages of the picture, not only as a work of art, but also as a souvenir. He chose to ignore the bidders personally, but recognized the section from which they came. Manhattan, Bronx, Long Island, Hoboken, Cherry Hill and Marble Hill were represented. Long Island Real Estate Exchange, represented by D. Maujer McLaughlin, received the coveted picture for the sum of $435. Humorous remarks were hurled at the auctioneer while the sale was going on. Information was asked. Are the taxes paid? What are the rents? How about the assessments? When will it be ready for occupancy? and many others, which livened things up considerably.

Mr. Francis E. Ward was the toastmaster. He introduced as the first speaker Hon. Patrick F. McGowan, president of the Board of Aldermen. The subject was the City of New York. President McGowan said he was heartily in favor of additional subways. He thought that the tunnel just completed was the best thing for Manhattan, as it would make New York "sit up and take notice."

Senator John J. Cohalan was also in favor of subways. He drew attention to the fact that the Bronx had from the beginning been opposed to the Elsberg law. He said that he had never met any real estate brokers. He lived in the Bronx. While the boom was in progress a few years ago the business of the borough was seriously interfered with. No one was willing to sell anything but real estate. In consequence a law was passed that only every tenth man in the borough could engage in that business.

Mr. Gage E. Tarbell, representing Long Island, spoke enthusiastically about that section. He stated that in his opinion Long Island would be the centre of the real estate movement of the next five years.

Mr. William G. McAdoo received an ovation when he got up to speak. He caused considerable merriment by remarking that he was "dee-lighted" to meet real estate men when he was not expected to give them a commission. He spoke with considerable earnestness about the building of tunnels by private capital and against municipal ownership. He gave several interesting facts about the construction of the tubes, among other things that 5,800 rings were used, each weighing 16 tons. He said the New York-New Jersey tunnel would never have been built had it been left to a State or municipality. The following named were present:

Tunnels and the Palisades.

PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATION ARRANGING FOR THROUGH CARS.

Arrangements are under way between the Grantwood Improvement Association and other civic bodies along its route for through car service by the Public Service Corporation from Fort Lee, Palisade, Grantwood, Hudson Heights and other towns along the Palisades whereby direct communication will be made with the McAdoo tunnel at Barclay st, Hoboken. Not only will this mean a saving of at least fifteen minutes time, but it will also be a material reduction in the cost of transportation, business men with offices in the vicinity of lower Broadway being able to reach their destinations at a cost of ten cents as against fifteen cents at the present time. The advantage to property owners in the Palisade section is so apparent that extra efforts are being put forth for an early consummation of this plan, and as thousands of people are served by the Public Service Corporation along its route, there is every reason to believe that through cars will be running within a very short time.

—If you were selling merchandise, you would know the selling price of every commodity. If you don't know the price of every parcel of real estate in your territory, you are possibly overlooking a bargain and commissions. The Real Estate Directory will put you in touch with the owner instantly.

The title of the property 826 and 828 Broadway was transferred by James C. Ewing to Amy H. du Puy, for a nominal consideration over a mortgage of $650,000. This sale was reported last week. The consideration was in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. Several Pittsburgh properties were given in exchange.

The Clynes Co., of Bayonne, N. J., last week closed a contract with Jacob R. Schiff, lawyer, of No. 320 Broadway, Manhattan, for sixty-seven acres of meadow land near the entrance of the new tunnel on the west side, involving about $30,000. They will develop the land at once and turn it into a desirable residential section.

A proposal has been received by William R. Willcox, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, from August Belmont to sell the Steinway tunnel to the city for $7,239,467. Mr. Willcox stated that the commission would give the matter immediate attention. The matter, however, will have to go to the Board of Estimate.

New York-New Jersey Tunnel.

It is impossible for anyone to correctly estimate the huge benefit to New Jersey real estate that will come directly from the opening of the tunnel which now connects that State with New York. Not only is there a saving in personal convenience to the passenger over the old mode of travel, the ferryboat, but also a great saving in time. The system is only partially in operation. That section from 6th av and 19th st to the station at the terminal of the Lackawanna Railroad is completed. The line is to be extended to 6th av and 33d st. Stations are being built at 23d and 28th sts. Another section will connect Fulton and Cortlandt sts with Jersey City. A third section is a line running from Jersey City to Newark, and the fourth section runs along the Jersey shore of the Hudson for a distance approximately a mile and a quarter, connecting the two Jersey terminals. This last section has stations at the Pennsylvania and Erie railroads and will handle much of their passenger traffic.

There are many features in this tube. The station platforms are broad and should amply accommodate the service that will be demanded from them. The cars are comfortable, having seat divisions so that every third or fourth passenger really occupies a corner seat. There are upright steel posts as well as straps for the accommodation of standers. There are centre as well as end doors, operated by the guard on the car platform. The cars are amply lighted by electricity.

It is hardly fair to criticize the service the first day. During the middle of the afternoon when traffic was light excellent time was made. In the evening hours, however, things were congested and delays occurred which undoubtedly will in the course of time be eliminated.

A NEW JERSEY DINNER.

The New Jersey-New York Real Estate Exchange is receiving a large number of membership applications. The next meeting of the Exchange is to be at its office, 141 Broadway, on Tuesday, March 3, and it is expected that a considerable increase in the membership will follow the action of the meeting.

At the annual meeting in January the constitution of the Exchange was amended so as to broaden the scope of the Exchange and make it a merchants' and manufacturers' association by making it possible for New Jersey business men, outside of those engaged in real estate operations, to be elected to associate membership. As a consequence, the representative business men in every field of industry are taking advantage of the opportunity offered them to join the Exchange.

The special committee in charge of the "New Jersey Dinner," of which Mr. Joseph P. Day is chairman, have engaged the Manhattan Hotel for Saturday, April 11, for that occasion. This dinner is primarily in commemoration of the opening of the McAdoo tunnel, and the guests of honor are expected to be Mr. W. G. McAdoo, president of the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company; Mr. W. G. Oakman, president of the Hudson Companies, and Mr. Charles M. Jacobs, chief engineer. At the same time this dinner is intended to be an event that shall signalize the beginning of a new era in the development of New Jersey, and for that reason it is to be designated "The New Jersey Dinner." Invitations are to be restricted to prominent representatives in the professional and industrial walks of life of that State.

An active campaign is to be inaugurated by the Exchange. President Otto Kempner has appointed the following committee chairmen for the standing committees for 1908, and has requested them to proceed energetically with the committee work:

Appraisals Committee, Joseph P. Day; Transportation Committee, Frank Stevens; Law, Legislation and Taxation Committee, William Jeffery; Public Roads and Improvements Committee, Wm. A. Lambert; Floor and Records Committee, Stuard Hirschman; Arbitration Committee, James A. Romeyn; Stock and Bond Listing Committee, W. W. Slocum; Publicity Committee, F. L. Vrooman, and Sociability Committee, F. M. Welles.

Carlo Dalmores Purchases Tenement.

Carlo Brin Dalmores, a tenor under contract with Oscar Hammerstein and singing at the Manhattan Opera House, took title to the 5-sty brick tenement 124 East 120th st. This house was sold to Mr. Dalmores by Giabattista Acciani, who acquired it from Max Borck on June 17, 1907. It is 25x100 and subject to a mortgage of $18,000. The assessed valuation of the property improved is $21,000. Mr. Dalmores has been in this country two winters. He has a contract calling for his appearance for the ensuing three seasons. The recent purchase certainly proves that he has confidence in the permanency of Manhattan realty. It evidently appeals to him more than real estate in France, his native country.

—D. C. Weeks & Son filed a lis pendens against the Tribune Building Association, to foreclose a mechanics' lien covering work on the enlarged Tribune Building on Nassau, Spruce and Frankfort sts. It is claimed by Eidlitz & Hulse, attorneys for the contracting firm, that a certain amount still remains unpaid, while the owners of the building dispute this statement and make a counter claim for loss of rentals through delay. This in turn is disputed by the contractors.

PROPERTY OWNERS' SECTION.

Victories of the Realty League.

One of the most influential unions of property owners in the city is called the Realty League. It has been successful in everything it has undertaken. From time to time, as matters arise affecting the interests of property owners, the Realty League has taken an active and aggressive part in representing realty interests.

The Realty League was incorporated under the Act provided for the incorporation of membership associations in the year 1902. The following persons were chosen as Board of Directors:

Alfred R. Conkling, Louis Ettinger, Cyrille Carreau, Charles Schnelle, Charles W. Kirby, Charles Brendon, John P. Leo, Hermann G. Friedmann, A. H. Mathews, Charles Buek, Carlisle Norwood, John D. Crimmins, Charles F. Noyes, J. Clarence Davies, W. E. D. Stokes, John C. R. Eckerson, Townsend Wandell.

The first president of the Realty League was Mr. Charles Buck, the well-known architect and builder, who was elected on the 14th day of November, 1902, and held office by re-election to the 6th day of February, 1907, when, declining to be a candidate, he was succeeded by the Hon. Alfred R. Conkling, who has large real estate interests and has had a valuable experience as a member of the Legislature and of the Board of Aldermen.

The Realty League originated and combined successfully the opposition to the attempts of a private fire-alarm company to install, at an extravagant price and an additional annual rent, a private system of fire-alarm signals; and this particular system was partly dependent for its success upon a permit from the Fire Department allowing it to connect its private system with the public system of the Fire Department, for which privilege it paid nothing into the City Treasury. The efforts of the Realty League were very largely resisted; there were public hearings before the Fire Commissioner and, when he revoked the permit, during the administration of Mayor Low, an appeal was taken to the Mayor, before whom large meetings were held and many speeches, pro and con, were made, resulting in the Mayor sustaining the Fire Commissioner.

COAL VAULT PERMITS NOT NECESSARY.

The League undertook the defense of a test case brought by the city claiming penalties for refusals to take out vault permits for the spaces under the stoops of American basement houses, which spaces open out into the cellars. The city claimed that all such spaces came within the ordinance defining what were vaults. Upon the trial of this case, which was strongly contested—the city's experts and many builders and architects testifying as witnesses—a justice of a Municipal Court decided in favor of the city, as had been anticipated would probably be the case; but, upon appeal to the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court, the decision was unanimously reversed and judgment entered against the city, from which no appeal was taken. Had the city succeeded in its contention, the result would have been that, for the space occupied by every coal chute and under every high or low entrance stop to a private dwelling in New York City, a permit would have had to be taken out and the city paid the regular rates for such space; and the right to use it would have been a mere license revocable at any time.

THE ELEVATOR CLUTCH.

When the Bureau of Buildings undertook to compel the installation of a safety clutch or device upon every elevator in the city, at the expense to each elevator of five hundred dollars, the Realty League, taking up the case for various of its members who had been served with notices to place such clutch upon their elevators, organized the opposition to the order of the Building Bureau, and, when the head of the Building Bureau refused to revoke this order, by appeal to the President of the Borough of Manhattan, had the head of the Building Bureau overruled and the order revoked.

In consequence of this attempt to force a patented article upon owners of buildings having elevators, the League secured an amendment to the Charter by which the same thing cannot again be even successfully tried.

In a suit brought against an owner for a penalty for refusal to comply with an illegal order of the Tenement House Department requiring the placing of a fire-escape upon a building, which attempt, upon the trial, counsel for the League openly denounced in Court as mere "graft," the defense was successful, and, thereafter, an order was obtained from the Court directing a cancellation of the lis pendens filed against the building; and, in the opinion by Justice Unger, it was held, in effect, that the thousands of lis pendens filed by the Tenement House Department against property, under similar circumstances, were illegal.

THE WATER-METER FIGHT.

In the more recent matter of the attempts of the Commissioner of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, to enforce the putting in of water meters in buildings where not required by law, the League has successfully resisted such attempts, and is now engaged in action to compel the cancellation of the so-called liens filed by that Department in favor of the plumbers to put in the water meters at most outrageously extravagant prices.

In addition to these matters, the League has taken an active interest in the matter of mortgage taxation, of general assessment for taxation and of the various matters affecting the interests of real estate owners, as they arise, and has thus far been successful in each thing that it has undertaken.

In each instance referred to in this article, the League has borne the major part of the expense, and, in no case, would it have paid any owner to have undertaken, by himself, what he obtained through his membership in the League and assistance in bearing his burden by the contribution and co-operation of all other members.

A Profitable Service.

SYSTEMATIC supervision as applied to the inspection of water meters is becoming more and more popular among property owners, and it is believed that when the merits of such a service are better understood few can well afford to be without its protection.

Most owners realize that each meter installed on their premises is an open account with the municipality and a liability whose quantity is unknown. All water passing through a meter from any cause is automatically registered and charged for, and although leaks may have been going on for long periods, detection is often rendered difficult except by an expert.

To have a skilled inspector visit your property at regular intervals, making a thorough examination of the water service from cellar to roof, noting the action of the meter, and inspecting every outlet which may mean waste, advising on the condition of the plumbing, and suggesting economies, must result in the saving of water and a consequent reduction in water bills. A statement in dollars and cents of the amount of water used through each meter is equally valuable as a service and a means by which an owner may make convenient comparisons.

The Water Supervision Company, of 3 Park Row, makes meter inspections and its charges for supervision are as low as six dollars per meter each year. It is the opinion of those who now use this kind of service that it is a highly profitable protection, besides relieving them of many petty annoyances. Among the prominent property owners and operators who have found meter inspections eminently satisfactory are: Thos. J. Stewart, of 1554 Broadway; Hudson Realty Company, of 135 Broadway; Weil & Mayer, 5 Beekman st; Schmeidler & Bachrach, 203 Broadway, and others.

A Stirring Appeal.

A circular of which the following is a copy is being sent out by the United Civic Associations of Manhattan and the Bronx:

CITIZENS OF MANHATTAN AND BRONX AROUSE!

Not One Dollar for Brooklyn Subways Unless Manhattan and the Bronx are Included.

The nineteen associations of the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, represented at the meeting held under call of the Association of Bronx Real Estate Brokers, January 14, 1908, adopted resolutions recounting in chronological order the events leading up to the present time in the traction situation, and made the specific demand that no money be spent upon the 4th av (Brooklyn) subway as an independent proposition, but that all available resources be used in beginning the construction of the Broadway-Lexington av route, with its extensions in the Bronx, and the Brooklyn subway, at one and the same time. In the preparation of plans alone for these routes the old commission had spent over a million dollars. We had made the demand that the roads be not leased until after completion, when their true value was known, but that contracts be let for construction alone—in like manner as it had been determined to construct the Brooklyn subway

We had pointed out that as the work progressed increased taxable values would provide the necessary revenue.

What Manhattan and the Bronx demand is the great trunk lines upon which over a million dollars have been spent for plans alone.

Eternal vigilance is the price of subways, and the United Civic Associations of Manhattan and the Bronx hereby call upon you to urge the Board of Estimate to appropriate money to begin the construction of the Broadway-Lexington av route, with its extensions in the Bronx, advertised last April, at the same time appropriation is made for the Brooklyn subway.

Respectfully, EDWARD POLAK,
CHARLES L. ULLMAN, Secretary. Chairman Committee.

Not One Dollar for Brooklyn Subways Unless Manhattan and the Bronx are Included.

A committee of creditors was recently appointed to go over the affairs of the sash, door and blind firm of Neufeld & Co., of the Brownsville section of Brooklyn.

Innovations in Lavatory Equipment.

More discriminating taste is now being shown in the selection of modern porcelain bathroom-equipment than at any time since the adaptation of that ware to lavatory purposes. Some of the recent improvements in this line deserve the highest praise for design and finish, but it is not often that we are able to present anything new in plumbing fixtures that embrace practicability with such good design and economy. In the plates herewith something more than novelty greets the eye. It seemed hardly possible that a departure could be made that would re-equip a bathroom, but this has been accomplished by The Kenney Manufacturing Co., 36 East 22d st, New York.

The writer had an opportunity of examining these goods at the show room of the above named company, and was happily accompanied by two of the leading plumbers of a neighboring city, who were on a visit here at the time. The first in the order is what the Kenney people call a composite Rondbath, which takes the place of the ordinary long tub, the foot bath and other peculiar designs which are sometimes used to equip bathrooms. This Rondbath is essentially one to be used in connection with a shower, but it seems so perfectly natural that two should go together, that while the Rondbath might answer every requirement as stated above, the shower is undoubtedly desirable.

This Rondbath is of luxurious design, and all features of it so well thought out that it leaves little to be desired. The inside measurement is 32 inches in diameter by 18 inches deep inside up to the overflow, and this area will give a pool of water of 54 gallons, making the pool large enough for an ordinary sized person to sit comfortably inside should he desire to do so. It will set in a space 36 inches square and because of its shape, that is being round, the waste can be placed at any point in the circumference. This Rondbath, as shown, is made of vitreous china and claimed by the designer to be the first of its kind ever attempted in manufacture.

The next is shown the faucetless lavatory. A plain, vitreous china slab with a bowl, and a duct coming through the material, and with the fixture concealed underneath, the handles protruding through the front apron. This, too, is an exceedingly desirable fixture, in that it gives the whole top surface of the lavatory for the use for which it is intended, and is not cluttered up by what would appear to be unnecessary faucets which require care during their entire life. This fixture is so arranged that it is convenient for the purposes of repair and accessible for every other purpose. Then, too, should one using it require water to be drawn fresh, it can be done by simply holding the glass or other vessel under the spout, which is part of the porcelain, and the whole structure is one of convenience, simplicity and sanitation. This lavatory is made in various styles and can be seen at the company's show room, both fixtures being under water to show their practicability.

A third feature of this modern bathroom is the well-known Kenney flushometer combination, which has had such a practical test for efficiency and durability for the past several years, and the present flushometer being of the 1907 model having such features as accommodates it to almost every condition of service working under a varying pressure, giving an ample flush to the bowl with 3½ gallons of water, and the cost of maintenance said to be very low indeed. But this fixture is so well known that it hardly needs a further description here.

Further observations in the above show room disclose another new feature in plumbing fixtures. This is a flushometer combination to operate by means of the seat. There are many styles of seat action water closet combinations, but each of them seem to be more or less inefficient, in that they are surrounded by cumbrous mechanism of various sorts that make it a problem for manufacturers to reach desired result. This fixture lends itself to use in public and private schools, public institutions, railway stations and terminals. When not in use the seat is raised.

All of the fixtures have many points of interest to the owner and plumber. They are economical without sacrificing plumbers' trade in any respect. The show room is a house of specialties—and specialties that are so closely blended with accepted fixtures that one may select a bathroom equipment and feel that he is getting something of a special nature in all particulars.

Bedford Park Taxpayers.

At a recent meeting of the Bedford Park Taxpayers' Association, a committee of three, consisting of Alford J. Williams, Max Just and Edward H. Kelly, was appointed to prepare the following petition and procure signatures thereto:

To the Honorable Board of Estimate and Apportionment:

The Bedford Park Taxpayers' Association herewith present to your honorable body a petition, signed by residents of the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx.

We respectfully request your honorable board to authorize and contract for the building and construction of the subway known as the Lexington av-Broadway-Bronx route.

All we ask is a "square deal," and in order to be fair to all the boroughs, we suggest and demand that you authorize the above route, and that its construction be carried on contemporaneously with the construction of the 4th av subway in Brooklyn.

We hereby call your attention to the fact that the assessed valuations in our section during the year have been increased 40 per cent. In consideration of which we ask you to give us the means of proper rapid transit, so that we can realize on our investments and meet our obligations to the city.

We further call your attention to the fact that the Bronx has received a smaller part of the improvements paid for out of the public funds, in proportion to the amount paid in taxes since consolidation, than any other borough.

The time is now drawing near when the Jersey tunnel will be in operation, and we fear that unless you authorize this subway at once, as proposed by the Public Utilities Commission (we cannot tolerate any further delay), you will deprive us of our tenants and thereby ruin our investments. This will be a great loss to the city for the reason that the increase in taxable valuations which will follow the completion of the Jersey tunnel will be contributed to by the people who move from New York. Their continued residence within the limits of the greater city can only be secured by proper transportation to the great home section of the Bronx.

The Public Utilities Commission, the body to which under the law of this State is given the power in the exercise of a sound discretion to select and adopt routes, has selected as the next to be built in Manhattan and Bronx the Lexington av-Broadway-Bronx route. We heartily concur in the selection made, and any interference or any obstruction to this plan in its main features we strenuously oppose.

We are not, however, opposed to such slight changes as your honorable body may suggest, provided they do not interfere with the plan in its main feature.

There is urgent need for the adoption of this route, and credit for its being adopted or the blame for its failure rests with you.

The people are aroused in this matter, and any delay or obstructive tactics will long be remembered.

The members of the Taxpayers' Association are earnest in their efforts in the indicated direction, and it is expected that many signatures to the petition will result.

Opposed to Subway on Lexington Avenue.

The House and Real Estate Owners' Association of the 12th and 19th Wards has placed itself on record as being strongly against the building of the Lexington av subway, and is doing all that it can to further the selection of the 1st av route, which has its unqualified endorsement.

The following is a copy of a letter sent by the Owners' Association to Mayor McClellan in relation to the subject:

To His Honor, the Mayor, and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment:

Gentlemen—In compliance with a resolution unanimously adopted at our last meeting, Friday, Feb. 14, 1908, we again desire to enter our protest against the building of an underground railroad on Lexington av, and ask for the adoption of Route No. 1 as laid out by the Rapid Transit Commission for the following reasons:

1. The property owners of Lexington av oppose the building of a subway in court, and no majority of consents could be obtained with an expense of over $10,000.

Many property owners on 1st av signed consents voluntarily.

2. Lexington av has many and heavy grades (at 102d st about 60 ft.), mostly rock to 156th st; cost, $30,000,000.

Newest estimate $65,000,000, with extensions.

1st av road from Battery to 172d st is without heavy grades or rock; cost, estimated by Mr. Rice, $28,000,000.

3. Lexington av (75 ft. wide), four tracks and stations on one level cannot be built without using private property.

1st av, being 100 ft. wide, will permit a four-track road on the same level.

4. Lexington av road is parallel for seven to eight miles with part of the present subway, New York Central Railroad, and Third Avenue Elevated Railroad, within 400 ft.

Expert railroad engineers, including Mr. Parsons, stated that 1st av is the most available route and the best for the future requirements of the city.

5. In Park av buildings were seriously damaged through blasting rock within 15 ft.; this will not occur on 1st av.

6. The new Delancey-Centre st subway would connect City Hall and Brooklyn Bridge with the 1st av subway, which would tap also nearly all East River ferries and bridges.

We sincerely trust that you will, in the interest of the future of the city, cause the selection of Route No. 1 (1st av), which will benefit the most densely populated part of Manhattan, and accommodate residents of the Bronx and Long Island City also.

Respectfully submitted,
(Signed) A. WIGGERS,
Chairman Committee on Subways.

Among other matters to which the House and Real Estate Owners' Association is giving earnest attention, are the several bills before the Legislature affecting real estate. Included in the number is the True Consideration Bill. In alluding to the proposed measure, Secretary Chas. H. Schnelle said that if passed it would work a harmful influence to property dealing, and for that reason his association had voted to disapprove the amendment.

Indignation in the Bronx.

Mr. John F. Steeves, of the Church E. Gates Co., presided at a citizens' meeting on Tuesday evening in the basement of the Tremont M. E. Church, under the auspices of the North Side Board of Trade. Addresses were delivered by Messrs. Olin J. Stephens, Judge Hall, James L. Wells, J. Harris Jones and Rev. A. E. Barnett. Resolutions to be presented to the Board of Estimate, the Public Service Commission and representatives in the Legislature, were read by Mr. Wells and adopted.

The sentiment of the meeting was that the citizens of the Bronx viewed with indignation the indifference to and neglect of their borough in the distribution of transit facilities. They favor the amendment of the Elsberg law, which law the North Side Board of Trade has never approved of. They are in favor of the Lexington-Broadway route, with branches in the Bronx, built one section at a time, if necessary, so that work may begin at once, more inducements to private capital to build and operate—or any reasonable arrangement that will produce rapid transit. They are in favor of third-tracking the Second and Third av elevated roads if necessary. The bill of the Allied Real Estate Interests was commended by some of the speakers as embodying principles which this Board of Trade has always contended for. Under the Elsberg law as it stands the Bronx can never have subways.

Mr. Jones prophesied that, if the Bronx did not get subway extension now, it would not for ten years longer. The general feeling was that Brooklyn was getting more than a fair share.

Getting and Holding Good Brokers.

Undoubtedly a serious question to the head of a real estate office is how to get and hold competent salesmen. The solution very obviously lies in making it easier for the salesman to do business than if he hired desk room somewhere. Note any of the offices where salesmen remain year after year, and invariably you will find that the records in that office are excellent. That is the secret of their holding good men. Also you will find the Real Estate Directory and the Record and Guide Quarterly is the basis of the system.

If your success is not as GREAT as it should be in this line, strengthen your records and show your salesmen how to use them. Watch these paragraphs for suggestions, and by all means install a service that costs very little and makes a real system possible.

MORTGAGES

NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows: The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given and the amount. The general dates used as headlines are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.

Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street, in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgages, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date.

The first date is the date the mortgage was drawn, the second the date of filing; when both dates are the same, only one is given.

Subscribers will find mortgages in this list with the wrong block number attached. The block number we give is taken from the instrument as filed.

Mortgages against Bronx property will be found altogether at the foot of this list.

February 21, 24, 25, 26 and 27.

THERE cannot be too many ways of escape from a burning school house. Circumstances arise in such a crisis which no architect and no building laws can forsee, to defeat all the usual precautions. Danger lurks at every doorway through which a large number of children are expected to find safety—at the foot of every flight of stairs, and at every turn in a crooked hallway. Double doors that should swing open are sometimes immovable, or only one side will open, and that is not enough. How many school doors in this country are locked during school honrs? The fire drill is sounded and the children are hurried down to their death, as at Collinwood this week—piled six and eight deep in the vestibule, aud there suffocated and burned. The exit was jammed by too many trying to pass out at once. These children had been exercised in a "fire drill" which ordinarily took them out by two divisions, for there were but two exits, and in this case the fire drill proved fatal, as it may in others where ample fire escapes are not provided. In New York it is proposed to construct no more exterior fire escapes, hut rely on incombustible stairways. The authorities should be very sure that these are not only absolutely fireproof, but also smoke-proof and panic-proof, and that there are twice as many provided as ordinarily there is need for. Most of the school houses in New York are unburnable, their doors swing outward and in none could such a holocaust as this happen. But there are other cities which have reason to fear that they have been taking too many chances with crooked halls, unprotected stairways and locked exits, and pntting too much dependence on the efficacy of fire drills when there is no fire. Rapid dismissal exercises are well enough when children see no smoke and flames, are not frightened, nor tripped and thrown down or otherwise confused. What may happen when one of the regular exits is blocked was terribly illustrated at Collinwood, where the classes were marched into a trap. In cases of serious fire one or more of the regular outways is nearly always shut off. Therefore numerous emergency exits should be provided, so that the smallest possible number of children will be sent to any one door.

MUCH was heard last year concerning the increase in the cost of building and contract work over the prevailing rates of ten years previonsly and occasionally some one paused to attempt a mathematical comparison, which was scarcely ever decisive. For the reason that methods of planning work, of handling materials and of directing working forces had changed, the totals, quotients and products of such computations rarely if ever gave a true answer. Building practice had so changed the relative standing of materials and their proportions in the building that even the best knowledge of price lists was of little assistance in making the comparison. Five years ago hullding costs had apparently advanced thirty per cent. for average work, yet first-class office buildings were actually being erected at that time at a cost only ten per cent. greater, which proved that there are elements and forces contributing to the construction of a building which cannot be represented in price lists and wage schednles. We cannot express in figures the higher skill with which engineers and architects now draw their plans and specifications, so as to produce equal or as good results for the same money; the time saved by builders through more expeditious methods of handling structural materials, or the interest money saved by the avoidance of labor strikes. The only place where one can discover what the actual per cent. of increase has been in the cost of building in the last decade is in the cost books of owners and general contractors, and even there account is not taken of all the elements and factors. The average taste is not satisfied to-day with what was passable in architecture and fittings awhile ago, and almost unconsciously requires costlier habitations. The prices of materials, metals and tools used in building and public works reached their highest level in December of 1906, since which time there has been a gradual decline; and except in the item of wages, building costs have returned to near the level of the year 1904, when conditions were considered very favorable for building after the long labor war of the previous year. In a group of twenty-seven building materials there was an average increase in 1906 as determined by government statistics of 9.6 per cent. over the preceding year, the largest advances being in lumber. Considering the large demand for materials, and the exceedingly prosperous condition of business, this was not then unreasonable and would have received no consideration if building money had continued easy. Conditions in the material market now resemble those which were prevailing at the opening of the year 1904, and the general expectations are still for a similar course of business during the current year.

THE Public Service Commissioners have asked the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company for definite information as to why the work of constructing the Westchester four-track electric railroad has been discontinued, when the construction will be resumed, and when the sections will be completed and operated. It is scarcely expected that there will be much satisfaction either to the Commissioners or the property owners along the projected line from the answer that will be received. President Mellen recently stated that until there shall come a final decision of the Court of Appeals sustaining the validity of the Westchester charter, or an approval of the Portchester Company's plan to build on the Westchester's route, "little progress can be made." So far as known, the decisions of the courts on the legal points involved in both cases have been adverse to the company, and the Board of Estimate is still under an injunction against giving its consent to the Portchester to change its route. The franchise which the City gave the Westchester company in 1904, to construct and operate its railway over certain streets in the Bronx, will expire on July 26th of next year, unless the road is then completed from the city line as far south as the Southern Boulevard and Westchester av. If Mr. Mellen set his forces right to work they could scarcely finish in time, and altogether the twin enterprises which promised to be the motive for a great real estate development in the Bronx seem to have almost faded out.

THE business interests of New Jersey are assured by Mr. Calvin Tomkins that their opportunity will not always be so pronounced as at present. Up to the opening of the Hudson River tunnel, New York did not, he says, appreciate the danger of the futnre competition of New Jersey, but now, with its better political organization, it will endeavor to create conditions in the outlying boroughs that will make residence and occupation there comparatively more desirable than in New Jersey. But as a number of years must elapse before these improvements can be made, Mr. Tomkins points out that the interim constitutes the opportunity of New Jersey for obtalning its initial advantage; and he therefore advises in a public letter, appearing in a Newark paper, a comprehensive development plan—with a view to its subsequent evolution—which would include the deepening of Newark Bay and the Hackensack and Passaic rivers for steamship terminals, these to be equipped with ample warehouse service and connected by rail with each other and with the general railroad lines; also to include boulevards, streets, park systems and the grouping of public buildings, having in mind a probable future consolidation of contiguous cities under the leadership of either Newark or Jersey City. Mr. Tomkins is looking none too far ahead if New Jersey is to receive the large and rapid accession in population which she expects, and with National and State co-operation in harbor improvements much could be accomplished in a comparatively short period in the way of making a really great port in Newark Bay and adjacent waters, which, on some accounts, as we can see, would be preferred to the facilities to be obtained in Manhattan and Brooklyn. We give prominence to the ambitious plan in order to make all the more clear to the mind of our Board of Estimate the wisdom of not long postponing the time when the woeful inadequacy of transportation lines in Manhattan and the Bronx will be overcome.

Fixed-Up Bondsmen.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide.

The letter of Mr. Guy B. Waite, in your issue of Feb. 9, in one point has considerable merit, i. e., "fixed-up bondsmen." We have heard of cases of this kind where bonds have been fixed up and the court has accepted fake bondsmen, and thus cheated honest contractors or material dealers. This should be stopped, as evils if allowed to continue never grow better, but worse; and I would propose that to avoid such a swindling game, whenever real estate bonds be given that the bonds be filed against the property named and become a lien or the equivalent of a mortgage against said property until the lien is finally discharged by an order of court; or if surety companies are given as bonds, the said surety company should be to the satisfaction of the plaintiff, because there are fake surety companies as well as fake bondsmen.

Another amendment should be put to this law that a contractor or a sub-contractor against whom a lien is filed should have the right to file a bond or give a surety company, the same as hereinbefore mentioned. It has been ruled by the courts that if a lien has been filed against a contractor or a sub-contractor he cannot give bonds. No one under the present law can give bonds but the owner. This is rather unjust. When the present law was passed I had the clause inserted that the owner, instead of putting up cash, which sometimes made a hardship on the owner of the property, could put up satisfactory real estate security. I had no idea then how it could be abused and I thoroughly agree with Mr. Waite that something should be done on this line to give the contractor or material men all the security that is possible without materially injuring others. Yours very truly,

RICHARD DEEVES.

Too Much Legislation and Agitation.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide:

We wish to record our protest against the passage of the Saxe bill now pending before the Legislature requiring that actual considerations paid for real property in New York, Kings, Queens and Richmond counties shall be expressed in deeds or certified to under oath to the Commissioners of Taxes and Assessments.

The only reason urged for this unjust and inquisitorial bill is that its passage will enable the tax assessors to act more intelligently. The Department of Taxes and Assessments under the able administration of Mr. Purdy is well organized to do efficient work, and we understand that the methods used by the department in appraising land and building values are those in use by the best real estate firms in the city in making appraisements. In addition, we are told that the tax assessors seek to and do obtain the most intelligent information from agents and brokers throughout the city, and we are of the opinion that they are in position to get at a fair valuation without this law.

We believe that general business, and especially real estate interests, are suffering to-day from too much legislation and agitation of every kind, and this particular law is so absolutely unnecessary and will, we believe, work in many cases such great injustice that we earnestly hope that, with your influence, those who feel as we do may be able to defeat it.

In this connection, we should like to inquire whether, if it is thought to be of so great importance to enact this legislation for the greater city of New York, it is not equally important to have it apply throughout the State, where the assessments are notoriously below the fair market value. The whole scheme will be used as a pretext for further increases in our assessments in this city—which are already ruinously high—as, of course, the assessors would be expected to increase the assessments whenever property was conveyed at an unusually high price, but never to reduce if the conveyance was at a very low price.

Of course, there is the old-fashioned idea that a man has a right to keep his private business to himself, if he chooses to do so, but possibly such ridiculous notions should not prevail at the present day.

Realty Investments by Fire Insurance Companies.

THE AMOUNT OF MONEY INVESTED BY TWENTY-FIVE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN REALTY AND ON BOND AND MORTGAGE.

It has frequently been remarked that the fire insurance companies lend but a small fraction of their assets on real estate and that they invest even a smaller amount in realty holdings. To find out just how true this statement is, the Record and Guide sent requests to 56 companies for their annual statement for 1907. Replies were received from 25 of these, which were found to be of three classes: (1) Those companies which neither loaned on nor purchased realty; (2) those which purchased real property, but did not loan on mortgage and (3) those which both bought and loaned money on real estate.

Out of the annual statements received, four companies have no money invested in real estate, or in mortgages. The companies are the Palatine Insurance Company, of London; Northern Insurance Company, of New York; American Central, of St. Louis, and the Federal Insurance Company, of New Jersey. These companies have aggregate assets amounting to $11,372,118.70.

Statements from six companies show very small holdings of realty. No money out on bond and mortgage. In most cases they are confined to their home offices. The companies in question are the Phenix Insurance Company, of Brooklyn, which has $58,000 invested; the Caledonian Insurance Company, of Scotland, which has $525,000 invested; Providence Washington Insurance Company, of Providence, $200,000 invested; Commercial Union Assurance Company, of London, $888,000 invested, in New York and Philadelphia; German Insurance Company, $750,000 invested, and the Westchester Insurance Company, $8,716.25. These companies have $2,429,716.25 in real estate and have assets aggregating $28,822,656.14.

Fifteen companies sent in annual statements showing that they had invested a portion of their assets in both realty and on mortgage. The Spring Garden Insurance Company, of Philadelphia, has in real estate $47,768.54, on mortgage $130,398.43; the United Fireman's Insurance Company, of Philadelphia, in real estate $141,450, on mortgage $208,332; the Fire Association, of Philadelphia, in real estate $372,100, on mortgage $1,617,109.99; the Pennsylvania Insurance Company, in real estate $144,500, on mortgage $252,350; the Sun Insurance Company, in real estate $271,000, on mortgage $50,000; the German-American, in real estate $958,692, on mortgage $282,426; the Buffalo German Insurance Company, in real estate $337,000, on mortgage $380,700; the Queen Insurance Company, on mortgage $71,000; the Continental Insurance Company, in real estate $1,009,000, on mortgage $353,700; the Security Insurance Company, in real estate $50,000, on mortgage $123,355; the Williamsburgh City Insurance Company, in real estate $108,929.76, on mortgage $584,600; the St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Company, in real estate $269,085.21, on mortgage $617,360; the Northwestern National Insurance Company, in real estate $220,000, on mortgage $988,674.44; the Boston Insurance Company, in real estate $48,000, on mortgage $1,268,100, and the Springfield Fire & Marine Insurance Company, in real estate $350,000, on mortgage $977,070.

These fifteen last mentioned companies have the sum of $4,327,525.51 invested in real estate, and $7,995,175.86 placed on mortgage. The assets of these companies amount to $86,536,414.

The total assets of the twenty-five companies is $126,731,188.84. The total amount placed on real estate bond and mortgage is $7,995,175.86. The total amount invested in real estate is $6,757,241.76.

Against Senator Grady's Fire-Escape Bill.

The Harlem Property Owners' Association is giving its attention at this time to the several bills before the Legislature affecting the interests of the real estate owners. Among those favored by that organization are Assembly Bills Nos. 708 and 737, as well as No. 494, which refers to exemptions and executions. The association also favors Senate Bill No. 210, amending Section 10 of Article 8 of the constitution in relation to docks and railroads. It strongly opposes Senator Grady's bill No. 424, affecting fire escapes, and is also directing its influence against the passage of Assemblyman Wright's bill No. 118. Dr. Abraham Korn, president of the Harlem Association, in speaking of legislative matters, said that he hoped all property owners would labor unceasingly until the Grady bill is killed. "This bill is the most outrageous measure against real estate ever introduced," he argued.

How to Know Who is Selling.

A prominent 5th av broker, whose initials are M. C., said the other day: "The list of property owners in the Real Estate Directory is invaluable. If we ever hear of a property being sold, we look at once to see whether the seller owns any in a locality in which we are interested. That method has given us more cheap property than any other."

TERMINAL BUILDING OFFICES

Southeast Corner of Park Avenue and 41st Street

LOCATION THE TERMINAL BUILDING is in the heart of the uptown business district; opposite is the Grand Central Station—the terminal of the New York Central, the New York, New Haven and Hartford and the Harlem Railroads. At hand is the express station of the Subway, which is also the terminus of the Belmont Tunnel to Long Island City. Passing the door are the Madison Avenue and the 42d Street Crosstown surface lines, with cars running direct to Brooklyn and to the ferries at the foot of West 23d Street, East 34th Street and West 42d Street, with their important railroad connections.

CONSTRUCTION The building is twelve stories and basement in height and absolutely fireproof. It contains all modern improvements, including high-speed Otis elevators and its own power plant.

LIGHT Light and air are exceptional, owing to the width of Park Avenue, the size of the south court and the north exposure on 41st Street.

RENTING The building will be ready for occupancy April 1, 1908, although leases are being dated from May 1st, and no rental charged until that date. Several tenants are already in their offices. The exceptional location, light, service and businesslike arrangement and construction of the building are so attractive to those interested in the Building Trade that about seventy per cent. of the space already leased is to Architects, Builders, Consulting Engineers, Real Estate Brokers, etc. A large proportion of space is already gone. The rentals asked are exceptionally low for the advantages offered. Leases include light, heat and complete office service. The Renting office is in the building and information concerning rates, space, etc., may be obtained there.

Too Many Expensive Houses Built.

Based upon the hypothesis that the people are going to be more prudent and economical from now on, the current supposition is that the average builder of dwellings will necessarily confine his operations this spring to houses of lesser cost. In fact several large suburban builders who heretofore produced houses ranging in cost from $10,000 to $15,000, incline to the belief that, in order to do business at a profit, a much smaller house must be built. In alluding to the situation, a prominent Flatbush builder said during the week:

"The truth of the matter is there are more expensive dwellings in the market for sale than purchasers. Such a condition as now exists is discouraging to the building fraternity, and I for one intend to build a lower priced house, which surface indications lead me to reason can readily be marketed at from $5,500 to $6,500."

There are five men who can afford to buy a five-thousand dollar house for every one man who can afford to buy one costing ten thousand. It would therefore seem wiser to appeal to the larger number.

Twelfth Ward Bank Releases Deposits.

Evidence of the improved condition of the banking situation was manifested by the announcement of the Twelfth Ward Bank to its depositors. This announcement stated that the directors had released the retained balances which the depositors had agreed to leave until March 20. This action on the part of the directors is certainly encouraging and points to restored confidence.

Society of Architects and the Tenement Law

At the last monthly dinner and business meeting of the Society of Architects of Brooklyn, Louis Berger, president, at the Imperial in Fulton st, among the important matters discussed were two bills introduced into the Legislature at the request of the United Real Estate Owners' Association of New York, with whom the Society of Architects have been in conference for several weeks past. The first of these bills, to be slightly amended by suggestion of the society, provides for a commission on appeal, consisting, for the City of New York, of five members, to whom appeal may be made from decisions of the tenement-house commissioner. One member is to be the tenement house commissioner, the other four members to be appointed by the Governor, with the consent of the Senate. The second bill, as proposed to be amended by the advice of the society, relates to occupancy of basements in tenement houses. Complaint is made that the arbitrary enforcement of Section 97 of the Tenement House Act as it stands is resulting in the expulsion of many poor tenants, and inflicting great hardship and suffering on mechanics as a class. It is proposed to amend subsection 5 of Section 97, as applicable to basements only, by allowing the occupancy of a room if either opening by sash window to the outer air or connection by similar sash window with a room having a window opening to the outer air.

The society, while expressing sympathy with the real estate owners in their efforts to secure a liberal construction of the law as it stands, and such amendments of its provisions as appear necessary or advisable, declined to commit itself to any measure not strictly within the province of architects as such. At the same time every effort will be made by members of the organization, both individually and collectively, to secure the passage of the two bills named.

Off to Europe to Study Mortgage Conditions.

Frank Bailey, vice-president of the Title Guarantee & Trust Company and president of the Realty Associates, sailed for Europe to-day on the "Mauretania" for a brief trip in England and France, during which he will combine business with pleasure to the extent of a study of foreign systems of lending on real estate, with especial reference to the small holder, home owner and builder.

Mr. Bailey said with reference to this subject: "After an experience of some twenty-two years in lending money on bond and mortgage in Brooklyn, I am convinced that because of Brooklyn's position in the metropolitan district that a reform—no, I will not use that word, because it is a discredited word at the present time, but a change—is needed in the scheme of lending, in order to afford a better opportunity for the man of small means to acquire ownership of his home and not be in danger of losing it, excepting through his own fault.

"In the Borough of Manhattan there are practically no small homes. The territory, therefore, for the new home construction is in Kings and Queens counties. If the small home owner could at the present time borrow money at the same rates paid by the large borrower and be in no danger of having to replace his mortgage every three years, the amount of home construction would increase very rapidly. There is no social change which could be better for New York City as a whole than to increase the number of its home owners; but when the home owner is met with the condition that he cannot borrow money excepting from private individuals and from a few savings banks, and must be subject as a whole to the whim of the individual who may call in his mortgage when money is tight, he becomes timid when he finds the experiences of his friends about starting to own a house, unless he has the capital in hand to pay for it.

"If Brooklyn were over on Manhattan Island, the borrowing capacity of that property, even at the same prices, would be largely increased, for Brooklyn being merely an appendage to Manhattan, its great lending institutions and its own capital is largely in the larger borough.

"An increase in the number of small home owners not only in Manhattan, but through the State, would do much to improve the character and conservatism of the voters, and thereby capital as a whole is gained. While attempts have been made to create better tenements, that is only the first step towards the improvement of the individual. The next step must be the creation of a desire for a home and affording men an opportunity to own a home.

"In France they have a system of lending money on bond and mortgage by which the rate of interest is nearly uniform for the small proprietor, and where he is not compelled to pay the principal, but to reduce it very gradually, so that in the end the home is owned free and clear by its occupant. It is such a system as I would like to see introduced in this country, and I shall endeavor while in Paris to become better acquainted with the system of that great French concern which has done so much towards the aiding of the French small man to become the pocket book of the world."

The Week.

Business in the realty market showed but little improvement over the previous week. One feature of the market during the last few weeks has been the movement on Washington Heights. This has been confined on the whole to parcels of considerable size. This is usually the case after a period of stagnation. There was a moderate amount of activity in that section north of 59th st, while south of that thoroughfare contributed several interesting transfers.

The small structure between the Townsend and St. James buildings on Broadway, between 25th and 26th sts, changed hands. This plot is 22x92.11x irregular. It was purchased by the owners of the St. James building to preserve the light. The 6-sty tenement, 137 Ludlow st, 25x87.6, was purchased by S. Newman. This property is subject to a mortgage of $43,000. Abraham Schwab bought 736 Lexington av, a 5-sty business building. This structure is near 59th st, and was bought because the purchaser anticipated increased realty values when the new bridge will be opened. The 6-sty apartment house with a frontage of 30 feet, 327 West 105th st, was bought by Tony Angeles. The sellers, L. Weil & Son, only recently took title to this house and the adjoining one on the east. Mrs. Tressy purchased the 3-sty dwelling, 59 East 127th st, 18.9x half a block in depth. The building on the northwest corner of Broadway and 122d st also changed hands. While this building has a narrow frontage on the avenue, only 15 feet, still it is of extra depth, 146 feet. The old Bloomingdale road at one time ran through this property.

The old Juvenile Asylum tract came in for another sale. The southeast corner of Amsterdam av and 178th st, occupied by a new law house, 5-stys high, was purchased by J. Holzberg & Sons.

Among the mortgages recorded during the week just past was one given by the Woodbridge Co. to John A. Stewart and others, trustees for Isaac N. Phelps. The property affected is on the south side of John st about 94 feet from Gold st, and runs west 145 feet to the east side of William st and then south to the north side of Platt st, then east 163.7 feet, then 121.1 feet to the place of beginning. All title to boilers and pumps are involved. The amount loaned was $625,000. The mortgage bears the interest rate of 5 per cent., and is due April 26, 1910. The Title Insurance Company recorded a mortgage of $300,000 given by Arthur W. Saunders on the property, 5 to 9 East 31st st, for three years at 5½ per cent. Elizabeth M. Anderson gave to Jessie R. Tremenheere et al., executors of Catherine M. Andrews, a mortgage of $448,000 for three years at 4½ per cent. This is on the property 421 5th av, southeast corner of 38th st, 25.3x100. A contract for the purchase of this property was signed some time ago by Felix Isman, but he assigned it to Mrs. Anderson, who took title the other day. The City and Suburban Homes Co. borrowed from the New York Life Insurance and Trust Co. $85,000 for three years at 5 per cent. on the property on the north side of 73d st, 213 feet east of 1st av, 100x102.2.

There were a smaller number of leases reported than usual during the week just past. Adolph Lewisohn leased for 21 years the southeast corner of 145th st and Broadway. A 2-sty store and office building is going to be erected immediately on the site. Thomas Healy, the restaurant man, is the new lessee. This corner is one of the most prominent ones on the Heights. The subway station is directly in front of it and a constant stream of people are passing it in the morning and evening. The theater crowds have also to go by this point. It is Mr. Healy's intention, when conditions warrant it, to convert the building into a first-class restaurant. This, however, will not be done for some time to come. There is virtually only one restaurant on the Heights at the present time. This is located on the southeast corner of Amsterdam av and 155th st. Undoubtedly in the course of a couple of years there will be enough business in that section to warrant running one similar to his 66th st place. At the present time dwellers in that vicinity are obliged to go to 125th st.

The total number of mortgages recorded for Manhattan this week was 241, as against 120 last week, and in the Bronx 113, as against 80 last week. The total amount involved is $5,314,891, as against $6,395,336 last week.

The total number of sales reported is 54, of which 9 were below 59th st, 30 above, and 15 in the Bronx. The sales reported for the corresponding week last year were 182, of which 62 were below 59th st, 78 above, and 42 in the Bronx.

THE AUCTION MARKET

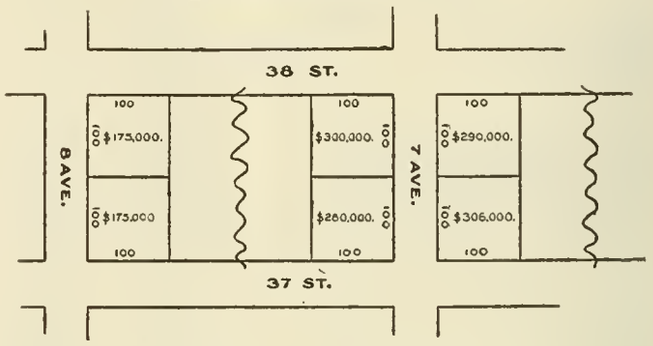
The offerings this week were rather numerous. Several parcels that were put up at forced sale found their way into outside hands. This fact alone shows a decided improvement in realty conditions. While the situation has not entirely cleared, still it is on the mend. Several men well known as purchasers on Manhattan property at auction gave as their opinion that from now on prices obtained will be better. That does not mean that prices are going to jump, but there will be a better demand in the salesroom. The investor of realty has pretty well decided that the owners of property are going to hold on unless their price is offered. The only chance of picking up a bargain is in the auction mart.

At the stand of Joseph P. Day, on Monday, there was sold in foreclosure 216 to 230 8th av, and 261 to 265 West 27th st, four 3-sty and six 2-sty tenement houses, 150.7x100x irregular. Charles Lane, the plaintiff, was the successful bidder. The price paid by him was $204,579. The amount due was about $84,800, subject to a mortgage of $150,000.

At the stand of James L. Wells the vacant plot, 125x100.10, on the north side of 116th st, 248 feet west of Pleasant av, was sold in foreclosure to the plaintiff, G. C. St. John, for $38,250.

At the stand of Bryan L. Kennelly, on Wednesday, the northwest corner of 211th st and 10th av, 99.11x100; also north side of 211th st, 150 feet west of 10th av, 350x99.11; also Broadway, northeast corner of 211th st, 133.11x50x99.11x139.3, vacant, was adjourned for six months to September 3 next.

At the stand of Samuel Goldsticker on the same day, the Hudson Trust Company purchased for $100,282, the two 6-sty flats with stores, 2,220 to 2,226 Amsterdam av, northwest corner of 170th st, 100x100. The amount due was $31,100.01, taxes and other charges amounting to $1,700. There were prior mortgages aggregating $63,000.



At the stand of Joseph P. Day, on Wednesday, 134 West 49th st, 25x100, a 3-sty stable, was knocked down to Esseff Realty Co. for $35,200. These same purchasers secured 228 Houston st, 25x85x irregular, running through to 64 Downing st, a 5-sty stable for $4,300, and also 79 Carmine st, 24x66.3, 3-sty tenement and store for $6,850.

At the stand of Bryan L. Kennelly on the same day Allenhurst Inn and seven cottages were disposed of. These houses are fully furnished and occupy the block front on the east side of Norwood av, between Allen and Corlies avs, at Allenhurst, N. J. It was a trustees' sale and was knocked down to Sonn Brothers for $93,000.

At the stand of Samuel Goldsticker on the same day the Fleischmann Realty and Construction Co. bought a vacant plot on the west side of 7th av, 39.11 feet north of 150th st, 40x100. The price paid was $15,000, while the amount due and the taxes and other charges aggregated about $16,571.10; also the southwest corner of 151st st and 7th av, 39.11x100, vacant, for $22,000. The amount due on this latter plot and the taxes aggregate $24,348.62.

The amount involved in the auction sales this week was $944,822, and since January 1, $10,499,127. Last year the total for the week was $527,853, and from January 1, $5,203,083.

Irregularities in Taxation.

On the above diagram is illustrated some of the inequalities of taxation which, explainable perhaps in the minds of the tax appraisers, are still concealed in obscurity to the mind of the ordinary though trained real estate expert.

To all practical purposes the block fronts facing each other on 7th av, in the district between 34th st and 42d st, even if characterized by rival advantages north and south, to Long Acre sq and 42d st and the Pennsylvania R. R. Co.'s improvements about 33d st, and which to some minds are perhaps unduly inflated in asking price in consequence, are still "much of a muchness" with respect to each other. To a first glance the appraisals adopted in the above case would appear to have been influenced by the fact that the appraiser, if he ever went over the ground at all, as appears somewhat dubious from the relative values ascribed to particular improvements on the several lots composing in detail the hundred foot plots shown, must have walked northward on the easterly side of the avenue with his thoughts dwelling upon the magnitude of the Pennsylvania fmprovements, and reducing values as he progressed away from them; then turning southward after an admiring glance at Long Acre sq, come back along the westerly side of the avenue, making lower valuations as he receded from the shadow of the "Times" tower. No other explanation suggests itself at first glance for the reversal of the land value appraisements as shown by the diagram between the facing sides of the block fronts.

The relative differences between two avenue fronts is also shown, and is shown not for criticism but as illustrating the supposed advantages resulting to an avenue shortly ending in a cul de sac at either end, from having become the artery of two notable centres of improvement, as against another avenue long a highway and bustling trade centre; but now dwarfed by the supposed greater attractiveness of the new centres of interest.

John Clark Estate Sells Yonkers Tract.

The John Clark estate tract, lying on the south side of South Broadway, between Morris and Post sts, in South Yonkers, has been sold to a syndicate headed by Edward Gerbereux, former Water Commissioner of Yonkers. Eugene Gerbereux is also interested in the syndicate. The property comprises about 88 lots fronting on five streets and was sold for about $150,000. The tract is located in the heart of the most recently developed part of South Yonkers, through which all the trolley lines connect with the subway at 242d st. The property will now be subdivided into plots for resale to suit future purchasers. Plans for the immediate development of the greater part of the plot by the erection of several high-class elevator apartments are already well under way.

Mrs. Russell Sage Takes Title.

Mrs. Russell Sage took title from Lucie H. Schelling and William P. Draper, as executors of Helen H. Draper, of the 4-sty brick and brownstone dwelling 604 5th av, 30x100. The consideration stated is $400,000. It is assessed at $305,000.

Large Deals on Washington Heights Consummated.

A NUMBER OF LARGE PURCHASES OF HEIGHTS PROPERTY, INCLUDING ELEVATOR, NON-ELEVATOR AND VACANT PROPERTY SINCE FIRST OF THE YEAR.

SINCE the first of the year Washington Heights realty has figured in several large sales. These have been confined in the most part to high grade properties. Apartment houses with elevators, large non-elevator houses and prominent vacant corners have changed hands. Several large building projects are to be commenced this spring, if present plans are carried out, which will materially enhance values in the immediate vicinity.

An interesting lease was given to Thomas Healy, running 21 years, by Adolph Lewisohn on five lots at the southeast corner of Broadway and 145th st. A 2-sty store and office building will be erected on this plot. Patrick Healy recently secured under lease the 3-sty building at the northeast corner of Broadway and 136th st, which will also be eventually used for restaurant purposes.

Among those sales consummated were the following 6-sty elevator apartment houses: The northwest corner of Hamilton pl and 143d st, 108x182x100x90. This house was sold at foreclosure the preceding week and was purchased for $821,510. "Rafford Hall," northwest corner Broadway and 144th st, 100x100, was also disposed of for a consideration said to have been approximately $325,000. The Republic of Panama loaned $170,000 at 5 per cent. on this structure. The "Panama" apartment house, 100x100, Broadway and the northeast corner of 150th st, figured in a large trade. In part payment the property, 1,933 and 1,935 Amsterdam av, two 3-sty tenements, and the northwest corner of Audubon av and 170th st, 100x100, vacant, were given. The high grade apartment house on the northeast corner of Broadway and 158th st must also be mentioned. This house occupies a plot 100x125 and was purchased by the Washington Arch Realty Co. (Alfred M. Rau, president). The gross rentals are about $35,000. There are seven apartments on a floor varying from four to eight rooms each.

The Century Holding Co. sold three 5-sty apartment houses on the south side of 140th st, 75 feet west of Broadway, and two 5-sty new law apartment houses abutting on 139th st, each on a plot 62.6x99.11. The houses in 139th st were sold subject to a mortgage of $100,800, and the 140th st structures were mortgaged for $101,500. The northeast corner of Hamilton pl and 140th st, 108x100, two 6-sty apartment houses, were bought by Frank D. Adams; the 5-sty apartment, 50x100, on the northeast corner of Audubon av and 171st st; the 5-sty triple apartment house, 552 West 184th st, 40x99.11, went into new hands.

Among the large vacant properties disposed of was the block front on the east side of Broadway between 160th and 161st sts, 199.10x100. This property is to be improved with five 40-ft. 6-sty apartment houses similar to those the new purchasers are completing on 7th av between 141st and 142d sts. The square block bounded by Broadway, St. Nicholas av, 171st and 172d sts, 201.1x190x159.9x217.8, was taken in trade by the Jermyn Realty and Construction Co. in November last and resold by them to Mrs. Elizabeth S. Potter during January. About sixteen lots on the north side of 175th st, between Audubon and St. Nicholas avs, were sold by the West Side Construction Co. This property was acquired by them in trade for "Terrace Court" from William T. Evans, of Montclair, New Jersey. The northeast corner of Broadway and 144th st, 100x100, was also purchased by a builder who intends erecting an elevator apartment structure on the premises.

Mass Meeting in White Plains Road.

Mr. W. H. Keating was elected president, Lucius W. How, secretary, and Dr. Fink, treasurer, of a new society of taxpayers that was organized at Woessner's Hall, White Plains road, near Gun Hill road, on last Friday night, under the name of the West Farms Road, Morris Park Avenue and White Plains Road Association. The object, it was declared, is to secure the extension of the present subway at West Farms over these roads to the city line at 244th st.

Arthur Wadick was called upon, and in response explained clearly and at length the provisions of the so-called Elsberg bill and the present status of the rapid transit situation, as it affects the desired extension. He then read a bill he had prepared and requested that it be referred at once to a committee in order to have it presented at Albany at once. The bill was referred to a Committee on Resolutions, with power.

The provisions of this bill empower the Rapid Transit Commission, in conjunction with the Board of Estimate, to let out contracts for the construction of the route from West Farms to the city line on the same terms on which the present subway contracts were let, namely, the city to furnish the money to build and the Interborough Rapid Transit Company to equip and operate the road on the same terms on which they now operate the present subway, namely, a franchise for fifty years, with the privilege of a twenty-five years' renewal.

The directors of the Allied Real Estate Interests voted unanimously to oppose Senator Saxe's bill requiring true considerations to be stated in real estate transfers.

The property adjoins the Union League Clubhouse at the northeast cor of 5th av and 39th st, and separates that structure from Mr. Vanderbilt's residence at the southeast cor of 40th st.

Grace Church Leases Fourth Ave. Building.

Folsom Bros. leased for the Corporation of Grace Church to Louis Schoener the 4-sty brk building with store, 25x100, at 102 4th av. This property is located directly back of the rectory and south of the holdings of John Jacob Astor. It was transferred on January 21, 1907, by Frederick Potter and Clarence H. Kelsey, trustees, to Martha and Blanche Potter for a stipulated consideration of $20,000. This property is assessed by the city at $27,000.

City Pays for School Sites.

The Comptroller's office has paid to owners of property on the north side of 113th st, between 1st and 2d avs, in the Borough of Manhattan, $197,674. The condemnation of this property began about a year ago, but the payments were delayed owing to the money depression. During the proceeding, the city, through its experts, testified that the value of the property was $158,000. The owners' experts value the property at $216,000. The awards paid show that the owners received $39,674 more than the value of the city's witnesses. All the owners in this proceeding were represented by Edward W. Murphy, the condemnation specialist.

Healy Not to Open Restaurant on Heights.

L. J. Phillips & Co. leased for Adolph Lewison to Thomas Healy, the restaurant man, the southeast corner of Broadway and 145th st, 100x100. The lease runs for a term of 21 years. A 2-sty building with stores is going to be immediately erected. Franklin M. Small is the architect. Mr. Healy told a representative of the Record and Guide the report that they were going to open a restaurant on the plot in the immediate future was incorrect. They have secured this parcel and should conditions on the Heights warrant it they will open a high class restaurant, but that will probably not be for some time to come.

Leasing Entire Tenements.

A lucrative department of a real estate office is the leasing of tenement property entire. The expiration of these leases should be noted in the margin of the Record and Guide Quarterly in variously colored inks. Thus, August written in red in the margin of the Quarterly of 1902 would mean that the lease expired August, 1907. Green would mean 1908, etc. This applies as well to lofts and stores. The owner of the property should be located in the Real Estate Directory.

PROPERTY OWNERS' SECTION.

Bronx Views on the Subway.

Mr. Edward Polak, chairman of the Rapid Transit Committee of the Association of Bronx Real Estate Brokers and president of the convention of 19 civic associations of Manhattan and the Bronx, has sent the following letter to the Board of Estimate:

Gentlemen—Some of the organizations which I represent request that I submit to your honorable board in writing the views which we hold in common on the subway route that is now before your board.

I have stated our views so often publicly that every one who has followed the subway discussion knows of them, but in order to bring these views to your official notice, I herewith submit them to you.

We are in favor of building the present route as laid out, because it will procure rapid transit in Manhattan and the Bronx in the quickest manner. This route is part of the system the Rapid Transit Commission laid out. The system involved an expenditure of over one million dollars and over four years of labor were required to complete the plans, etc. The Public Service Commission, after a careful investigation, decided that this route with some modifications be constructed and approved. So the city is in a position now where rapid transit is in sight, if the Board of Estimate and Apportionment will approve the route and appropriate the money.

We shall not discuss whether the city has the resources to build this subway, as the question is merely on the approval or disapproval of this specific route with its modifications. But I personally believe that an approval without an appropriation is like giving the shell and withholding the kernel, or observing the form without the essence.

We do not claim that this is the best possible route that can be built; we do not even say it is the cheapest; as to these matters we do not know. But we do say that sooner or later subways will have to be built along the proposed routes, and that they will eventually go through many avenues and main crosstown streets of New York City. So there will be no harm in building a subway which we will have to build eventually anyway. Perhaps in the future we shall be wiser and not wait until subways become a pressing necessity, but plan in advance the very best routes and stow away some money towards it, so that when another subway will be needed (and it will be needed soon, as New York is growing in population very fast) we shall be fully prepared to meet the emergency.

We do not quarrel with people who have honest differences of opinion as to the best routes to be built, but I say to them and to you that if these differences are not speedily adjusted it will delay building the subways. If in the event of your honorable body deciding that this route should not be built, on account of a conflict of opinion, then it may throw the whole matter back again to where the old Rapid Transit Board first took it up. This will involve upon the present Public Service Commission years of labor and of litigation and an expenditure of several millions of dollars. The cost of maintaining the Public Service Commission is over one million dollars yearly; this added cost of laying out new routes would be saddled on the city and our inhabitants wou'd not have rapid transit relief in years to come.

I am of the opinion that in the near future not only will passengers be carried underground but freight and expressage will be carried underground as well. The time will soon come when the citizens of New York will rise in their might and put all transit under the ground so as to do away with the horrible noises and the terrible accidents. It behooves us, then, as intelligent and far-seeing citizens of a great and growing city to build as many subways as we need as speedily as possible.

In the name of the associations which I represent, for the above and other reasons I request that you approve the route now before you and appropriate money to build it. Yours truly,

EDWARD POLAK.

Aroused Over Transit Deficiencies.

At the last meeting of the Washington Heights Taxpayers' Association considerable attention was paid to the deficiencies in surface and subway transit as affecting the upper section of Manhattan. The irregularities in the Kingsbridge surface line, and the withdrawal of the 6th av cars from Amsterdam av, with the reduction of the number of 3d av cars, are causing widespread inconvenience, and it is the purpose of the taxpayers' association to bring about a much needed change in this respect. Secretary R. P. Bolton, in canvassing the subject, said that transit deficiencies on Washington Heights have become intolerable and that the matter, upon a vote of the association, has been laid before the Public Service Commission. "Our attention has also been directed to the great congestion on the Broadway subway, between 137th st and the Dyckman tract," he said, "and unless this is remedied real estate interests will surely suffer."

RECORD AND GUIDE
11-13 EAST 24th ST., N. Y. CITY

REAL ESTATE RECORDS

Key to abbreviations:

1st.—Q. C. is an abbreviation for Quit Claim deed, i. e., a deed wherein all the right, title and interest of the grantor is conveyed, omitting all covenants and warranty.

2d.—C. a. G. means a deed containing Covenant against Grantor only, in which he covenants that he hath not done any act whereby the estate conveyed may be impeached, charged or encumbered.

3d.—B. & S. is an abbreviation for Bargain and Sale deed, wherein, although the seller makes no expressed consideration, he really grants or conveys the property for a valuable consideration, and thus impliedly claims to be the owner of it.

4th.—The street and avenue numbers given in these lists are, in all cases, taken from the insurance maps when they are not mentioned in the deeds. The numbers, it will occasionally be found, do not correspond with the existing ones, owing to there having been no official designation made of them by the Department of Public Works.

5th.—The first date is the date the deed was drawn. The second date is the date of filing same. When both dates are the same, only one is given.

6th.—The figures in each conveyance, thus, 2:482—10, denote that the property mentioned is in section 2, block 482, lot 10.

7th.—It should also be noted in section and block numbers that the instrument as filed is strictly followed.

8th.—A $20,000—$30,000 indicates the assessed value of the property, the first figures being for the lot only and the second figures representing both lot and building. Letter P before second figure indicates that the property is assessed as in course of construction. Valuations are from the assesment roll of 1907.

No. 1852. Wooden Paving Blocks.—One of the American consuls in Southern Europe announces that the municipal government of the city in question is in the market for wooden paving blocks, 2¾ x3 15-16x8⅝ ins. These blocks must be of the hardest and most durable wood aud be able to stand all conditions of weather without rotting or warping. A further description of these blocks may be had of the Bureau of Manufactures, and samples in conformity, with prices and terms, should be sent immediately. The consul states that there is a special opportunity for the sale of these blocks if American dealers or manufacturers will act without delay.

No. 1853. Wire.—A leading importer of machinery and machine tools in Western Europe informs the American consular officer, who is stationed in the city in question, that he would like to communicate with American wire manufacturers who are willing to do an export trade, and to sell at competitive prices. He states that the chief trade in this line is held by European manufacturers, but Americans ought to receive a better share of it.

No. 1883. Electrical Supplies.—An American consul in the East Indies reports that a firm in that locality is in a position to do business in electrical supplies, and would like to correspond with manufacturers of electroliers, electric fans, etc. The current used is alternating, 110 volts and 50 periods.

THIS paper has always favored, as a matter of general policy, the construction of subways by the city, but it also believes that the method of obtaining them is subordinate to the necessity of possessing them. We quite agree with those civic bodies which hold that it is not necessary to charge against the city the full cost of a completed road at the time of its inception, and that a road can be built in sections, several each year, and so distribute the resulting benefits equably between the three boroughs in greatest need, with the preference to Manhattan as the largest taxpayer. If there has been a fund set aside for carrying forward the construction and completing an underground road anywhere, it is a fair appeal that it be divided for the benefit of the three boroughs instead of being given exclusively to one. While regretting the divergence of views regarding alternative municipal policies, we fear that just at present the city would lose more by waiting for municipal construction than it would by offering private capital a sufficient inducement to construct the tri-borough system immediately needed. This the Record and Guide has said heretofore, so that its position has been made plain. The disastrous effect of delay upon Manhattan-Bronx does not need much emphasis, either in view of the near completion of the Hudson River tunnels or the subsidence of business in the building trades. The growing sentiment in favor of the indeterminate franchise and the construction of subways by means of private capital, is not because it is thought to be the best way possible, but simply because it is thought to be the only way in which subways can be built within a reasonable time. Under all the circumstances it would seem the part of wisdom for real estate interests to take the advice of the administration and urge the amending of the Elsberg law, particularly the bill prepared by the Allied Real Estate Interests along the lines of the Public Service Commission's recommendation. A good philosophy is, when we cannot get the best, to take the next. If we cannot get subways built by the method we prefer, it is better to obtain them in some other way rather than get none at all. Whether or not the Legislature passes an amendment excluding money spent upon remunerative improvements from within the debt limit, the beginning of new subway work should not be delayed to that extent; and it must be apparent that public sentiment should be immediately concentrated on a particular legislative measure so that the measure can get the benefit.

AUTHORITIES are inclining more to the opinion that the answer to the civic problem of congestion lies not so much in rapid urban transportation as in multiplying the number of local business centers and distributing among them the working population. Not in trying to bring the workers living in a hundred square miles of territory all to one center within the limits of an hour's ride, but in so arranging industrial affairs that not too many will have to seek any one quarter of the city in order to engage in their daily employment. It is perceived that dependence on rapid transit means the continuance of a shuttle motion on the part of the population when this could in a large degree be obviated by inducing the textile factories, for example, to move permanently into various separate sections of the metropolitan district, far from the present congested parts, where the operatives may be comfortably disposed around them within walking distance. The process repeated in various occupations would result in building up a large number of self-contained urban groups, as the educational and other facilities of a fully organized community would reestablish themselves at the same time. The Governor in his speech on Monday night indicated the direction of his own thought on the subject when he repeated the prediction that if the northerly and northeasterly suburbs were all built over with habitations merely there would not be streets enough in Manhattan for transit lines to carry all the people to business. In other words, after the city shall have done its utmost in building transit lines the necessity for more will still exist, unless certain business divisions are made in the course of time to grow up, so as to segregate the working masses and remove the necessity for so many coming to one part of the city as now. Very painful consequences must come from a continuation of the crowding into the lower half of Manhattan, which no exhibition such as that now open at the Museum of National History will be able to depict. A partial remedy lies in limiting the height of buildings so as to compel a spreading out of business, but a more effective one is to distribute the shipping, interstate railroad and local manufacturing industries more evenly around the port of New York, deepening waters now shallow, building more terminals like the Bush terminals at South Brooklyn and so building up numerous self-sustaining urban groups, as in London, where people can work as well as live.

AT the hearing given by the new Committee on Limits of Height and Area of the new commission engaged in revising the Building Code, the weight of opinion assented to the broad proposition that proper regulation of the height of buildings with respect to the area of the lot could solve the three-fold problem of congestion, ventilation and light in the financial district. Restrictions in construction, in style and shape, and in area with respect to the size of the lot, would produce an automatic limit for office and hotel buildings; but as for non-fireproof buildings it was agreed that their height should be restricted to the elevation within which fire can be readily conquered by the fire department. Eminent authorities, however, advised arbitrary limitations in height for all classes of buildings without regard to the proportion of the lot covered. Mr. Flagg would first establish a general height for all, but he would permit an owner covering only one-quarter of his land to go to any height he chose, as engineering and economic considerations would furnish all the check needed. Around this proposition a large body of supporting opinion is likely to chrystalize, and a suggestion by Prof. Humphrey is also commended—that the word "fireproof" be entirely eliminated from the code,—and that we should be asked to consider simply the question of first and second class construction. The question of height and area is one of the most interesting before the commission. The problem is how to accomplish the end which everyone feels must somehow be reached and at the same time conserve the great real estate values that are at stake. But these values are not all concentrated south of Chambers street. The rest of the city would be benefited, of course, by a spreading-out. As a profit-producing limit of height is plainly one not to be depended on to stop the congestion already become painful in the lower part of the city, some legal demarkation fair to all—but not necessarily an arbitrary one—must eventually be hit upon.

SPRING warmth and the partial resumption of navigation on the Hudson indicate the imminence of the permanent return of building weather. While the winter has been the slowest for the building trades in a decade, it has not been a time of distress for mechanics, although the number of unemployed is very large. A long period of continued work under higher wage scales than ever before known has made the term of inactivity very endurable. In view of this moderating fact it is a less unpleasant subject of consideration than otherwise it would be. Further, there is every prospect that business will resume at the usual time and increase in volume as the season advances, and so continue into the next year, to make 1909 a very remarkable year for activity. Reports indicative of general conditions in most parts of the country show a more normal state of financial feeling and better conditions prevailing in the building interests than what appears here. The correspondents of New York houses in the building supply line generally remark upon this difference in feeling, which emphasizes the fact that the trouble in New York has been caused exclusively by monetary conditions. The effect upon business at large of a Wall Street panic is governed in a very large degree by the state of the public mind, and not solely by the idleness of workmen and their supposed temporarily decreased purchasing power. That state of mind is decidedly hopeful of an early recovery of business equilibrium. This is especially marked in the suburbs that are waiting to receive the effects of the opening of new transit lines, as here values are as firmly maintained as ever they were, with little inclination to sell except at the considerable advance that time seems certain to bring. The fact that there is as yet but little building going on in the outlying boroughs, and that property is so well occupied that vacancies are scarcely to be found, insures a continuance of the comparatively immovable state of affairs in real estate in Manhattan and the Bronx, for at least another year.

Should Be Materially Modified.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide:

Since your publication of my letter to you of January 11th under heading "Objections to the Mechanics Lien Law," I have read with much interest the diversified opinions expressed in the letters of Messrs. Deeves, McLaughlin, Roys, and Waite, on the subject, and I am firmly of the opinion that in order to afford the protection it was intended to provide, and to meet prevailing conditions, the lien law should be very materially modified. THOMAS J. CROMBIE.

(President East River Mill and Lumber Co., 92d and 93d sts, East River.)

The Real Burden Bearers.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide:

I most heartily disagree with Mr. Joseph Harris Jones, who objects to the proposed enactment, introduced in the Legislature by request of Lawson Purdy. The proposed law appears to be a frank effort to arrive at real values, and if this proposed law is wrong in principle, then the present law, providing for separate assessments of land and improvements (which it is intended to supplement), is also wrong in principle. Mr. Jones accuses Mr. Purdy of "devising a law to squeeze the last drop of blood out of the people who carry nearly 90% of the enormous burden of $143,000,000 per year, which is being used to run the city government."

Mr. Jones is wrong in assuming that property owners are the burden bearers. The real burden bearers in Greater New York are not the numerically small class of property owners, but rather the million or so of wage earners who own few homes and who can never hope to own valuable property. Is it not time to throw aside selfishness, greed and hypocrisy and frankly acknowledge a few homely truths?

All indirect taxes, such as taxes upon improvements, excise taxes, mercantile taxes, tariff taxes, and other taxes of like nature, are in the long run paid for by our great wage earning class, who ought at the same time to be our greatest consumers. If Mr. Jones understood the incidence of taxation as well as he thinks he does he would at once admit the fact that taxes such as I have enumerated must in the long run be paid by people who rent apartments and purchase commodities.

Another of your correspondents suggests a business tax upon the gross sales of every business conducted in New York. Why should this method be adopted? Its cost will be charged to business expenses and will ultimately be paid by the class least able to pay it—namely, the consumer (i. e.) the great wage earning class, whose incomes are at all times rather uncertain and who in many instances do not earn more than $700 per year for the head of the family. By all means pile the taxes on the wage earners and thus reduce their purchasing power. This is a sure way of continuing hard times.

Another of your correspondents, "Contractor," wants the U. S. Steel Corporation to lower the price of its finished product in order to stimulate business. As well ask a hog to get out of the trough. This corporation has so completely monopolized the iron and steel producing industries and is so thoroughly buttressed by an exorbitant tariff that it can afford to maintain prices even though 50 per cent. of its productive capacity is idle.

Now, Mr. Editor, if we are suffering from too much greed and monopoly, isn't it about time we awoke to the fact and made a vigorous kick in the right direction?

Let the real estate interests organize if they will, that is their privilege, but they should remember that Mr. Purdy has proven himself an able and efficient head of the Tax Department, and no doubt is working for the interests of property owners as such, as well as for the permanent good of the city at large.

FREDERICK E. MAYER.

Paterson, N. J.

Opposes Business Tax.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide:

One of your correspondents advocates "relieving real estate" by taxing business men on their sales, and says that such a tax will "be more popular than the real estate or personal tax, because its cost is charged to business expenses, and in most cases a profit is made on it."

Of course such a tax will have to be charged to business expenses, and will raise prices to the customers who live in New York. But if the consumers pay the tax with a profit added, the cost of living in New York will be increased and New Jersey can add the attraction of cheaper living to the present inducement of lower rents.

In so far as the business tax falls on goods sold outside the State our merchants will not be able to add it to prices, as they have to sell goods in competition with other cities. Therefore the tax will reduce their profits and their ability to pay rent. It is significant that the business men of Philadelphia are organizing to secure the repeal of the mercantile tax on sales, even though there is no tax there on tangible personal property.

Your correspondent says that real estate taxes take from 20 to 45 per cent. of the gross income of any piece of property. But this does not mean that such a burden is laid on the owners.

It should be remembered that taxes on business buildings add to the rent and cost of doing business, and so are finally paid by the customers, who are mostly tenants; while the tax on dwellings is also paid by the tenant. The "gross income" of real estate includes an addition to rent of buildings sufficient to cover taxes; so that these taxes are not a charge on the owner. And the probable tax on the land is considered in the purchase price offered. Everyone who buys land wisely is untaxed on the money he invests, because he has estimated the gross income, deducted the tax, and paid only what the net income warranted.

Of course the possibility of a future increase often raises the price higher than the present income warrants. But this does not affect the economic principle that, so long as the rate is not increased, the selling value of land is an untaxed value.

The self-interest of the owners of improved property should lead them to oppose taxes on business which will reduce the rent-paying power of merchants and consumers. Every tax that increases the cost of living or doing business in this city will decrease the desirability of buildings for stores and dwellings, and the injury to owners will be greater than any saving in taxes. The only ones who would benefit are the speculators in vacant land, who will find it easier to stand in the way of improvement.

The sole argument for business license and similar taxes is that many people will not know they are paying the tax. In these days of municipal extravagance and hidden causes of increase of cost in living, that concealment hardly seems desirable.

A. C. PLEYDELL,
March 10, 1908. Sec'y N. Y. Tax Reform Asso.

Opposes True Consideration Bill.

Alfred Marling, in a letter to Mr. Allan Robinson, which is printed in full, has changed his ideas regarding the true consideration bill introduced by Senator Saxe. It will be remembered that Mr. Marling came out in favor of the bill when it was first proposed, but has since changed his opinion.

Allan Robinson, Esq.:

Dear Sir—You have asked me to express in writing my views of Senator Saxe's bill requiring the consideration of real estate transfers to be stated. This bill has been introduced at the request of the Hon. Lawson Purdy, president of the Tax Department of this city. Mr. Purdy possesses a wide and scientific knowledge of the intricate subject of taxation, and so high is my regard for his opinion that I would be tempted to take a favorable attitude toward any tax legislation which he advocated.

At first when Mr. Purdy conferred with me on the merits of this bill I was disposed to approve it. On further reflection, however, I have reached the conviction that the bill is vicious in principle, and should not become a law. It is inquisitorial in its nature. It invades the rights of private business. It demands that the dealer in real estate shall disclose the consideration which he paid for a piece of property to the Tax Commissioners, or else pay a fine for the privilege of silence. Has our democratic government the right to do this? I notice that Mr. Purdy replies that in other businesses the prices at which commodities can be purchased are a matter of public report, such as stocks and bonds, butter and eggs, etc. A retail merchant, however, while publishing the prices which he asks for his wares is not obliged to disclose under oath the exact consideration which he received for those wares, and it is quite

THE REALM OF BUILDING.

A Scheme for Limiting Building Height.

By Ernest Flagg.

In an account of the hearing before the Committee on "Limits of Height and Area" of the Building Code Revision Commission, I was credited with having advocated the limitation of the height of buildings, which was only a part of the truth.

I advocated both a limited and an unlimited height for buildings.

I believe there is no question before the public today of more importance than this one, for nothing can more nearly concern the welfare, health and safety of the people than the character of the buildings they live in and the streets they use.

We have now to decide whether we shall have air, light and sunshine in our rooms and streets, dignified and orderly facades, equal justice to landowners, comparative safety against fire and streets free from congestion, or the contrary of all this.

If matters are suffered to go on as at present, we shall most certainly have the latter alternative in a very few years.

If, on the other hand, a limitation is placed on the height of buildings sufficiently low to be effective, great injustice will be done to landowners who have not already built, and a terrific shrinkage in values will result. Moreover, to greatly limit the height would be to curtail the floor area which will be needed for the future growth of the city.

We are face to face with new conditions, and new methods must be used to meet them successfully.

At this very meeting I heard so conservative a man as Mr. Babb, of the Underwriters, agree to a limitation of one hundred and eighty feet for office buildings—one hundred and eighty feet—think of it! The idea seems preposterous to me. Imagine a city or any considerable part of it built up solidly with buildings of that height. No ordinary lot could afford a court sufficiently large to light the interior, and no ordinary street would afford sufficient light for the exterior.

No, except for a height of five or six stories, a horizontal limitation will do no good.

Anyone who is acquainted with the new law tenements knows that the area left vacant is none too great to light the interior. These buildings are generally five or six stories high, and 30% of the lot is required to be left vacant. To accomplish the same result for higher buildings the court area would have to be increased in a much greater proportion than the increase in height. Buildings of even ten stories high on lots of the ordinary size can not have courts large enough to light the interior properly in a district solidly built up in that way. What, then, shall be said of a limit of one hundred and eighty feet?

Evidently the old plan of limiting the height of buildings to secure light and air will not avail in New York today, for we will never consent to place that limit low enough to do any good. We must seek a new method, and I believe the one I suggest will do the work.

To meet present conditions we must place our buildings on end, so to speak, like teeth on a harrow, and separate them sufficiently to let sunlight and air in between. In other words, build a city of towers.

I advocate the following plan:

1. No limitation at all on the area which can be covered to a height equal to once and a half the width of the street, but in no case to a greater height than one hundred feet.

For if the limit of height is not too great, there is no necessity to limit the area covered. People always have, and of necessity always will leave enough land vacant to light the interior in all buildings except those for the poor. It is only when buildings are abnormally high that the courts become too small.

2. No limitation at all to the additional height to which buildings or parts of buildings can be carried covering an area equal to one-quarter of the area of the plot on which they are built.

For if only one-quarter of the land is built on to a great height, it makes no great difference what the height may be. There will be plenty of space vacant to let in sufficient light. Practical considerations of economy and engineering will afford all the curb necessary.

3. A restriction against building higher than the first mentioned limit within a distance of the building line equal to the combined width of the sidewalk and area of the street on which the building faces.

The high part of the building should be kept back from the building line, both to preserve the uniformity of height for the facades, and to insure sufficient light for the street.

4. A requirement that all facades which are carried above the first mentioned limit of height must be treated architecturally.

For as the high part or tower would be seen from all sides, all sides of it should be attractive to look at.

5. A provision that the right to build above the first mentioned limit of height shall be negotiable in favor of adjoining land.

This provision is made because some people may not want to build above the height established for the facades; others may want to build high on more than 25% of their land; therefore, one may wish to sell, and another may wish to buy this right. Land having parted with its right to go high in favor of adjoining land would of course be always restricted to the height established for the street facades.

As matters stand at present, an owner may find his land built up on three sides to any height, his light pre-empted, and his property rendered practically useless. Were the proposed plan in operation, his rights would be protected. Adjoining owners could only build high on one-quarter of their property, and do him comparatively little harm, unless they bought the rights of adjoining land, in which case the owner selling would receive compensation for the damage done him.

6. A requirement that no wood whatever, either for the building or its equipment, should be used above the first mentioned limit of height.

Danger from fire is one great objection to high buildings. If a district is closely built up with high buildings, fire in the upper part of one may spread to others and create a general conflagration far beyond the reach of the Fire Department. If only one-quarter of the land could be covered by high buildings, they would be sufficiently separated to prevent such a catastrophe even if they were not fireproof. Few people realize to what a great extent wood is used in most of our so-called fireproof buildings. Double floors, sleepers, doorbucks, window frames, doors, sash and trim, to say nothing of furniture, etc., require an immense quantity. No wonder they burn. It is perfectly practicable to build without wood, and certainly no wood should be used in any part of a building which is above the convenient reach of the Fire Department.

The plan I propose is simple; it would work automatically. It would, I believe, rid us of all the evils with which we are threatened by the present unrestricted multiplication of high buildings.

The Singer Building is not a complete illustration of what I propose because the low part of that building is far higher than the limit of height here proposed, but in other respects it may serve as a sample. The high part occupies even less than one-quarter of the area of the plot; it interferes with no adjoining property; it depends on its own land for its light; it presents an ornamerted facade to every point of view; it stands well back from the street line so as not to mar the facade, and no wood whatever has been used in its construction. It is what all tall buildings ought to be—really fireproof.

Building Height and Lot Area.

The public hearing of the Committee on Limits of Height and Area, held in the Aldermanic Chamber, City Hall, Friday, March 6, was well attended by representatives of the building material trades, architects and engineers. The speakers were Messrs. Ernest Flagg, the architect; George W. Babb, president of the Board of Fire Underwriters; Richard L. Humphrey, of Washington, secretary National Advisory Board on Fuels and Structural Materials; Fred G. Webber, president Masters League of Cement Workers; Robert W. Lesley, representing the Association of American Portland Cement Manufacturers; A. L. A. Himmelwright, general manager of the Roebling Construction Co.; E. P. Goodrich, member American Society of Civil Engineers, and William A. Boring, of Messrs. Boring & Tilton, architects.

Mr. Flagg spoke first on a scheme for limiting height. (See another column of this issue). Mr. Babb then spoke in behalf of the fire underwriters, calling attention to the fact that a great deal of property in New York is uninsured, or but partially insured, and that there are millions and millions of dollars of property owned by the City of New York upon which no insurance is carried. He said the experience of the fire insurance companies shows that nearly all devastating fires originate in buildings of large area and of great height, and called to mind the recent experience in the Parker Building fire.

Mr. Humphrey called attention to the fact that to-day a building of any kind, whether it be of co-called fireproof kind or not, should be somewhat like a fortress, that cannot only protect itself from the assaults from without but also from the assaults within. Mr. Humphrey recommended limiting the fireproof buildings to 150 feet, to include buildings for office purposes or mercantile or manufacturing purposes. In the case of a mercantile building which has an immense stock of inflammable material, there should be a restriction in the case of the building, with reference to an office building, of less than 150 feet. Mr. Humphrey continued:

There is one restriction, however, which I want to dwell upon particularly in this code. That is the restriction which is arbitrarily placed upon reinforced concrete buildings, or fireproof buildings, with respect to concrete. The code distinctly states that the building of this type shall not be permitted higher than 85 ft.

The question of the height to which a building shall go is manifestly dependent entirely upon the design: the working stresses allowable in different classes of material are defined by the code, and commercial necesities in connection with these stresses limit the height to which the building shall go.

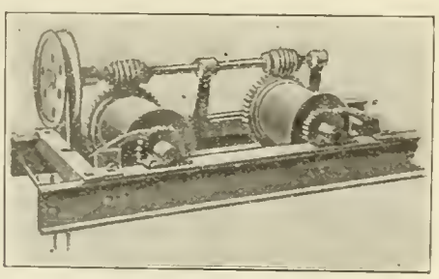
There should be no discrimination as to the height of this particular type of building. If it is suggested that a reinforced concrete building of that height is not safe, then you have only to point to structures in existeuce in other parts of the country which have been erected to a height of considerably more than 85 ft., and in which conflagrations of great severity have occurred, and which have passed through the ordeal successfully, as proof of the substantial safety of such structures.

I would like to submit for your consideration along with this brief which I propose to hand you, and in which I would like to go into this question more in detail—a list of 150 reinforced concrete buildings of ten or more stories which have been erected successfully in this country, some of them to the height of 16 stories, and also the buildings which have been found capable of carrying loads of oue ton per sq. ft., a load which would never be met with except in extremely rare cases.

Mr. Webber emphasized the fireproof qualities of structures of reinforced concrete, referring to the Metropolitan Life Building, where the free standing columns and wind-bracing is protected with concrete, and all wall columns are given a coating of concrete before brickwork is applied.

Mr. Robert W. Lesley spoke on Portland cement in the manufacture of concrete, its fireproof qualities and its adaptability to the construction of buildings up to great heights.

Mr. Himmelwright discussed important features in connection with height. He considered (1) that the revised code was defective in that it made no specific regulation for lighting and ventilation. The sizes of light courts were carefully designated, but there was no provision as to the minimum number or location of such light courts. (2) There was no provision which would have prevented freak structures. That is, there was no provision as to the maximum frontage or depth or any other provision, except that a yard at least ten feet wide was required at the rear of all buildings.



There can be no question but that the time has arrived when it is absolutely necessary for the protection of the public health that some definite and effective regulations should be provided governing the questions of light and ventilation. Unscrupulous and grasping owners and speculators are so prone in these days to evade the building law and construct buildings which will have the maximum amount of renting space irrespective of sanitary conditions, light and ventilation that regulations governing these matters must positively be enacted and enforced.

Mr. Himmelwright explained that the question of light and ventilation was not one of building height but wholly one of design:

It seems to me that a further restriction of the permissible area of a lot which may legally be occupied by a building can be properly further restricted, and that there cannot possibly be any reasonable objection in requiring this, if an owner by complying with legal regulations governing light and area is permitted to build to any desired height. This, in my opinion, is the key to the present situation.

Improved Adjustable Scaffolding.

Cavanagh's patent scaffolding, "The Nonpareil," has been in general use the past four years on practically all the large buildings erected in Greater New York and vicinity, and has given the utmost satisfaction in every single instance. There is no question regarding its strength and durability, as no accident of any kind has ever happened during its use.

"THE NONPAREIL."

The steel cables which hold the platforms are tested to a strain of five tons, and have stood a strain of three and one-half tons in actual use. The steel cables wind on drums from right to left and the reverse, thereby distributing the strain evenly. It "doubles the speed of erection" and can be erected so that ten stories can be carried up without stopping the work. It can be regulated by hand and has no ropes to entangle the feet of the workman, thereby giving him a clear platform and enabling the contractor to employ more workmen on a building without losing any of their time. A remarkable piece of work was accomplished by its use in the B building of the Hudson and Manhattan Terminal Building, where seven stories were carried up in nine days, which equals the laying of 230,000 front brick. A few of the recent building operations using the Cavanagh patent scaffolding, with the number of machines used, are as follows: Hudson and Manhattan Terminal, 223; City Investing, 107; Singer, 16; Royal Insurance, 50; Trinity, 8; Trust Co. of America, 60; U. S. Express, 78; West St., 60; World, 50; Engineers' Club, 54; Hoffman House, 28; Van Schaick, 22; Second National Bank, 17; Forty-first St. Terminal, 30; Seligman, 15. Complete information in reference to this scaffolding can be obtained from the New York Patent Scaffold Co., 17 Hope st, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Plans for Adams Express Co.'s Building Yet Undecided.

7TH AV.—The Record and Guide was informed on Thursday that no plans have yet been definitely decided upon for the new building which the Adams Express Company contemplates erecting at the southeast corner of 7th av and 14th st, on a plot 100x117.7 feet. The exact size and number of stories therefore cannot be given yet, although it may be stated that the structure will not contain 20 stories. Sketch plans have been prepared by Mr. Hooper, the company's consulting engineer. In January, 1906, it will be recalled, the Adams Express Company announced its intention to construct a skyscraper in lower Broadway, having a frontage on both Broadway and Trinity pl of 72.6 feet and a depth of 207.4 feet, but the project was abandoned. The Adams Land and Building Co. was incorporated in December, 1905, with a capital of $6,000,000, with the following directors: Levi C. Weir, Basil W. Rowe, Charles Steele, Carl A. De Gresdorf, Henry Farmer, Jr., H. Starr Giddings and Edward A. Bruce.

It was learned that no such project is contemplated. The site in question, No. 113 West 30th st, north side, 163 ft. west of 6th av, is now covered with a 4-sty brick tenement and store and 3-sty brick tenement in rear. LAW DEPARTMENT

"Is Your Flat Cold?"

"Move, say the Judges." Such is the sensational sort of advice given by some of our brethren of the press to the already somewhat anarchistically inclined public. "No man shall be discharged from employment because of his membership in a union." So said the papers and the unions a while ago, and it sounded fair, but men HAVE been discharged, and for just that very reason, and the action sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States at that!

In short, a little knowledge of the law is a dangerous thing, and in this day and generation, people are too liable to ascribe too far-reaching conclusions to court decisions. There is no truer touchstone given, in the study of law, than that decisions must be construed strictly in the light of the context of surrounding circumstances in the particular case involved; and also that open statements of law, made by judges in such decisions, and which are not necessarily involved in the exact decision of the point at issue, are to be known as dicta—sayings—and not part of the binding force of decision.

In the case under consideration the exact point decided was that a tenant could not continue to occupy a steam-heated flat claimed by him to be insufficiently warmed, and refuse to pay rent. In deciding this the court said that the failure of a landlord to heat an apartment properly gives the tenant the right to break his lease and move. In that word "properly" lies a world of qualification, even of the language used, which was in the nature of "dicta," the tenant not having in fact moved; and the decision of the case being that, not having moved, he had to pay the rent. Had he in fact moved, it would have presented a different "case" to decide, and the decision would have been as to whether the flat was or was not "properly" heated, under the circumstances of the case.

Our only point is to emphasize that in such headings, spread in one-inch headlines as "Is Your Flat Cold? Move, Say Judges," sensational news-giving is not truthful, does not conform to fact, and tends toward that looseness and defiance of vested rights and property, which is one of the most dangerous symptoms of modern citizenship.

We are far from defending landlords giving insufficient steam heat in rented apartments; but were tenants who complain of this insufficiency to follow such broadcast advice as is given in the quoted headline, our courts would be blocked with rent suits and a state or anarchy come to pass, only equaled by the attempt recently made by East Side tenants to force a reduction of rent by concerted refusal to pay any (a matter, of course, fully within their individual right); and by numbers to block the execution of the law and summary proceedings. Only the interference of the police and the prevention by them of open air meetings tending toward open defiance, prevented a long step being taken in the direction of anarchy.

The cause of the recent panic has been epigrammatically ascribed to "Some one asked for a dollar, and the rest followed," and while our banks might be able to respond to ordinary demand, they could not, at least all, to extraordinary demand. Likewise our courts, sufficient in some sense to cope with ordinary demand, could not for a day respond to the call made necessary by universal defiance of custom and order; and would be powerless to cope with a situation closely allied to anarchy, and calling for an exercise of government power which would be practically dictatorship.

Such situations our brethren of the press can scarcely be desirous of even tending towards, and may be relied upon to foreswear when once warned, this skating on thin ice!

N. Y. Mortgage and Security Co.'s Statement.

The New York Mortgage and Security Company has issued its sixth annual statement, for the year ending February 29, 1908. The total amount of its assets is $1,732,652.65. Of this amount $1,183,411.60 is invested in bond and mortgage on real estate. The statement says, "Guaranteed mortgages have never been more popular than they are now, and never has the justification for such popularity been so apparent. Not only has no investor ever lost a dollar, but the company itself, out of a total investment of over forty-one millions of dollars in mortgages, has suffered no loss and owns no real estate acquired through foreclosure or otherwise."

The Week.

The week just past consummated several deals of importance. The way that the real estate market is acting is exceedingly satisfying to most of those interested in the business. Prices have held firm during the recent trouble, comparatively few people have had to sacrifice their holdings.

That section north of 59th st came in for several sales worthy of notice. Dr. T. C. Janeway, Jr., is the purchaser of 131 East 60th st, a 4-sty brownstone dwelling, 20x60x100.5. It is his present intention to use the house for his own occupancy. Title will not be taken, however, for about 60 days. The 5-sty tenement, 319 East 83d st, 25x100, was bought by a Mrs. Schreyer for investment. The gross rentals are about $3,500 a year. E. C. Bingham, chief engineer of the Waldorf-Astoria, is the new owner of the apartment house, 69 West 97th st, 35.6x100. He took title on Tuesday last. This building is an exceptional structure. It is only 4-stys in height, yet it is fireproof. It was built by the Romaine estate in order to help protect a row of private dwellings owned by them from fire. The building has a basement, as well as a sub-basement. There is a store on the easterly side of the building. There is one duplex apartment of eight rooms and a bath on the first floor. The other apartments have seven rooms and bath, making fourteen rooms on a floor. The gross rental amounts to something less than $5,000 a year. The building is built to a depth of 90 feet. On July 3, 1907, a mortgage of $30,000 was given, at 5 per cent. for five years. The Rev. J. Summer Stone purchased 143 East 111th st, a 3-sty dwelling, 17.10x80.9. This property is going to be used for the purposes of the Lexington Avenue Baptist Church, of which he is pastor.

The deals on Washington Heights were very gratifying to those interested in that section. The tendency on the part of investors during the past few weeks has been to purchase and on the part of builders to acquire vacant property which they can satisfactorily improve. The southeast corner of Broadway and 147th st, 100x100, will be improved with an elevator apartment house. The 6-sty apartment house on the southeast corner of 159th st and Broadway figured in a trade for 12 lots on the southeast corner of Fort Washington av and 181st st. The house adjoining the 159th st corner was reported sold last week by the same parties. The 181st st lots will be improved. The northeast corner of Riverside drive and 136th st also figured in a trade. This plot is 100x145. A 9-sty apartment house will be erected. The southeast corner of Broadway and 179th st was purchased by Fredenburg & Lounsbury, who also closed with the adjoining lots, making a plot 100x100. It is in all probability going to be improved with a high class apartment house.

The Bronx contributed several small sales, but nothing especially noteworthy. There is considerable inquiry for property in that section. Investors in many cases have held off until the subway questions are settled. They remember the last boom and the prices that they paid for property and they do not want to take on too heavy commitments. Brokers, however, look to a good spring. There is a more cheerful feeling on the general condition of the business situation. The concensus of opinion is that the real estate business will continue to improve from now on.

There were fewer mortgages recorded this week. This is a perfectly normal condition. Around the first of the month there are more documents of every nature put on record. The mortgage of $1,250,000 to the 1449 Broadway Company, covering the property of the same number was rather a family affair. This is a holding company for the Elliot Zborowski estate. The property in question is the Broadway theater and adjoining property on 7th av. A lease to Felix Isman was also recorded covering this same property for a period, with renewals, aggregating 105 years. Ruth A. Heinze, wife of Arthur P. Heinze, gave a mortgage of $115,000 to John A. Stewart et al, trustees of the Liverpool, London & Globe Fire Insurance Co., in New York, on the property 220 Madison av, 37.6 north of 36th st, 28.4x95. The due date and rate appear only in the bond. Ella M. Schmitt recorded a mortgage of $104,000, for three years, at 5 per cent., on the property at the northeast corner of Broadway, and 144th st, 99.11x100. An $80,000 four-year mortgage, at 5 per cent., was recorded on the property 135 to 139 West 17th st, 65x92. The Albany Savings Bank loaned the money to Oscar Willgerodt. Frances M. Valleau gave a mortgage to George H. B. Hill on the property on the east side of 7th av, 24.9 feet south of 34th st, 42x irregular, of $265,000, at 5 per cent., until March 10, 1910, and then 4½ per cent. until March 10, 1913.

The total number of mortgages recorded for Manhattan this week was 160, as against 241 last week, and in the Bronx 103, as against 113 last week. The total amount involved is $4,-884,144, as against $5,314,891 last week.

The total number of sales reported is 63, of which 11 were below 59th st, 32 above, and 20 in the Bronx. The sales reported for the corresponding week last year were 135, of which 45 were below 59th st, 63 above, and 27 in the Bronx.

THE AUCTION MARKET

There were in round numbers 30 parcels offered at auction during the week just past. There were no parcels of importance though several were of local interest. It is always interesting for prospective purchasers to read the prices brought by realty in this city. It gives them an idea of values. Except on rare occasions, the prices brought in the auction mart have been below their real value. Those put up at forced sale have in the majority of cases been bought in by the plaintiffs, so those properties must be eliminated. The voluntaries, however, where a generous mortgage has been allowed to remain have in nearly every instance lately brought good prices. This point merely accentuates the fact that prospective purchasers are not willing to bid and then have to go out and place a loan. They are afraid that some difficulty may arise and they would be put to considerable annoyance and expense. The values are there, notwithstanding this condition. You will hear expressions of opinion all around the salesroom that a certain parcel went for less than its worth. Were the feature of the mortgage placing eliminated, prices on forced sales would be considerably higher. In several instances these houses thus bought in the plaintiffs, have been resold at a good advance, the sellers taking back a reasonable amount on bond and mortgage. The question of bondsmen, however, is more carefully gone into. If possible, the "straw man" is done away with.

There were no sales on Monday last.

At the stand of Joseph P. Day, on Tuesday, there were two offerings. The 3-sty dwelling, 299 East 142d st, 16.8x100, was knocked down to Bertha Pollack, for $7,500. The amount due on the judgment was $4,344.91; taxes and other charges amounting to about $148.16. The vacant plot, 50x104, on the west side of 3d av, 108.2 feet north of 175th st, was purchased by the plaintiff for $11,000. The amount due was $12,533.09; taxes and other charges, $697.63. Lounsberry & O'Connor adjourned the sale of 312 Rivington st until March 17 next.

At the stand of Peter F. Meyer, on Wednesday, 153 Franklin st was knocked down to E. S. Popper for $18,000. This is a 3-sty business building, 26.10x71.2x25.7x60.4. It was sold by the order of the executors. The 3-sty tenement and store, 332 West 26th st, was adjourned to March 18.

At the stand of James L. Wells, on the same day, 471 West 165th st, a 2-sty frame dwelling, 20x99.8x irregular, was adjourned to March 25. The rest of the offerings put up by Mr. Wells were bought in by the various plaintiffs.

At the stand of Samuel Goldsticker on the same day, 426 to 438 East 118th st, 194 feet west of Pleasant av, three 6-sty tenements with stores were sold to George Ricard, a party in interest. These houses occupy a plot 125x100.11x irregular. The amount due was $62,315.06; taxes and other charges, $490.01; prior mortgages aggregate $64,000.

At the stand of Joseph P. Day, on Thursday, several parcels were offered voluntarily. It was a special sales day. The northeast corner of Washington av and 173d st, 50.8x100, a 3-sty frame dwelling, went to Thomas Lenane for $12,750. The 4-sty dwelling, 314 East 14th st, was purchased by John J. Aaron for $20,050. E. J. Hogan was the highest bidder for the 3-sty building, 456 Greenwich st, 24.8x80xirregular. He offered $24,-000. The 4-sty tenement, 236 West 65th st, 25x100.5, was knocked down for $12,000.

At the stand of Samuel Goldsticker, on the same afternoon, the 1-sty building, 324 and 326 East 95th st, 250 feet west of 1st av, was sold to Alfred H. Ackers for $14,032. This property was subject to a first mortgage of $10,000; amount of the judgment, $7,793.91; taxes and other charges, $214.

Much interest is being manifested in the Meeks sale which is going to be held on Thursday, March 19. Several important parcels are going to be put up for sale. A description of them will be found in another column.

The amount involved in the auction sales this week was $380,960, and since January 1, $10,880,087. Last year the total for the week was $1,160,372, and from January 1, $6,363,455.

Against Senator Saxe's Bill.

The Allied Real Estate Interests have received a large number of letters from real estate brokers, operators and investors protesting against the passage of the Saxe bill, requiring the consideration of real estate transfers to be stated. In the main the objections are as follows: (1) It is bad in principle; (2) If it could be enforced, it would be disastrous to real estate business in this city, and (3) it cannot accomplish the object for which it has been prepared.

Resolutions by the Board of Brokers.

At a special meeting of the Board of Governors of the Real Estate Board of Brokers of the City of New York, the following resolutions were passed:

Whereas, It is our sad duty to record the death of James N. Wells, be it

Resolved, That the Real Estate Board of Brokers recognize in the business life of James N. Wells a leader in thought and action, a man of principle and integrity, justly esteemed for his high character and devotion to duty. And be it further

Resolved, That we tender to William J. Wells, the present board member of the firm of James N. Wells' Sons, our acknowledgement that in the death of his brother the fraternity of real estate brokers have suffered a loss that cannot be replaced, and that we grieve with him over a lifelong separation from one with whom it was an honor to have been associated. And be it further Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mr. William J. Wells and a copy to the Record and Guide.

Stockholders' Meeting of Bond & Mortgage Company.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Bond & Mortgage Guarantee Company, Charles S. Brown, because of pressure of his private business, declined re-election as president, and Waldron P. Belknap, who has been secretary of the company and in active charge of its office, was elected president. The other officers were re-elected, and John L. Sherwood, the assistant secretary, was made secretary.

Methods of Assessment.

By LAWSON PURDY.

ONE objection that is made to the bill requiring a statement of the True Consideration for the transfer of real estate, is based on the failure to consider the actual and necessary methods employed by the Tax Department in assessing the value of land. An appraiser hired to appraise a single lot may arrive at a correct conclusion as to the value of the lot without consciously to himself determining the value of all the other lots within a radius of a quarter of a mile. Unconsciously he must determine the value of the average lot on the street, and then take into account any peculiarities of shape or size of the lot he is required to appraise.

The consideration for any particular transfer is not conclusive evidence of market value. A very high price may have been paid because the purchaser had a special need for the plot or because the terms of sale were peculiarly lenient, or the price may have been very low because the seller was in great need of ready cash. Considerations are only evidence of value and in consequence the more evidences of value in a given neighborhood that an appraiser has before him the more accurately will his work be performed.

The Tax Department, from the nature of the case, must always first determine the value of a normal lot on every street and from that basis work out the values of all lots, having due regard to their special conditions of shape, size and proximity to corners. To illustrate the methods employed by the Tax Department the annexed diagrams of city blocks are presented, showing the value per front foot of normal lots 100 feet deep upon which the assessments of the current year are based.

Criticism of these unit values will be welcomed by the Department.

Amendments to the Rapid Transit Act.

STATEMENT PREPARED BY WALTER LINDNER, OF THE ALLIED REAL ESTATE INTERESTS LAW COMMITTEE.

The following legislative bill intended to amend the Rapid Transit Act so as to make that act applicable to present conditions, and to carry out certain recommendations of the Public Service Commission contained in its report for the six months ending December 31, 1907, has been prepared by the Law Committee of the Allied Real Estate Interests, and its provisions are stated as follows:

Upon examining the present law it was found that the commission could not advertise for bids for private construction by reason of the provisions in paragraph 7 limiting the power to sell the right to construct, maintain and operate a railway with private capital only in the event that it should not have been determined by a vote of the people under the referendum of 1894 that the railway then under consideration be constructed for and at the expense of the city. It is believed that it was not the intent of the voters to decide that no railways should ever be constructed except at the expense of the city, but that the electors voted only upon the proposition stated upon the ballots, and with reference to the railway which had then been planned. The bill proposes to amend the present law by taking out the proviso limiting the power of the commission as above stated. There is further added to paragraph 7 express power to the commission to provide in the terms and conditions of sale for a franchise for a reasonably fixed term not exceeding 25 years, with an indeterminate franchise thereafter until the city shall at its own option terminate the franchise and repay the cost of construction and purchase the equipment of the route. Ample provision is made for protecting the interest of the city and for amortization of cost of construction by proper sinking funds, the proceeds of which can be made to operate in reduction of the cost of construction to be repaid to the operating company.

By amendment to paragraph 32-a it was proposed to enable the commission to permit franchises for extensions of existing routes to be made upon terms that will expire with the franchise for the main route extended, but with a provision that the amount of compensation be fixed for a period not more than 25 years, with readjustment thereafter and 10-year periods.

The provisions of the Elsberg bill in which franchises granted under municipal construction may be given for not more than 20 years with a renewal of 20 years, has been found to be a period so short as to be unattractive to capital; it is purposed by amendment to paragraph 34-a to make the initial operating period 35 years, with a possible renewal of 20 years, the provisions of the present law being retained that if a renewal be not granted the city may obligate itself to purchase the equipment of the route at the expiration of the first period.

An amendment is added to paragraph 34-e by which the board will be able, whenever it shall have adopted a route, to advertise for bids in as many alternative forms as the board may deem proper, and to accept such bid or bids for the best interests of the city.

Further amendments to the law cover the following subjects:

Paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 were repealed by the Public Service Commission law. The bill proposes the enactment of a new section 1, explaining the reference throughout the law to "the Board of Rapid Transit Commissioners" and referring those words and the words "the Board" and "the said Board" to the Public Service Commission of the First Department, upon which the powers of the rapid transit act were conferred by Public Service Commission law. Certain important acts under the Rapid Transit law can be performed only by a vote of six of the members of the commission. The Rapid Transit Commission consisted of eight members, while the present commission consists of five.

Amendments are proposed whereby carrying out the same principle it is provided that in those cases which call for a vote of six members there shall now be required a vote of four-fifths of the members of the commission. An amendment is proposed to subdivision 4 of section 24 under which it shall be forbidden to use steam locomotives on any rapid transit route hereafter authorized. It is proposed to amend paragraph 37 by raising the limit of interest upon bonds to be issued for construction of rapit transit routes from 4% to 4½% per annum, it being believed that such increase in the rate is necessary under present financial conditions.

East Side Subway Approved.

The Board of Estimate approved on Friday the Broadway-Lexington av route as laid out by the Public Service Commission. The engineers have been instructed to prepare specifications and counsel will draw up the construction contract.

Judge Dillon gave a decision to Comptroller Metz, holding that it would be constitutional for the city to construct the route piece-meal, without its being obligated at the outset for the entire cost of construction.

The Board appropriated $200,000 for the purchase of new fire hose.

Opposes True Consideration Bill.

conceivable that the asking price and the actual selling price are not identical.

Why should those dealing in real estate be thus singled out for special legislation?

My first objection, therefore, is this fundamental one, that it is against the best interests of the people that such a bill should become the law of the State.

In the second place, I do not believe that the main object of the bill, which is to give us a more equitable assessment of real estate for taxes, will be accomplished.

I cannot share Mr. Purdy's belief that the department over which he presides with such signal ability, will be able to collate all the sales, transfers, etc., in such a way as to give us any more intelligent assessment than we now possess. The information proposed to be given under this bill privately to the Tax Department might, in the hands of weak and designing men, be disclosed to outsiders, either with or without consideration, and possibly furnish opportunity "for ways that are dark and tricks that are mean."

My third objection to the bill is that the tendency would be, in my opinion, to discourage enterprise. Those dealers possessing in an unusual degree energy and foresight, to whom New York is indebted for much of its rapid and substantial growth, would be deterred from continuing their enterprising policy if obliged to disclose, even privately, the profits which they received in the course of their business transactions. The city and State can ill afford to lose the activities of such men. They make, in large measure, our towns and cities. They are entitled to the fruits of their labor and energy. Their capital in trade is their experience and foresight, and in my view it is poor legislation which aims to extract from them the results and profits of their private business.

For these and other reasons I am opposed to this bill, and it is a significant fact that at a recent meeting of the directors of the Allied Real Estate Interests of the State of New York, the directors unanimously voted to oppose the bill.

I most urgently beg, therefore, that the bill be rejected.

Very truly yours,

ALFRED MARLING.

Clear & Co.; E. D. MacMannus, and G. Owen Tucker, of the firm of Tucker, Speyers & Co.

The land lying under water west of 12th av and the New York Central tracks, between 137th and 138th sts, was conveyed by Edward H. Langdon to the New York State Realty & Terminal Co. This company is subsidiary to the New York Central and holds title to most of its real estate in the city.

The firm of Fleck & Brown, of 2d av and 5th st, and the firm of Wolf & Cohn, of 132 Nassau st, have become co-partners and will henceforth carry on the business of real estate brokerage, renting, collecting, insurance and the management of estates under the firm name of Fleck, Brown, Wolf & Cohn. Their office will be located at 3442 Broadway, northeast corner of 140th st.

Oscar D. and Herbert V. Dike announce the removal of their office from 67-69 West 125th st to 1 West 34th st, the Century Building, where they will continue with increased facilities their business of real estate and insurance. The management of tenements and apartment house property and the leasing for business purposes will be made a specialty. Expert appraisements promptly made. Insurance, fire, plate glass and casualty effected in the best companies.

Mason Carnes began partition proceedings against Lewis B. Brown and others involving the property at the southeast corner of Broadway and 4th st, 45.4x273.5x irreg., extending to Lafayette st. The Broadway property is rented by the Northern National Bank and is a 6-sty building. It was purchased on June 1, 1857, by Henry Mason. The Lafayette st property, known by the new number 388, is leased to the Whiting Manufacturing Co., and is also a 6-sty structure.

PROPERTY OWNERS' SECTION.

Shortage of Water Supply on Washington Heights.

One of the most important subjects which the Washington Heights Taxpayers' Association has in hand at the present time is that of the increase of the water supply and its pressure, to meet the large growth of population in that section which has taken place during the past two years.

Complaints are rife of the lack of water in many of the new apartments, especially those in the middle section of the Heights, which secure their supply from the reservoir at 173d st, and are not included in the limted capacty of the water tower at Highbridge.

The Department of Water Supply states that the pressure in the mains, through the locality affected, is, in certain places, permanently as low as 20 pounds per square inch, which is equivalent to a height of only about 46 feet, a head from which buildings of five stories could not be supplied with water in their upper floors at any time, day or night. It is officially stated, too, that the limit of the capacity of the Highbridge pumping station is already reached, so that no relief either in pressure or in quantity of water can be expected under existing circumstances. The situation is thus very serious, for if the buildings already erected cannot obtain a supply, the deficiency will develop into a critical situation as many other new buildings become occupied, as will be the case within the next few months. As an instance, the owner of one large building near 165th st who was compelled to install an electrical pump, found that a supply of water to the pumps could not be obtained.

Complaints of this kind are numerous, and to add to their troubles owners are harassed with notices from the tenement house authorities ordering a proper supply of water on upper story plumbing fixtures. Making bricks without straw would be easy work compared with the duty devolving on a landlord of supplying water from a deficient source.

The old mains, long sufficient for the moderate needs of the Heights while undeveloped, now require early replacement, and the capacity of the pumping station should be increased without the least delay, for in addition to the inconvenience that is experienced by owners and tenants, the danger of fire, with an inadequate water supply, confronts the people in this rapidly growing section.

The Taxpayers' Association has a special committee at work on this subject, the chairman of which is the newly elected Alderman, Hon. John Mulcahy, who with his colleague, Hon. J. J. McDonald, will personally interview the Commissioner of Water Supply, and seek the support of the Comptroller in rectifying the existing conditions.

The association has invited all property owners and tenants to send in complaints and facts and to appear at their next meeting on the 27th instant, so that concerted action may be taken in demanding attention to this important subject.

Taxpayers Take Action on Important Bills.

At the last meeting of the West Side Taxpayers' Association a unanimous resolution was passed opposing Senate Bill No. 395, requiring the true consideration to be given when recording conveyances. The association takes the stand that if the measure becomes a law it would discriminate between the large and small purchasers of realty, and that the large buyer, rather than make known the purchase price, would readily pay the prescribed penalty of $200. It further argues that since the penalty is inefficient the law would be ineffective in its operation, causing much annoyance.

It further contends that there are times when adjoining property is wanted for a specific purpose and more than its value is paid, that if the purchase price is recorded the adjoining owner would suffer, as the Tax Commissioner would in all probability raise the assessed value according to the price paid for the other property to be used for a specific purchase. The bill, it believes, is unjust, as it merely includes the Boroughs of Manhattan, Bronx, Kings, Queens and Richmond, which of themselves compose the City of New York, making it a local measure. The association is also of the opinion that the bill can easily be evaded by non-residents, who convey property, as it would be impossible to personally serve those residing without Greater New York.

Resolutions were also passed by the Taxpayers' Association favoring Assemblyman Robinson's bill, No. 864, in favor of rapid transit, which act will make it more attractive to private capital to undertake immediate construction of the new subways. The Grady Fire Escape Bill was opposed on the ground that there are at present sufficient inspectors employed by the municipality to look after fire escapes, which now come under the supervision of the Building Department, Tenement House and Fire Departments.

Not in Favor of the Elsberg Law.

The recent meeting of the Twenty-third Ward Property Owners' Association was one of the largest gatherings in the history of that body. While it was held chiefly with the view of discussing matters pertaining to rapid transit, other subjects of importance were considered.

Chairman Charles Baxter, in touching on the Tenement-House Law amendments, remarked that, in the near future three-story brick flats costing $10,000,000 will be erected in the Bronx. One builder alone desired to invest a half million dollars in such structures, while another is ready to expend $300,000 for buildings of similar construction in Fordham. He said that in order to quicken building operations in the Bronx it was only necessary to amend the law with respect to the powers of the Tenement House Department over three-story flats.

Relative to the proposition of President Haffen providing for an annual appropriation of $15,000,000 for rapid transit requirements, the following resolution was passed:

Whereas, The established policy of delaying improvements in transit facilities until all the money to pay for such improvements are provided for, seems not to be based on sound business principles when it applies to States or municipalities where taxes are collected periodically to meet expenses (though such policy would be sound when relating to individual enterprises), and by using all available money on hand for such purposes the taxable values of property would be increased and consequently transit facilities hastened, and

Whereas, The proposition advanced by Borough President Haffen to appropriate each and every year $15,000,000 for improvements in transit facilities seems sound and the only way by which this borough can within reasonable time secure to some extent the necessary relief,

Resolved, That this association approves of the proposition advanced by President Haffen and urges upon the authorities to cause such legislation to be introduced in Albany as will give the city the right to make such appropriation;

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be forwarded to the Governor, the Mayor, the Public Service Commission and to our representatives in the Legislature.

The Property Owners' Association also passed resolutions condemning the Elsberg law, being of the opinion that it stands in the way of the borough securing much needed transit relief. The attitude of the association toward that measure will be made known to the representatives of the borough in the State Senate and Assembly, with requests to favor any bill which may be introduced, which has for its end the repeal or modification of the Elsberg law.

Sale of the Meeks Estate.

On Thursday, March 19, Bryan L. Kennelly will sell at public auction in the Exchange salesroom, 14 and 16 Vesey st, the property belonging to the estate of Joseph W. Meeks. This sale is by the order of Edwin B. Meeks, the sole surviving executor.

Several exceedingly interesting parcels are to be offered, including 14-16 Vesey st, the building in which the sale is going to be held. This property was purchased by the old established furniture concern of J. & J. W. Meeks in 1844 for their business, as this was a retail furniture center at that time. The northwest corner of Church and Vesey sts is also going to be sold to the highest bidder. This plot was acquired in 1855 and the present business building constructed.

Joseph W. Meeks purchased 31 West 27th st in 1854. He was looking for a residence uptown and had his choice of buying this property with a frontage of 28 feet, or a residence on 5th av, near 27th st, 25x100. The price asked for the 5th av property was $35,000, and the 27th st house $28,000. Mrs. Meeks preferred the house on the side street, as the yard was more enclosed. This property was used as a residence by the Meeks family until business crowded them out.

The will directs that the property must be sold at public auction. A mortgage of 70% will be allowed to remain for three or five years at 4½%, at the option of the purchaser. Privilege to pay the mortgage off at any time on giving ninety days' notice is also a feature of the terms.

The Record and Guide occupied 14-16 Vesey st for fifteen years, prior to their moving to their uptown offices. The sale will be conducted by a house established in 1847.

Demand for Washington Heights Property.

Louis Becker & Co., real estate brokers, 2003 Amsterdam av, find conditions considerably improved on Washington Heights. He said: "I have had many inquiries during the past few weeks for properties in this locality. Things are certainly looking up. The demand is varied. Private dwellings are especially sought after, but owners are holding firm to their prices. Vacant corners are also being disposed of for improvement. Investors are coming into the market at the present time. Undoubtedly conditions are improved."

United Associations Pass Resolutions.

The True Consideration bill has drawn forth the wrath of the United Real Estate Owners' Association, which body unanimously disapproved of the measure at a meeting held on March 10, by passing the following resolution:

Resolved, That we unanimously disapprove of the Senator Saxe bill requiring the consideration of real estate transfers to be stated, upon the ground that it will generally interfere with real estate transactions and it discriminates between the large and small buyer in that the penalty is not in proportion to the purchase price.

We hold that it is merely a local bill affecting the City of New York only, and if there is any merit in this bill it should be made to cover the entire State.

Copies of the above were mailed to the members of the Judiciary Committee of the State Senate.

Secretary Chas. H. Schnelle, in expressing his opinion as to the fate of the Saxe bill, said on Friday that it was his opinion it would not be reported out of committee.

Average Density of Population Increasing.

The congestion exhibit at the American Museum of Natural History clearly shows a most startling state of conditions as relating to the crowded tenement sections of Manhattan. Perhaps the most striking impression of tenement crowding is made apparent by figures which show that 6,173 inhabitants dwell in the block bounded by 61st and 62d sts and Amsterdam and West End avs.

The exhibit also shows that the so-called "lung block," bounded by Monroe, Hamilton, Catharine and Market sts, has 1,672 persons to the acre, and that cots for that number, standing closely together, with no passageways, would occupy more space than an acre of ground. It is shown that the average density of population to the acre in Manhattan is increasing at an alarming rate, and that there are more than 312,048 people now living in 122 blocks, covering 332 acres.

Adams Express Company Takes Title.

The Adams Express Co. is the real buyer of the southeast corner of 7th av and 14th st, 100x117. The City Real Estate Co. took title, in trust, to the plot some time ago. It is the intention of Pres. Weir to improve the property with a 20-sty building. The express company will occupy a large portion of it with their executive and other offices.

The express center on lower Broadway is quickly being done away with. The United States Express Co. moved to its own building at Rector and Trinity pl. The American Express Co. has announced its intention of changing its home and the Wells, Fargo & Co. are said to be negotiating for new quarters in one of the largest new skyscrapers. The Adams Express Co. also owns 29 to 35 7th av, between 12th and 13th sts; 11 Wooster st; 59 Broadway, and 311 West Broadway.

Dyckman Taxpayers Meet.

The Dyckman Taxpayers' Association met on Wednesday evening, with an attendance of more than 50 members. Resolutions were adopted urging a trolley line across the 207th st bridge, and the paving of Sherman av and 207th and 215th sts. A committee was appointed to conduct a campaign in favor of establishing bulkheads at the foot of certain streets along the Harlem River, as there is no public wharf on the Island north of 158th st, and the vast building operations at the upper end of the borough require docking facilities.

MORTGAGES

NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows: The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given and the amount. The general dates used as headlines are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.

Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street, in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgage, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date.

The first date is the date the mortgage was drawn, the second the date of filing; when both dates are the same, only one is given.

Subscribers will find mortgages in this list with the wrong block number attached. The block number we give is taken from the instrument as filed.

Mortgages against Bronx property will be found altogether at the foot of this list.

March 6, 7, 9, 10, 11 and 12.

OUR FORTIETH BIRTHDAY.

FORTY years ago the first number of the Record and Guide—or, to give the full title it bore then and still bears—the Real Estate Record and Builders' Guide, was issued from its humble birthplace in the old World Building. March 21 of that year also fell on a Saturday. Already the building was dingy and shabby, without being in the least venerable, and it was so flimsy and combustible that when it succumbed to fire in the early eighties it did not leave enough débris to fill the cellar. The contrast between those quarters and those from which the present number is published is an epitome of the growth of New York, of which growth that of the journal then begun has been an unfailing and perhaps the most trustworthy index. For, as Henry George accurately laid it down, however disputable the deductions he drew from it, the advance in land values is the most unmistakable of all the symptoms of material progress, and the real estate market the most infallible barometer of prosperity. So long as New York retains the commercial primacy which bids fair to last until that distant and almost unimaginable day when the Asiatic shall supersede the European market in the interest of American producers and consumers, so long will its growth be the infallible index of national as well as of merely municipal wellbeing. And the growth of New York during these forty years is not only typified, but is expressed in a comparison between the sixteen pages, rather meagrely filled, of the first number of the Record and Guide, and the number, by no means exceptional in point of size, which is the occasion and the vehicle of these remarks. That is a consideration which, in a season of financial and commercial depression like the present, it is very well to bear in mind. "Wait till you come to Forty Year," sings Thackeray in the ballad which he entitled "The Age of Wisdom." It is, at any rate, the age of experience, for an institution as for a man. It seems to be a law of nature in the modern commercial world that no commercial enterprise can come to it without having weathered more than one of such stresses of weather as the business world is now undergoing.

At any rate, such an experience carries the subject of it far beyond the experimental stage, converts it, in fact, from an undertaking into an institution. How many ventures proclaim their confidence that they have come to "meet a long-felt want"? How many show by failure that they have misjudged either the extent and the reality of the want or else their own capacity for supplying it. The highways of general journalism, the by-ways of special or trade journalism, are alike strewn with the wrecks of these projects. The special path which the Record and Guide began to break forty years ago to-day was then quite untrodden. But naturally it was not long before there appeared here also the cheerful speculative optimist, confident that he could meet the want of which the existence had clearly enough been demonstrated by the pioneer that he could do it cheaper, or do it more acceptably, or do it somehow better by doing it somehow otherwise. But the recollection of the latest of these rivalries has already become a misty memory. Not that they may not have had their uses, and called attention to some parts of the field which otherwise would have been in danger of being overlooked or slighted. It is at once one of the trials and one of the glories of American business life that no business institution is "established" beyond the wholesome danger of competition. Many such seem to be so in older countries, in spite of such vicissitudes as the leading journal of the world has just been passing through in England. In this country, at any rate, a journal can hold its ground only while it fulfils the purpose of its existence better than that purpose could be fulfilled in its absence. An "establishment" of forty years does not count for much more than one of four, if this primary condition be not fulfilled. The Record and Guide, at least, is quite aware of the conditions of its tenure, and that eternal vigilance is the price of the favor it enjoys among the classes to which it makes its appeal.

But "the past, at least, is secure," and the record of the increasing public recognition of the service it has tried to render something to be not boastingly, but as humbly as gratefully acknowledged. It is a rare thing indeed in the swift and violent vicissitudes of American business life for a business enterprise to go on steadily for forty years under virtually the same ownership and direction, and with so singularly little of change in the more responsible places of its staff, with none, it may almost be said, excepting what have been caused by expansion or by death. This journal has grown under the same auspices under which it was planted, has grown and branched out until it has come to deal with matters far beyond the original contemplation of its founder, though always entirely germane to its original purposes. For, indeed, to a journal which professes to be a "real estate record and builders' guide," and aspires to be the organ of the "landed interest" of what long since its foundation has come to be Greater New York, no question of municipal government or municipal improvement is foreign. To fulfil its mission it must form and express opinions on building laws, including not only legal safeguards against the danger of fire, but laws intended, like the tenement house laws, to enforce a higher sanitary and even a higher social and moral standard of living among that great majority which cannot choose how it will live, but must accept the least desirable, which is to say the cheapest abodes which the law will allow to be used for human habitation. It must form and express opinions upon all manner of public improvements, upon park reservations and park-making, upon school-house building, upon new systems of intercommunication, in so far as these are dependent upon municipal construction or municipal credit, upon municipal expenditures which are not expected to make immediate or direct pecuniary return as well as upon those that are, and that are therefore advocated as in the nature of municipal investments. In a word, it must have a voice in those "local politics" which have nothing at all to do with politics properly so called, but which are merely matters of municipal economy, of municipal housekeeping. And it must, in the interest of its constituency, especially form and express opinions upon whether the time is ripe to prosecute improvements of which the abstract desirableness is unquestioned, and of which it is not denied that they should be done "some time." And, inevitably, inevitably if such a journal fulfils the purpose of its creation, its special function and its special constituency attract to it the attention of the specialists in these matters, who seek in it a hearing from others interested in the same municipal problems as they themselves. So that, in the course of time, it becomes a sort of witness-box for "expert testimony," and comes to speak upon its own subjects with an authority beyond the reach or the scope of the general press. And exposition and discussion of all these matters, however they may seem to transcend the original purpose of the publication, and however far they may, in fact, transcend the original expectations of its founders, are not only legitimate, but inevitable developments of an organ of the real estate and building interests which succeeds in finding acceptance as such an organ.

One development there has been which has transcended not only the expectation of the founder, but the local limitations of the original plan, one scion which has been transplanted from the parent stem and attained an independent existence of its own. Curiously enough, one of the editorial articles in that initial number of forty years ago treated of the relations between "Architecture and Building." But not for fourteen years was architecture one of the topics of the paper. In the number for October 7-14, 1882, appeared a general and introductory article on "New York Architecture," which announced the intention of discussing, from time to time, and judging in the light of architectural principles, the erections of Manhattan which might seem to be worth such discussion. From that time onward such discussions became a frequent feature, almost a regular department. But it was in those years that the facilities for illustration were so enormously increased and cheapened by the introduction of the half-tone process that a journal dealing with building could hardly afford to ignore them. And it was only nine years after the appearance of this first architectural article, in July, 1891, to wit, that there appeared the first number of the Architectural Record. Not very much more to be compared with the same magazine of to-day, perhaps, than the first number of the Record and Guide with this present, but giving distinct announcement of the entry of a newcomer into its field. The field it has cultivated with such success that the Architectural Record, at first issued timidly and tentatively as a quarterly, long ago became a monthly, and at first addicting itself, almost as exclusively as the weekly of which it was an offshoot, to local and "metropolitan" interests, long ago extended its researches until it became of national scope, and circulates wherever any interest is felt in any variety of American architecture. And yet this development, like the others we have been noting in the paper itself, was as legitimate and logical, logical almost to inevitableness, as it was unforeseen and gradual.

This is one illustration of the tendency of a still further specialized evolution in special journalism. Evolution, as its great expositor has said, is from the homogeneous to the heterogeneous. In the day of small things a "real estate record" and a "builders' guide" were naturally, almost inevitably, united. Almost inevitably, because not only are the two interests closely allied, but, in 1868, while neither alone promised effective support for an organ, both together seemed clearly to promise such a support. But now either is entirely adequate to support an organ of its own. It is a question for the future, not necessarily for the immediate future, whether the time will not come when the Record and Guide must be divided into its constituent elements, into a "Real Estate Record" on one hand and a "Builders' Guide" on the other. It may suffice now to say that the united Record and Guide by no means neglects to maintain a lookout for the "psychological moment."

"We have grown together," Theodore Thomas once finely and modestly said to an acquaintance who was complimenting him on the skill and tact with which he had gradually increased the seriousness and severity of his concert programmes, and led his audiences to hearing gladly at last what they would not have submitted to hear at all at first. The Record and Guide may very appropriately apply the sentiment to itself and its subscribers. We have "grown together" in appreciation of what enormous interests these of real estate and building in New York are, and of what still more enormous collateral interests they depend upon and involve. These larger interests those engaged in real estate and building in the American metropolis cannot afford to be ignorant of, nor can their organ afford to ignore. The local interests being really national interests, since the prosperity of New York is so intimately and inextricably bound up with the prosperity of the country as a whole, it may fairly be said that, in so far as the Record and Guide has faithfully represented throughout its career the interests it has aspired and assumed to represent, it has performed forty years of public service.

WITH this number the CONSTRUCTION section of the Record and Guide appears in a form so enlarged, and with contents so diversified as to constitute a periodical by itself, irrespective of the Real Estate section to which it is still united, and which is its natural complement. If it shall be considered a striking and worthy exponent of the great interests in the metropolis and the contributory territory to which its appeal is made, if it shall respond adequately to the necessities of its subscribers in the building industry, in the varied manufacturing, material supplies, financial and property holding departments into which these great interests are divided, its mission will be accomplished. To be in a more particular sense a guide and source of inspiration for the multiplicity of trades and callings engaged in the great field of CONSTRUCTION, as well as a record of their achievements, with a finer devotion and more singleness of purpose than ever before in the long history of the paper, is our new ambition and the object of the new departure. In the large territory to be served by the Record and Guide are numerous towns and cities of commercial status, which makes it, when taken together with the immediate metropolitan district, by far the greatest building-material market in the world. It not only requires the largest quantities of common materials, but it is singularly appreciative of new devices, new materials, new forms of construction and equipment, and it gives the best rewards for clever workmanship. To our readers in this inviting field we shall give all the news regarding building construction of every kind. We shall cover new building methods and ideas, descriptions of new buildings, personal news, trade gossip, the prices of building materials, and the possibilities for the sale of supplies and equipment. The paper will really be a live weekly journal for the architect, the building contractor, the building material dealer, the salesman and the owner engaged in building operations. From the leading men in every class here named have been received encouraging, and in many instances touching, expressions of goodwill, congratulating the Record and Guide upon the arrival of the paper's fortieth birthday, upon its having kept abreast of the times, upon its purposes for the future, and upon its long devotion to the interests which it represents—sincerely, impartially and with the highest probity—all of which evidence of esteem and friendship the Record and Guide acknowledges with profound gratitude.

SAFEGUARDING BANKING DEPOSITS.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide:

A financial upheaval of unparalleled severity is now passing away and it would seem appropriate to review some of the lessons which can be learned from it.

The trust companies were severely drawn upon during that crisis by the depositors, who thought their cash was in peril, and they were alarmed by many of the newspapers and some of the officers of the banks in the city, on the ground that the trust companies' business ventures had been risky and their reserves inadequate. In one instance their criticism was correct, but that some of the banks were not free from criticism is proved by the fact that in the old City of New York but one trust company suspended payment, whereas the number of banks which went to the wall numbered seven. Included in this list were National banks, State banks and some members of the Clearing House. So far, therefore, as failures are concerned, there is no more sanctity in bank per se than in a trust company, or in a member of the Clearing House, or one not a member.

The question of reserve, however important, and no one can gainsay its importance, is not the only question that determines the solvency of an institution, for it is to be kept in mind that the wrecks of the financial institutions could not have prevented by mere reserves of the amount usually considered adequate. Solvency is a question of "assets," and not one of "reserves." It is, however, not the purpose of this communication to go into the controversies which have arisen in connection with the question of reserves, but to point out some of the things which the public can learn from the bitter experience of the recent past to aid it in selecting an institution in which to put its funds.

The trust companies have gone through the ordeal very successfully. Even their most bitter critics must admit this. One of the reasons why they have done so is, in the opinion of the writer, because they have in the main loaned only on good available security. Wherever they have done this, they have responded to the calls upon them very successfully. The function of a bank is to aid the merchant. This it does by the lending of money on the paper of merchants and of its customers. This, in my opinion, should not be done by a trust company, and consequently a merchant who requires credit to carry on his business should select a bank, and not a trust company as his depository. As commercial banks making discounts to their customers do not ordinarily pay interest on their accounts, regarding the privilege of such discounts as an offset to the interest which the deposit would carry, the non-mercantile public will prefer for its uninvested capital to take a trust company as its depository, because interest can be obtained upon the deposit. How, then, can such a depository be best selected?

First: By avoiding those which promise large rates of interest. The temptation to invest in risky ventures to make any return on the business after paying high rates of interest on the deposit, is so great that the interests of the depositor are imperiled.

Second: By looking carefully at the personnel of the directorate and officers. If they are "Napoleons of Finance" and men engaged in prodigous speculation and in the financing of immense undertakings, avoid the institution. Profits on legitimate banking are small, and if they are made large by such ventures, it is only a question of time when the institution will fall a victim to its own greed. The character of the officers and directors is probably the most important thing to look at.

Third: Avoid institutions in which the so-called "big men" are the ruling spirits. The small men, if men of character,

PROSPECTS OF THE COMING SEASON

EPIGRAMMATIC INTERVIEWS WITH LEADING MEN IN VARIOUS TRADES

T present there is not much activity in building operations in New York City," said Mr. E. V. Eskessen, secretary and treasurer of the New Jersey Terra Cotta Company. "Outside of New York the proportion of public buildings going up is unusually large, the proportion being due principally to the falling off in private enterprises. These structures include schools, city halls, post offices, etc. However, the prospects are very good for more favorable conditions in New York."

"The amount of estimating that we are doing shows that things are picking up. There are many people who want to build and are securing figures, but there is even yet a little hesitancy about going forward with the work." This optimistic expression was given by Mr. McCormick, of the Porter Screen Manufacturing Company.

GARAGES IN THE LEAD.

"Among private enterprises the garages appear to be in the lead," was an idea thrown out by Mr. G. H. Cheesman, of the Otis Elevator Company, when asked for an opinion regarding the outlook in building circles. "Of course, there is not so much going on as we would like to see, but after the financial difficulties experienced all over the country the prospects are exceedingly bright."

Mr. Goss, president of the Empire Brick and Supply Company is hopeful: "We cou'd not expect everything to be booming after the trouble experienced in financial circles, but, taking the conditions of the winter into consideration the outlook is very promising. Apparently there are many who want to build, but the effect of the panic is not entirely over."

Mr. W. P. Corbett, general manager for the Alsen Cement Company:

"While no conservative business man looks for any great boom in business, yet there is every reason to believe that conditions are improving to the extent that warrants a moderate advance in cement prices and a relief from the deplorable conditions which have existed this winter, and which were the cause of many standard mills closing down, more or less completely. There is a great deal of large work, such as railroad construction, that has been stopped or curtailed, but the general and increasing demand from small users helps to offset that in many cases.

CEMENT FOR THE BARGE CANAL.

"In New York State especially there is a considerable amount of cement being used in connection with the barge canal work, one company having about 300,000 barrels booked, and others large quantities. The outlook is bright, especially for next year, when dealers expect to have prosperous times again."

Mr. Samuel Worthington, of Phillips & Worthington, contracting engineers:

"The financial situation certainly put a crimp on business. When conditions are affected as they have been during the last six months luxuries are always among the first to suffer. Those who deal in necessities have not so much reason to complain. In spite of the check given to business there is more money in the United States now than there ever was, but there is a stringency owing to the desire for higher rates. The relief depends upon the money market. The prospects for this year are problematical. If money becomes more available, naturally business will pick up. The labor conditions have also to be taken into consideration. When a $500,000 structure is planned the estimates have to be made for at least six months in advance, and this is very difficult at present."

Mr. G. C. Emrich, superintendent for the Cutler Mfg. Co., manufacturer of mail chutes:

"Apparently there is an increase in the number of loft buildings being erected. The fact that this is the year of the general elections, added to the acute financial conditions, makes everything in business circles a little unsettled. The outlook could be better."

THE ELECTRICAL TRADES.

Mr. W. H. Roberts, of W. R. Ostrander & Co., electric light supplies, etc., which does business from coast to coast:

"The improvement in business since the first of the year has been very decided. We did not curtail the number of our employees throughout the winter, and reports have been satisfactory from all over the country. There are many who are ready to build, but they are hesitating in the face of the experience through which we have passed. The elections should not affect any legitimate business, although there is always a feeling of uncertainty until they are over. We can see no reason to be apprehensive of what is to come and are looking for a good year. A comparison with the business for this year, since the first of January, with the same period last year, is most encouraging. This is, of course, bearing in mind the financial troubles of the winter and their effect."

Mr. Dennis G. Brussel, electrical contractor: "It can be safely said that there will be few large enterprises this year in the construction line. It is now that figures are secured preparatory to building in the spring and summer, and the inactivity in estimating now means that this year will have a poor showing as compared with last year. I must say that the prospects for the year are far from bright. This is in regard to New York City.

"Elsewhere the activity in construction work appears to be in its normal condition—good for this time of the year. For big undertakings there is considerable difficulty in securing the necessary financial assistance. The loosening up of the monetary situation appears to be the solution of the problem. The work in progress now is principally the finishing up of contracts signed last year before the financial troubles started."

PROBABLY LESS STEEL CONSTRUCTION.

Mr. John Cooper, proprietor of the Cooper Iron Works: "Judging from the estimating now in the market, the construction work for this year will be much less than last year. The estimating for nearly all enterprises more or less large is generally done at this time of the year, and there is comparatively little of it now. Business has been quiet, but it has improved the last month or so. The stringency in the money market is, of course, largely responsible for present conditions. With this remedied things will pick up."

Mr. Kenny, of the Kenny Mfg. Co.: "Business has been brisk and has steadily improved since the first of the year. In fact, it is about as good as last year. As to the outlook for the future, that is uncertain, but we are ready for any opportunities that may arise."

Mr. Jos. Fuchs, general contractor: "I believe that money is loosening up and that it will mean a great deal for the building trade. Only yesterday a gentleman offered all of the second mortgages desired. When he was asked about raising $200,000 to make possible the undertaking of a building enterprise he said that he thought that he could obtain it without much difficulty.

"At present we are waiting for the warm weather to set in permanently and then hope to see conditions much brighter."

COLLECTIONS ARE GOOD.

Mr. H. G. Homer, treasurer of the Commonwealth Roofing Co., 17 Battery pl: "From the financial standpoint collections are good. To be sure, money is tight, but with closer attention to the accounts and a little more pressure than usually exerted, money is coming in nicely."

Mr. J. P. H. Perry, of the Turner Construction Co., 11 Broadway: "Our superintendents in the States of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts, where they are engaged in investigations to find out what construction work is contemplated, report that the prospects for next year are very good. In fact, the indications are that next year will surpass last year in construction work.

"We do not look for a busy summer, but we expect a steady improvement from now until next year, which ought to be a banner year. In the anticipation of this, we have retained our best men, even in this slow season, so that we will be ready for the increased activity."

Mr. Albert A. Volk, 56 Beaver st, wrecking contractor: "There has been more estimating this year than there was in the same period last year. But this does not mean that we are going to have a good season. The industrial establishments are not planning to add to their plants, owners of property are not making so many improvements, and inquiries are not so frequent. The speculative builders, on the other hand, are going ahead and receiving estimates for summer work.

"As to what is in store for us this year, a wrecker is one of the last to be able to make a forecast. Although in a community with few vacant lots he is the first to begin actual work before a building can be erected, he is practically the last to be consulted when the estimates are being received. For this reason it is difficult for him to give any accurate idea as to what may be expected in his line."

ACTIVITY IN CEMENT.

Mr. Kane, of the John P. Kane Co., 287 4th av: "In the cement line we are closing more contracts than we ever did. This is partly to be attributed to the additional uses to which cement is being put, such as in the laying of foundations for pavements. Outside of cement, business could be better, although it is improving steadily."

Mr. Lounsbury, of Fredenburg & Lounsbury, dealers in front brick, 289 4th av: "The present inactivity is caused by the inability of contractors to secure the financial assistance necessary to proceed with large undertakings. There has been no improvement since the first of the year and at present there is no sign of conditions becoming better. The prospects for a good year are certainly not bright."

Mr. H. Males, of the Manhattan Metal Ceiling Co., 406 East 23d st: "Business seems to be improving and we are looking for a busy spring and summer."

Mr. Henry Maurer, of Henry Maurer & Son, fire brick, 420 East 23d st: "Business has been poor, but there has been a slight improvement recently. We look for this improvement to continue and increase. We cannot expect a good year, but business is assuming a very healthy condition."

Mr. Leo. Oppenheimer, manufacturer of drying frames, 419 1st av: "Our business is mainly in connection with the erection of apartment houses and the fine tenement houses, and as there are few of these going up, the opportunities for closing contracts are few. However, we are hoping for busier times, although the outlook is not encouraging just now."

Mr. Walter G. Earl, superintendent for the Rheinfrank House Wrecking Co., 620 East 14th st: "Outside of New York business was never so good as it is now. In the city the demand is poor, being not due entirely to the financial trouble. With the tunnels and subways bringing the people to the outlying sections in such a short time, it will not be long before the business section proper of New York City will be as quiet at night as the streets of London."

Mr. G. W. Smith, 542 West 127th st, fireproof drying frames: "There was little or no business the first of the year, but there has been an improvement since early in March. I am looking for a bright spring."

Mr. L. C. Anderson, president of the Roof Maintenance Co., 55 East 124th st: "The hard times do not affect us so much as we have many contracts extending over several years. There are not so many new contracts being signed as at the same time last year, but as our busy season comes later, we hope for a decided improvement."

Mr. M. Fleck, 123d st and Pleasant av, who makes a specialty of ash cans and drying clothes frames: "Business has been very dull and there is no sign of improvement. There are few apartment and tenement houses going up, and this is what affects our line most."

Mr. M. Rothbart, proprietor of the Acme Metal Ceiling Co., 100 East 112th st: "This year has been unusually dull, but things are picking up somewhat now."

OUTLOOK BRIGHT IN WASHINGTON.

Mr. B. W. O'Hara, of the John P. Kane Co., who has returned from a trip to Baltimore and Washington in the interests of this concern, spoke as follows of the conditions in building circles in those cities:

"Apparently there is plenty of construction work in operation in Washington. I noticed that work is just beginning on quite a number of new structures. Many two-family and detached houses are being erected and the demand for material is fair.

"In Baltimore the rebuilding after the great fire of several years ago seems to be about completed. The business section is built up again and there is less activity in that city."

Mr. O'Hara visited Washington primarily in connection with the large contracts which the Kane company had for supplying cement for the new academic buildings in the navy yard and the House of Representatives Office Building. For the former group the contract called for 40,000 barrels and for the latter 20,000.

Mr. Oscar R. Maicas, of the Kreischer Brick Mfg. Co., 119 East 23d st: "We believe that the existing quiescent state of the material market is merely transitory and that when the apathy prevalent among builders against starting new operations and among financial institutions against the extension of the necessary accommodations for building purposes has been dissipated, a resumption of the interrupted activity will be again legitimately manifest, although to some extent curtailed as compared with the unprecedented years of 1905 and 1906."

Mr. Dillon E. Ball, secretary and treasurer of the West End Mfg Co., 81 Murray st: "There has been an agreeable change since March 1 in business conditions. This applies to the section around New York. The improvement in the city proper has not been so marked. Everything appears to be quite uncertain. It is difficult to say what we should expect this year."

Mr. H. K. Jones, associated with Mr. Thos W. Jones, contractor, 180 Front st: "Times have been very dull, but there has been a change for the better within the past few weeks. We look for more encouraging reports in building circles."

Mr. Jas. H. Cobb, vice-president and manager of the New York Belting & Packing Co., Ltd., 91 Chambers st, who returned recently from a Western trip: "I think that New York is better off now than almost any place in the country. It is very dull in some of the Western cities. There is plenty of money in the banks and business men ought to expect a steady improvement from now on."

Mr. H. H. Peterson, secretary of the Fordham Stone Renovating Co., 1123 Broadway: "The number of plans out for estimates is very much smaller than last year, when we would have a dozen a day at times, but there are more out now than earlier in the year. We expect a change for the better with the opening of spring."

Mr. Roy H. McNaught, president of the Erkins Co., 4 West 15th st: "As our business deals mostly in luxuries, it is naturally very much affected by present conditions. I would estimate the falling off in business at between 40 and 50 per cent. This applies to New York City. Outside of the city the percentage is considerably less.

"There are an encouraging number of inquiries, however, and it is possible that things will become brisk."

Mr. Blanchard, of the J. F. Blanchard Co., manufacturers of fireproof doors, Flatiron Building: "There has been a noticeable improvement in business conditions within the last three weeks. As compared with last year the showing for the coming summer will be small, as the amount of estimating is not nearly as great as for the same period last year."

Mr. Albert Moyer, of the Vulcanite Portland Cement Co., Flatiron Building: "The money market has been the cause of the general depression and until it is relieved we cannot expect activity in business. There is no sign of any improvement, at present. Whatever change takes place will depend on the changes in the money market."

NINE ACRES OF CONCRETE WORK.

Mr. Harrison, of Harrison & Meyer, who did the concrete work for the 9 acres of floor space in the Singer Building: "We have noticed an agreeable change since the first of March, but we cannot look for a big year. Whatever is in progress now is the finishing up of contracts signed last year. Apparently the people who can build are holding back, as there are many inquiries but few plans out for estimates."

Mr. Thos. D. Connors, general contractor: "I believe that there are thousands of plans being held up as a result of lack of confidence on the part of those who can invest. I am looking for better conditions, as there has been an improvement within the last few weeks. The solution of our difficulties is in the money market."

Mr. G. H. Cheesman, of the Otis Elevator Company, 11 Battery pl: "The prospects for a good year are exceedingly bright. Last year was better, naturally, but the number of estimates being asked from us indicates that many structures of good size will go up this year. Some of the general contractors have more than they can attend to, and the same might be said of some of the architects."

Mr. H. Farrington, consulting engineer and manufacturer of the Farrington expansion bolt, 45 Broadway: "The coming Presidential election will keep business condtions somewhat uncertain. It has been unusually dull the past few months, but there is a slight change for the better noticeable. The outlook appears to be good."

Mr. J. W. Grainger, secretary of the Automatic Mail Delivery Company, Times Building: "Building seems to be more active on the Pacific coast than here, especially in San Francisco. There are plans out for estimates in the city, but the number is much smaller than for the same period in previous years. A number of office buildings have been projected, but the situation could look better."

Mr. Frank P. Bloodgood, general contractor and interior decorator, 29 West 34th st: "The year will not be nearly as good as last, judging from present conditions. We are expecting an improvement and this has started already, but it is not very pronounced yet. The financial stringency appears to be at the bottom of it. Contractors cannot secure the money required without paying very high rates."

Mr. Mark, of Jacob Mark Sons, 7 Worth st: "We have little reason to complain. Business has been good and we are looking for a busy year."

Mr. Welsh, of the Welsh Machine Works, 276 and 277 West st: "It has been very dull, with no sign of improvement. We are running on two-thirds time now."

Mr. Wm. J. Martwick, assistant secretary of the Tablet and Ticket Company, 381 Broadway: "Considering the unusual circumstances business has been good and is improving. Our general business is in connection with Wilson's paper letters for making signs, and advertising specialties, and we anticipate a good year, despite the past depression."

Mr. Bataille, of A. Bataille & Co., elevator enclosures, 587 Hudson st: "We have noticed no appreciable change for the better since the first of the year. We are estimating more now, but there is little promise of building activity."

Mr. Johnson, of the E. J. Johnson Company, 38 Park row, roofing slate: "Within the last two weeks there has been a very decided improvement. The reports which we have received from our representatives all over the country indicate the opening of a good season."

THE ARCHITECT
WHAT HE HAS DONE RECENTLY AND WHY HE DID IT.

NEW BROADWAY THEATRE AND OFFICE BUILDING.

Harry Levey, Owner. V. Hugo Koehler, Architect.

SOMETHING NEW IN THEATRE CONSTRUCTION

We publish with this issue a picture from the completed plans of V. Hugo Koehler, architect, of the buildings which are to be erected on the southeast corner of 43d st and Broadway. All the leases of the stores and buildings on this property at present expire on May 1 of this year. The razing of these buildings will commence on that date and before June 1 it is proposed to commence the excavations for the erection of the new buildings, the cost of which is estimated approximately at $1,000,000. The frontage of this property is 105 ft. on Broadway by about 195 ft. on 43d st. A twelve-story office building with two tiers below the level of the street will cover the entire Broadway frontage and extend back about 90 ft. on 43d st. A theatre building will occupy the rear of the plot on 43d st, fronting about 105 ft. on that street. The office building on Broadway will have entrance on Broadway and on the Times Square station of the subway, as well as on 42d st, and will be provided with complete and up-to-date equipment in every respect. Five stories with mezzanine galleries will occupy the greater part of the Broadway frontage, but the corner on 43d st, together with a part of the second floor and the subway level, extending over the entire plot under the theatre, will be given up to a restaurant with an area of more than 15,000 sq. ft. A unique feature of this restaurant will be a stage where first-class vaudeville numbers will be seen during the dining hours. There will be an entrance from the theater into this restaurant, and the vaudeville feature will be controlled by the lessees of the theatre. The theatre will be given up to light opera, comedy and musical extravaganzas. While there will be no admission charged in the restaurant, the prices for food will be somewhat higher than is charged in the first-class restaurants of this city, and in this case it is proposed to provide the New York public with a resort for epicures which shall be second to none in the world anywhere. To make this possible, culinary devices and equipment will be provided of the most elaborate kind, and the mechanical equipment of the restaurant, including the hydraulic stage of same, runs into a very large sum of money. The theatre, too, will be a triumph of mechanical skill, so that most of the work heretofore done by stage hands will be accomplished with electric machinery.

The architecture of the office building and theatre will be Spanish Renaissance of about the middle of the Seventeenth Century, and will be executed in limestone, brick and terra cotta, and all metal work will be of copper, Verde-Antique finish. The architectural treatment of the interior of the theatre will be of the richest and most elaborate kind, with heavy plaster relief ornamentation and modelling, which this particular style of architecture lends itself well to. The color scheme will be different from any existing theatre in this country, and will be carried out in marble, glass, mosaic and painting on canvas by very able artists. The lighting, while being mellowed, will be so arranged that at all times the audience will be able to read their programs, whether the body of the theatre be darkened or not. The general arrangement of the sight lines and levels have been so designed as to bring the audience in closer touch with the stage, and care has been taken to raise the front rows, so as not to embarrass the performers, without interfering with the sight lines of the rear rows of seats in the auditorium.

The service of the office building and restaurant and of the theatre will be the best to be had; and while the price for office space will not be the lowest, it will be reasonable for the accommodations offered. It is expected to have the theatre ready for the presentation of a play by Jan. 1, 1909, and the office building by May 1, 1909. Harry Levey is the owner. No building contracts have yet been awarded.

MODEL LOFT BUILDINGS OF THE BUSH TERMINAL CO.

By H. C. TURNER, C. E.

There is being constructed in South Brooklyn a group of twenty modern fireproof loft buildings of unusual size and possessing many exceptional advantages both in construction and facilities over the usual loft building. In magnitude, this industrial development in the very heart of Greater New York exceeds anything of the kind in this country. The foundation for such an undertaking is the rapid growth of Greater New York with the accompanying increase in its manufacturing interests.

This article will deal only with the construction of these model buildings and the advantages of the type of construction which was selected. The buildings are being erected by the Bush Land Company, a subsidiary company of the Bush Terminal Company, who own about 200 acres of property located in South Brooklyn, on the water front, which extends from 28th st to 37th st, between 2d and 3d avs, and from 39th st to 51st sts. The Bush Company owns six immense piers and about 123 warehouses, and is engaged in a general wharfage and warehouse business. Their railroad system acts as a freight terminal for the trunk line railroads entering New York. This property, therefore, possesses the advantage of both direct water and rail shipments. The warehouse property is on the south side of the 39th st ferry. The property on which the model loft buildings are being erected is to the north of the ferry, starting at 37th st and extending to 28th st. These buildings are on the east side of 2d av, and are separated from the water front by the property recently acquired by the city for the South Brooklyn Market. This section of Brooklyn is experiencing a remarkable development, both from the residential and manufacturing view points; each is closely related and depending upon the other. The city has recently taken possession of the 39th st ferry and materially improved the service, and it is ardently expected that with the completion of the terminals and the installation of the new ferryboats a still greater development will come to this section.

The Bush Company retains a title to this property, and leases space in the buildings to tenants with light, heat and power, all of which are supplied from a central power station. The loft buildings are part of a comprehensive system of fire protection, with large pressure tanks, fire pumps and sprinklers, reducing to a minimum the fire hazard. The conflagration hazard is also removed by the fireproof character of the entire group of buildings.

Three buildings have been erected; the first in 1905, the second in 1906 and the third in 1907. Each building is 600 ft. long, 75 ft. wide and consists of 6 stories and basement. The total floor area in each building averages approximately 7 acres. A typical floor plan of factory No. 3 is shown in the accompanying plate, and it is to be noted that the stairs and elevators are so arranged that any floor can be divided conveniently into four portions, each approximately 75x150 ft.

A general exterior view of this building is shown in plate No. 2 and of the group of the three buildings in plate No. 3.

The columns are spaced 16 ft. 7 ins. by 25 ft. The story heights are 13 ft. 6 ins. from finished floor to finished floor. The floors are designed to carry with safety a working load of 200 lbs. per sq. ft. All of the buildings are constructed entirely of reinforced concrete, including the foundations, walls, columns, floors, partitions and stairways. No structural steel is used in the buildings, excepting the angle guards, elevator sheave beams and gravity tank supports, and no wood is used except for the finished maple flooring. All window frames and sash are of hollow galvanized iron, glazed with wire glass. All doors are of wood, covered with metal.

A fire originating on any floor would be confined absolutely to that floor, and should be controlled by the automatic sprinkler equipment, which has been installed in each building. Every effort has been made to reduce the fire risk to a minimum, and it is believed that these buildings offer security against fire losses equally if not greater than that offered by any modern loft buildings in this country.

Why was reinforced concrete adopted for these immense buildings, models of their kind?

There are three well-known types of building construction; namely, mill construction, steel construction and reinforced concrete construction.

Mill construction consists of brick walls, timber columns, timber floor girders and thick, heavy plank floors, and by concentrating the timber in large units fires are slow in gaining headway. Such buildings, while slow burning, do not offer substantial resistance to vibration, and are not satisfactory for heavy machinery loads, or for buildings higher than five or six stories. This construction was not seriously considered for these buildings, which were to be models, and as fireproof and durable as engineering knowledge could make them.

Steel construction consists of a structural steel frame, steel beams and girders, brick walls and hollow tile or cinder concrete for the columns, girders, and beams fireproofing, and for the floor arches. Such buildings, if carefully and sufficiently fireproofed, are durable and fireproof and offer considerable resistance to vibration. The high cost of this type of construction generally prohibits its use for warehouses and factories.

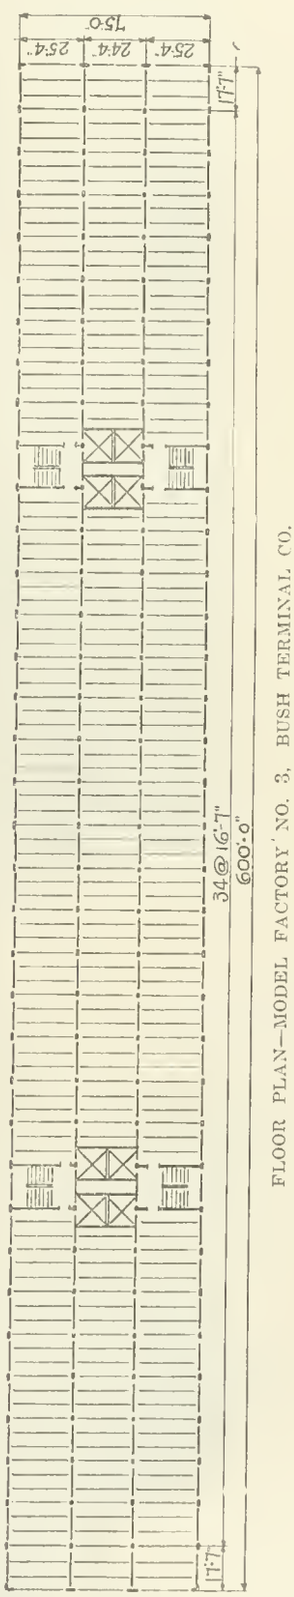
Reinforced concrete construction consists of an economical combination of stone concrete and steel bars, the concrete acting generally as the compression member and the steel as the tension member. Concrete is recognized as being the most fire resisting building material yet developed. It also possesses the great advantage of durability, increasing in both strength and hardness with age. This material is used for all portions of a building, including walls, columns, stairs and partitions, resulting in monolithic form of construction. Reinforced concrete buildings are more secure against vibration than any other form of construction, cost materially less than steel construction, and also possess the advantage of greater speed in erection.

Reinforced concrete was selected for the construction of these model buildings for the above reasons; namely, durability, fire resistance, freedom from vibration, great strength, and adaptability to all classes of manufacturing, economical water resistance. All such claims have been well borne out in both erection and usage.

There are a number of other reasons which account for the growth of reinforced concrete construction for manufacturing plants. The floors being of concrete do not warp or shrink or settle. It is possible to set up and adjust a long line of shafting without frequent readjustment, without wearing bearings and without loss of power due to unnecessary friction.

It is possible to set up heavy machines, such as printing presses, side by side in a long row, and find them in perfect adjustment every day of the year, which nets a great saving in maintenance charges and power. One owner of a large publishing plant in New York states that his new concrete building effects a saving of 20% in power over his mill buildings.



The floors are waterproof, thereby confining the water damage, should a sprinkler head come off.

Concrete is vermin proof, an important consideration in many lines of manufacturing.

Security against fire damage. Insurance companies are prepared to make special rates for reinforced concrete buildings. In one instance to our knowledge they quoted a net rate equal to 6c .per $100.00 on the building.

It is possible to secure larger window areas than in mill construction, thus insuring better light and ventilation for employees, and therefore greater labor efficiency.

Each floor is made complete at one operation, and is practically waterproof. It is possible to occupy the lower stories before the roof is constructed. This has been done in a number of instances.

A COLOSSUS OF THE BUILDING TRADE.

RECENT ACHIEVEMENTS OF THE BUILDER.

Geo. A. Fuller Co., Builder. Clinton & Russell, Architects.

THE COMPLETED CONSOLIDATED STOCK EXCHANGE

The new Consolidated Stock Exchange was constructed by the Geo. A. Fuller Company, Broadway and 23d st, the carpentry, interior trim and woodwork was executed by Messrs. Bottsfield & Dickinson, and the Van Kannell Revolving Door Company furnished the revolving doors. It is a notable structure on account of the importance of the exchange of which it is the home and as an architectural design, situated at the southern corner of Broad and Beaver sts, it occupies a space of twelve thousand square feet. Both facades present to the view a series of fluted Ionic columns. The main entrance is on Broad st, while the entrance of the Clearing House and executive offices are on Beaver st. The architects, Messrs. Clinton & Russell, 32 Nassau st, have given special attention to the purpose of the building, and its location gives the opportunity to secure excellent lighting and ventilation. The contractors achieved their work in record time, completing the structure in eight months, a month ahead of the scheduled time ready for occupancy. The building site was purchased by the exchange for $870,000, or at the rate of $72.50 a square foot, and cost to erect $300,000. The exchange floor occupies the corner and is one story, while the executive offices occupy the extreme eastern portion of the site. These last occupy four stories, while the exchange floor ceiling is open to the roof and is lighted by a great expanse of windows on the north and west and above by a dome of colored glass in the roof of thirty feet diameter. The result is a splendidly lighted and extended floor, well suited to the purposes of a great exchange of this character.

PAY FOR PRIVILEGE OF WORKING.

DECADE HAS CHANGED CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH WRECKERS MAKE CONTRACTS.

"Ten years ago wreckers were paid to demolish buildings; now they have to pay for the privilege. They are about the only source of income to the general contractor when a new structure is to go up."

This statement, made by Mr. Albert A. Volk, 56 Beaver st, a wrecking contractor, indicates the great change that has taken place in the business of demolishing buildings when they are to be replaced by modern structures. A decade ago, when the material in the old structure was of little value, as was usually the case, a general contractor would pay a wrecker to tear down or remove whatever was on the property to be improved. Nowadays, comparatively good structures disappear to be replaced by fireproof skyscrapers and a large part of the material can be used for various purposes. Wreckers now pay for the privilege of removing the old building, and they are about the only contractors participating in the work planned from whom the general contractor receives any financial assistance.

Oddly enough, the first to start working after a contract is signed for the erection of a building is one of the last consulted when estimates are being received. Frequently every detail of the cost of the proposed structure is known before a figure is secured from the wrecker.

"We can lay some claim to beautifying the city," said Mr. Volk, "as we remove many of the eyesores in the way of dilapidated buildings."

WHEN A BUILDING IS ENCLOSED.—It has been held by the courts that a building to be enclosed must have a roof to cover it completely, to shut out the rains and the snow. In an action brought to recover an instalment of money due under a building contract providing that when the building was enclosed the contractor should be paid eighteen per cent. of the whole cost of the building, the testimony was undisputed that, while the sheathing was on the sides of the house, the roof of the structure was not covered with shingles, but was covered with nothing more than small narrow shingle boards set about four inches apart to receive the shingles, and that consequently the rain or snow or matter of any kind could come through. It was held that the house was not enclosed within the meaning of the contract, and that therefore the instalment claimed due could not be recovered.

UNION OF PRACTICE AND THEORY.

Why Skilled Mechanics of Any Trade Are Always in Demand—The Value of Geometry

BY THE SECRETARY OF THE CONSOLIDATED BOARD OF BUSINESS AGENTS.

SOME years ago, the mechanic classed as a mason was capable of doing all kinds of work that came under that head, such as stone foundations, bricklaying, cement work, tile work, lathing and plastering and stone setting. To-day, in the larger cities, masonry has been much subdivided. The mechanics who follow this class of work are now known as the stone mason, bricklayer, stone setter, cement mason, plasterer, lather and tilelayer, and, strange to relate, each specialty is followed by a class of mechanics in itself, with thousands employed at a prevailing rate of wages recognized by existing agreements entered into between the employers and employes as follows, based on a working day of eight hours: Stone mason, $4.40; wood and metallic lather, $4.50; cement mason, $5; tilelayer, $5; stone setter, $5.50; plasterer, $5.50; bricklayer, $5.60.

The general contractor of today employs his own bricklayers and cement masons. To the employing plasterer he sub-contracts the lathing and plastering; in many cases the employing plasterer lets out the lathing. To the stone boss goes the setting of all exterior work, such as granite, marble or other stone; to the cement boss goes the cement work, and the tile boss receives the tile work, and so on along the line.

One of the finest pieces of stone masonry in Manhattan is the group of buildings known as the City College Buildings, located between One Hundred and Thirty-eighth and One Hundred and Fortieth streets and Amsterdam avenue, running east to Morningside Heights. The stone used on this group was quarried on the premises, and the white vitrous terra cotta trimmings used in conjunction tells the critical observer that the work was very precise.

In our large buildings granite and marble predominate. For the granite end take the new United States Custom House at Bowling Green; also, the New York Central Railroad Building at 44th street and Lexington avenue. Of the marble exteriors, take the Library Building on 5th avenue, from 40th to 42d streets, also the Metropolitan Buildings, 23d to 24th streets, from Madison to Fourth avenues.

Reinforced concrete and cement structures are now being introduced in Manhattan, one of the finest being the Hispania Society building located on 155th street, west of Broadway, and at this writing a large garage is going up at 64th street and Broadway.

Concrete and cement buildings are now being completed in San Francisco with an exterior finish of tile; and while this finish is in its infancy in the United States, the writer has seen exterior and interior finishes in tile at San Miguel and Fayal, in the Azore Islands, also in Sierra Leone, Liberia; and from advices the same finish is extensively used in Mexico.

There is one building in Manhattan that has an exterior tile finish, located on 23d street, west of 6th avenue, which was done some years ago. Some of the public places where tile work is used as an interior finish in greater New York are the subway stations, public schools, City College Buildings, fire houses, hospitals, power houses, hotels and office buildings, and under this particular industry, which has progressed in scope, more than any other product known in masonry, we have commercially the paving, marbleithic, ceramic, mosaic, encaustic, quarry, indented, decorative, printed, glazed, unglazed, vitreous, glass, rubber and Tiffany.

The bricklayer, stone mason or tilelayer cannot erect a wall, or set out the directions which it assumes in relation to other walls, without availing himself of methods which are essentially geometrical in their principles. The same is true of the carpenter, cabinetmaker, machinist and ironworker. Neither can the metal worker, coppersmith and boilermaker cut out on the flat the pieces of material which, when bent or curved or placed together assume the forms which they desire to make, without availing themselves of the principles of geometry.

Construction methods have been handed down from one generation to another, and the vast number of workmen do their work in complete ignorance of the fact, that the figures they construct are based upon the principles of mathematics; hence it follows that when work involving new designs is to be constructed they are at a loss to know how to proceed.

If to their manual dexterity and practiced training, all workmen would add a knowledge of the principles upon which their work is based, the work would be all the better, because more intelligently done; and with increase of intelligence as to the nature of work, will come an increase of interest in doing it, and the doing of it better will be the natural result.

It is the union of practice with theory, which gives to practice its highest value. That is why skilled mechanics of any industry are always in demand. ROSWELL D. TOMPKINS.

LIONS TO WEIGH TWENTY TONS EACH.—Four ornamental lions, each to weigh 20 tons, are to be cast for the U. S. Government by the Erkins Co., 4 West 15th st, this spring. Although the king of beasts is used very frequently for decorative purposes, it is believed that his lifeless reproduction was never undertaken on such a huge scale as it will be in this case. The lions are to be placed at either end of the new Connecticut av bridge in Washington, D. C. They will be 9 ft. high, 12 ft. from tip to tip, and will be cast from a composition that will almost defy time itself. The model selected by the Government was that made by Mr. R. Hinton Perry, a New York sculptor. Mr. Perry will make a full-size model from which the mold will be taken by the Erkins Co. This mold will be sent to Washington in about 150 separate pieces. It will be put together at the place where the lions are to stand and the casting will take place there. The architect who designed the bridge and its ornamentations is also a New Yorker, Mr. E. P. Casey. Before giving out the contract to cast the lions, Government representatives visited the best concerns in the East, investigating both quality of material and cost. Quality was sought more than anything else, and a New York firm secured the prize.

NEW AGENCY FOR BERKSHIRE CEMENT.—The Vulcanite Portland Cement Company, Fuller Building, has secured the sales agency for the Berkshire Snow White Portland Cement, which was placed on the market about six months ago, after thorough and successful experimenting. It is regarded as the nearest approach to pure white that has been produced in cement. A large quantity of this cement was used in the construction of the Hudson tunnel, and its fine color is seen in the facing of the interior. The mill is at Canaan, Conn. The Vulcanite Portland Cement Company is the sole agent for the United States and foreign countries.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS TO SCREEN JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER.—Ten thousand dollars for the putting of screens alone in a residence is a pretty stiff figure. Yet nearly that amount will be required to equip the costly mansion which Mr. John D. Rockefeller is erecting at Tarrytown, N. Y. The cost will be between eight and ten thousand dollars, according to the kind and number ordered. This amount would build a pretty respectable house in any city except New York.

The screen business occupies a large part in the finishing of a modern residence now. It frequently happens that a palatial home erected years ago was not provided with all of the conveniences recognized in these days as a necessity, and the owner instructs a concern in this line to "close every hole." The firm takes the entire responsibility, attending to each minute detail, so that the equipping of a structure with screens as an after-thought entails considerable expense, if the best are ordered and many are required.

CONTRACTS SHOW ACTIVITY ELSEWHERE.—The fact that there is more activity in construction work out of the city than in New York at present is indicated by the contracts recently closed by the New Jersey Terra Cotta Company. The largest one, to supply the terra cotta for the new city hall being erected at Yonkers, was for approximately $25,000. A $10,000 contract was to furnish the terra cotta for a new high school at Salem. Others were for the terra cotta required for the office building in course of construction in West 32d st for the Pacific Realty Co. (to be occupied in part by the new Builders' Exchange), for the new town hall at Skowhegan, Me., and for a costly residence at Montclair, N. J., for Mr. Ellis P. Earle, who is interested in the Nipissing mines.

ROOMS FINISHED TO SUIT MANTEL.—Leaving out the useful purposes which mantels serve in residences the more elaborate ones are almost invariably designed to be in harmony with the artistic effect desired in interior decoration. However, there are times when mantels are so rare and beautiful, especially those of Colonial days, that the decorating and furnishing of the room is carried out to be in harmony with the mantel. These gems are secured when very old mansions are demolished and fall into the possession of wrecking companies. In one instance such a mantel was secured by the Rheinfrank House Wrecking Company. It proved to be a "find" for a leading architect who was looking around for something unusually fine in this line, and he was so pleased with it that he decided to design the trimmings for a room in a magnificent residence especially to be in keeping with the mantel.

BUILDERS SHOULD MEND THEIR OWN ROOFS

By THEODORE STARRETT

A man was traveling on horseback one beautiful summer day through the mountains of Arkansas. He came to a lonely clearing in which stood a tumble-down hut. Sitting in a chair in front of the hut, tilted back against the door post, his feet tangled in the chair rungs, was a happy old party fiddling away for dear life. The traveler drew rein and a historic conversation took place. Part of it is here repeated.

THEODORE STARRETT.

"Say, old man," said the Arkansaw Traveler, "why don't you fix your roof?"

"Because I don't need a roof in this kind of weather."

"But when it rains you'll need to fix that roof."

"When it rains I can't fix it," said the mountaineer, as he went on fiddling.

Now is a pretty good time for the people in the building business to fix their roof. It's powerful dull all over the country. When things pick up the builders will all be so busy fixing other people's roofs that they won't have a chance to fix their own.

Some will say the building business doesn't need any fixing. "Just leave it alone." "It gets too much tinkering." Some will go further and say, "Why do you butt into our Eden, where all was serene?"

But the tinkering goes on and the fixing goes on just the same. It is idle even to discuss it. There's always some one or something to be dislodged as history unfolds itself.

What can one say about the business of building construction in this year of Grace nineteen hundred and eight that all of those engaged in it can agree on? Is there any statement that can be made with a view to improving the welfare of the builders—meaning everybody who helps to build a building, from the excavating contractor to the hardware dealer—that won't give offense to some one interest out of the scores of interests whose works combined make the finished building? Nothing but the widest generality will fit the case, and then there will be exceptions, in all probability.

The one statement which I think could most safely be made, with the least danger that the sayer would be roasted as an enemy of society or ridiculed as a self-proven incompetent, is this: THERE IS TOO MUCH COMPETITION IN THE BUSINESS.

There's a platitude for you. Who can take offense at that? Nobody in the building business, certainly. Nobody outside of the business can, either, if he knows what is meant. Not even the owner, who is the consumer in this realm, can possibly take exception to the statement that building needs a suppression of competition when he is made to know that suppression of competition means better buildings, more value for his money.

The great American industrial problem to-day is the problem of competition. The dictum "competition is the life of trade" might have been true in other days and in other situations, but the American temperament with its lack of reverence for that which is established—its recklessness—the gambler instinct—with the license which has been engendered by our liberty and fed by our teeming prosperity—the American temperament has caused competition to run to extremes that are simply impossible.

The history of our country teaches the cure for this evil. It is UNION. Everybody knows this. But everybody doesn't know how to bring it to pass. It was so with our country. Union made it, but it took fourscore years and more to decide what kind of a union. One part of the country thought one way; another, another. They had to go to war over it, and a million men lost their lives. Many a million of dollars, by the same token, have been lost in this business fight and many another will be, perhaps, before business finds, under the law, the way to UNION.

But the way is there, a lawful way, too, and the history of these United States of America, rightly read, shows the way.

A whole book might be written on this subject. I'll spare the reader.

The way to get rid of competition is to enforce it.

The oil business was once in a condition of prostration brought on by unchecked competition. The Standard Oil Company, that most perfect of business organizations, was built up out of the ruins resulting from insane and suicidal competition. And none should grieve for the Kilkenny cats that were busy eating each other up in those good old days. The dear old Standard may have got things a little too well fixed to suit some of our political leaders, but the older condition could not continue.

The railroads were busy destroying themselves with competition until necessity drove them into a harmony of action which was once carried on secretly and in fear of the law against restraint of trade, but the ruin which impended through excessive competition forced the issue and now there is every indication that the law will recognize the benefit to the public as well as to the railroads of harmony, and under proper safeguards actually protect it.

Union, under the law, is the cure for the ills resulting from unrestricted competition.

The builders might take a lesson from their workmen and unionize. But they will do what the trade unions must do, carry on their concert in a lawful manner.

There have been lots of decisions against unions for striking, boycotting, etc., but I never heard of one where any court even threatened their rights to claim wages and hours to their (the unions') satisfaction, and I think no court ever will. Courts only interfere with the means by which harmony or concert of action is produced, and as the new spirit of COOPERATION gets abroad in the land there comes a time when no unlawful methods are used or need to be used.

The employers can take a leaf from the workingmen's book and can profit by all the years of the workingmen's struggles.

And one of the first things—and the last—that they can take is that they can't reckon for long without the host—the consumer or owner, or, to put it more broadly, the public.

I don't intend to go into a talk on the evils of secret methods of restricting competition or a discussion of such unfortunate circumstances as that in February of this year the unions of New York City reported that one hundred and seventy-five thousand of their members were out of work, or that ninety per cent. of the bricklayers, numbering thirteen thousand, were idle.

No, each man, whether employer or employee, can do his own thinking about this question, based on his own experience.

The two parties in the conduct of building operations—employers, called by the public contractors—and mechanics, segregated by the public from the rest of humanity by the very name, "trade-unionist"—are together a much misunderstood and maligned class. Contractors are supposed to be wallowing in money and to be fair game. Trade-unionists, too, are likewise putrid with money and envied and, perhaps, hated by their less (?) fortunate fellow-workers who don't belong to unions and who don't know anything about the precarious job of the unionist, with its days and days of lost time through lay-offs and hunting for new jobs.

The building world is just like the social world. It has its submerged tenth at the bottom—despairing, hopeless—and its emerged tenth on the top—arrogant and powerful. But the eight-tenths in between are the ones that can control and they will control.

There is at present a lack of balance—an undesirable lack of balance, too—in the building world—perhaps greater in New York than in any city in the world. At one end are the buildings made to sell. Sometimes a fire starts in one of them and the public reads in the paper columns and columns of stuff about fireproof construction being a fake, etc. At the other end are the buildings erected as monuments to great financial institutions which have been constructed so extravagantly as to discredit all construction for investment. "No one per cent. investment in mine, thank you," says the capitalist who is approached with any proposition to invest.

What is needed is to find the middle course between these two extremes.

The public is now apparently letting the building business severely alone. They have been buying too much work that is too cheap and getting disappointed with too much that is too dear.

No one will deny that the buildings which are too cheap are so because of excessive and unwholesome competition. Perhaps you can't see that the too dear ones are so because of the same competition, but it is so. The pendulum swings back from the buildings made to sell—it swings as far back as it has gone forward on its wrong course. Too expensive construction is the reaction from too cheap construction.

Stop the too cheap work and the too dear work will take care of itself.

It takes a bold man to talk about reform. There's always a SYSTEM which profits by a continuance of the existing status, and even the plain people would often rather hear the ills they have than fly to others that they know not of.

A great labor leader once said that any man who attempted to work reforms for the benefit of his fellow workman was sure to be destroyed for doing it. "But," he continued, "the thing is worth trying, anyhow." My friend was wrong in one respect. They didn't destroy him, though he kept up the work. Even in barbarous times they didn't make martyrs of all the ones "that loved their fellow men."

Moses killed an Egyptian task master for abusing one of his fellow countrymen, an Israelite like himself. He was marked for slaughter by the Egyptians because he was betrayed for this humane (?) act by some of his own people, but he fled and lived to lead them out of bondage.

But I was talking about builders fixing their own roofs now that they haven't so many other people's roofs to fix.

Say, good people of the building world, why don't you fix your roof? Quit fiddling. Read the handwriting on the wall and at least stop up a few holes while you have a chance.

WHO'S WHO IN BUILDING—I.

WHEN the Sixth Avenue Elevated Railroad was being built a young man named Wills had charge of a section of the foundation work. New York had passed through an era of stagnation, following the panic of 1873. For nearly five years the people had kept their money locked up. They would neither lend nor use it.

Locked-up money helps to depress values, and real estate was at a low ebb. There had been a complete cessation of building operations in the fashionable residential district. The panic made scores of houses tenantless. Prices fell so that by 1876 residences of the first class, which could not have been purchased in 1873 for $85,000, could now be bought for $60,000.

A good deal of this decline was represented by the fall in wages and prices of materials, and a part by the depreciation of the currency, as the country was getting down from the greenback basis. All property suffered from the effects of the panic, though real estate was the last to feel it, and that not until the fall of the following year. For a time there was really no market from which one could discover the plane of prices.

The building of the Sixth av road signalized the beginning of a new era of building. The young foreman referred to was a mason and had served his time under John T. Conover. Then when he was only twenty-two years old John Sinclair had taken him into partnership for two years. But the hard times came and they could not make it go. There was no building to do.

That was Charles T. Wills' first start in business. For a while in New York all plans for improvement, both public and private, lay dormant. To such a low point did the fortunes of business fall that even the cost of street openings on the West Side and the other local betterments that were ordered from time to time bore so heavily that property owners appealed to Mayor Ely for relief.

In the revival the elevated roads played the capital part, as they started again the northward march of improvements. Edward Clark purchased a block of thirty lots on Eighth av, between 72d and 73d sts, and the adjacent block of twenty-eight lots on Columbus av.

This transaction stands out prominently in real-estate history, for it was the turning point from the had to the good times, and was, next to the elevated road construction, the beginning of the great West Side movement.

Mr. Wills then went into partnership with John Sinclair's son, George, and they had some six or seven years of successful business together. Then they dissolved and ever since Charles T. Wills has done all his business over his own name.

Mr. Wills grew up with New York. As the houses became costlier and the office buildings larger his business likewise expanded, as he got his share of the best that was going. He has always done good work, and was never equipped so he could do any other kind.

The work he has done of recent years is better known to the reader than what he did years ago, so a few of the latter are here mentioned: The American Surety Building, corner of Pine and Broadway; the Johnston Building, Cedar and Nassau sts.; the Bank of Commerce Building, Cedar and Nassau; the New York Life, Leonard st and Broadway; the Presbyterian Building, 156 Fifth av.; the American Bank Note Company's former building; the Montauk Club House, in Brooklyn; the Jersey Central's buildings, the Judson Memorial Church on Washington Square, All Angels' Church, the Brooklyn Tabernacle, the Mail & Express Building, the residence of General Grant and many others, the University Club and Delmonico's.

More recent works: The Marbridge Building, Sixth av and 34th st; Morgan Art Gallery, at Hartford; Bankers' Construction Co.'s Building, at 29-35 West 32d st; Kent Hall, for Columbia College; remodeling residence of Mr. H. C. Brokaw, 825 Fifth av; residence for Edward S. Harkness, northeast corner of Fifth av and 75th st; the Brunswick Building, Fifth av and 26th st; Hamilton Hall, Columbia College; Chapel, Columbia College; Martinique Hotel; Royal Insurance Building, William and Maiden Lane.

Mr. Willis is a native New Yorker, and was born in East Tenth st. His father, Chalkley, J. Wills, was also a builder. His parents were both of English descent from orthodox Quakers who came over with William Penn.

Mr. Wills' ancestors in this country settled on the Rancocas River, near Mount Holly, N. J. Doctor Daniel Wills had a grant from King George III. for 8,000 acres. The old homestead and several hundred acres were held by the family on the old charter until a few years ago.

A CHANGE FOR TUCKER & VINTON.

AN interesting change has occurred in the affairs of Tucker & Vinton, the well-known concrete engineers and contractors.

Mr. Ross F. Tucker has resigned his position as president and director of this company to accept the position of consulting engineer of the American System of Reinforcing, to which company Tucker & Vinton have sold their patents and processes for manufacturing unit girders and columns.

This system, combined with the wire mesh slab reinforcement, the well and favorably known product of the American System of Reinforcing, furnishes Mr. Tucker with a complete reinforcement system of great elasticity and absolute accuracy.

Mr. R. L. Bertkin will be chief engineer and Mr. Tucker's first assistant. Mr. Tucker has taken commodious quarters at 35 East 22d st, the new headquarters of the Building Trade Employers' Association. In the meantime Tucker & Vinton have moved from their former and somewhat inconvenient quarters to the new Terminal Building at 41st st and Park av, Mr. Vinton having taken the presidency and treasurership of the old company. Mr. P. H. Trout is the general superintendent, and Mr. Davis Carpenter is secretary and manager of the Vault Light Department.

Mr. Vinton reports that during their first seven days' occupancy of the new building they signed seven contracts.

BEDLOE'S ISLAND BECOMES A FORT.—The soldiers' retreat erected on Bedloe's Island by Miss Helen Gould during the Spanish-American War is being demolished by the Rheinfrank House Wrecking Company, preparatory to the construction of quarters for the signal corps and regulars to be stationed there. The island has been designated "Fort Wood," and will be utilized by the U. S. Government. The structures being razed are in good condition. They provided accommodations for the recuperation of the soldiers who suffered as a result of the part they took in the war. A seawall has been built around the island.

HOW AND WHY I BUILT MY HOUSE OF CONCRETE

By ALBERT MOYER, Assoc. Am. Soc. C. E.

TO the lay mind a well-defined style of architecture means something following in the traditional footsteps of our predecessors. The development of a new style of architecture must necessarily be an evolution, so it is not the writer's intention to discard precedent.

That an original style of American architecture is possible and perfectly rational is obvious and beyond question. These ideas have been carried out in a residence designed by Tracy & Swartwout, Architects, No. 244 Fifth av, New York, built on Ridgewood Road, South Orange, N. J.

The house is designed to accord with the natural surroundings and the material employed. It is not a copy, and is original. A recognizable and orlginal style of architecture is a rational expression of the principal characteristics of the people for whom the structure was erected, modified by the requirements of the structure and the available building material.

ALBERT MOYER.

If you employ concrete, let it look like concrete. Design for concrete, eliminate all thought of stone, brick wood or plaster. Let the house stand up and be able to say to the casual observer, "I am solid, strong, substantial, durable, beautiful, and am of concrete." That which looks right to the practiced and trained eye is right. For country residences, particularly where there are winding roads, trees, a hillside and possibly rocks, concrete treated as concrete looks right.

It would be difficult to dream out from the imagination an original style of architecture, using the materials which have been worked and overworked for thousands of years. The temptation to copy, translate and transplant is too great. It is simpler, better, and more in accord with nature's laws to develop an original style from the employment of a different material than was previously used in the development of the older styles.

Convenience and adaptibility seem to point to concrete as a material best suited to assist in developing, what I am pleased to call, American Architecture.

In using concrete for country residences I wish the reader to eliminate from his mind all thought of concrete such as he sees about him in retaining walls, bridge abutments, and other work where concrete has been employed, but to try to picture a concrete made of selected materials, the moulds or forms taken off as soon as possible while the concrete is yet green, the surface scrubbed with a scrubbing brush, or if the concrete is too stiff a wire brush, water being sprayed on with a hose, thus removing all the mortar which has come to the surface, and exposing the larger pieces of aggregates; in fact, throwing them slightly in relief, giving a rough surface of accidentally distributed different colored stones.

As the walls are erected in different courses, the lower courses are from necessity stained by surplus water running down from the upper forms. This is very readily removed by washing off the walls after the house is completed with commercial muriatic acid, 4 to 6 parts water, which further brightens up the different particles of stone and removes any cement stain which may be on the outside surface of the stone or the mortar which bonds the stones together.

The aggregates used in the house on Ridgewood Road are composed of 1 part Vulcantine Portland cement, 3 parts limestone and white marble screenings about the size of sand, 5 parts of ¾-inch trap rock, and 1 part of 1-inch white marble chips. When the boards were taken down, the surface had the appearance of the ordinary dead mouse colored concrete, but as soon as scrubbed and washed with a hose, all the particles of trap rock, white marble chips, bonded together by light colored mortar, were exposed, giving a surface which was slightly roughened, and a color effect and texture which is beautiful. Photographs do not do justice to the color of this wall, it is bright and full of life. By reference to the accompanying illustrations, it will be seen that the material used is concrete honestly employed, the source of strength is evident. Durability, honesty, simplicity and strength being the prominent characteristics. It is a true artistic, picturesque, monolith concrete house.

This treatment of concrete surfaces removes practically all the board marks where one course of concrete bonded onto another. It eliminates the danger of temperature cracks, hair cracks, etc., showing on the surface, and gives a wall which is 100 years old on the start and which will age beautifully. Vines will add to its beauty and if moss gathers on the north side, it will be still more beautiful. The effect is the same as that produced by a century of age.

To please the eye is to please the heart. Build to avoid the appearance of newness and with a feeling of modesty, simplicity, dignity and repose. The eye craves evidence of strength, honesty and stability, and the whole effect should be alive with purpose. All nature makes friends with a plain, solid, substantial concrete house. It harmonizes with the trees and landscape, even the mosses, vines and birds are attracted to it.

Such concrete is the reverse of that at present in general use. Instead of plastering the surface with mortar as is the usual method (which by the way is an imitation), all the mortar is removed from the surface exposing to view honest concrete. The surface of such a wall can be patched by a common laborer so that the patch cannot be found even by a practiced eye. It is not strange that when we arrive at simplicity and correct method, art is obtained and future trouble eliminated.

The foundation walls of the house on Ridgewood Road are 14 inches thick, resting on footings 20 to 22 inches wide, the ground having been previously thoroughly tamped. Chimneys were built entirely of concrete, the flue lining being provided for by 8x12 and 12x12 flue lining which acted as an inside form, thus making the construction of the chimneys very economical. Supporting piers and columns were also built of concrete.

Damp-proofing to cellar was provided for by an outside drain carried all around the house just below the cellar floor level. The outside walls being painted with two coats of Dehydratine, then plastered with mortar, forming a permanent protection to the waterproofing.

The walls above the first floor beams were lined with porous, hollow 2-inch terra cotta furring or partition blocks. This was accomplished very economically at the cost of about 10 cents per square foot complete. These blocks were set inside the forms or moulds similar to laying brick, the concrete being tamped in between the outside forms and terra cotta blocks, the blocks having been previously thoroughly soaked with water. It was found that the blocks bonded perfectly to the concrete, could not be torn loose in any place.

To avoid any possibility of dampness, these blocks were waterproofed with two coats of "Dehydratine," which not only clings with a perfect bond to the porous terra cotta blocks, but the plaster for the inside of the house hangs to the "Dehydratine" far better than to any lath which has yet been devised. This furnishes a wall which is solid and substantial, warm in winter, cool in summer, dampproof, and eliminates all possibility of condensation from the inside.

This wall was reinforced where necessary, particularly over windows, and four horizontal courses of ¾-inch wire cable were imbedded in the concrete, run all around the building, tying the walls together perfectly, acting as a reinforcement against temperature stresses, and making the house practically earthquake proof.

The concrete was very carefully mixed by hand. As each shovelful was turned, it was raked with an ordinary garden rake. This was repeated until an intimate mixture resulted. Mixing was first done dry, then wet, sufficient water being added to produce a medium wet concrete, which was thoroughly tamped in the forms in 6-inch layers, each course being carried to the height of about 3 feet at a time, and allowed to set hard before the next course was put on top.

The selected aggregates used composed all of the concrete. They were not put against the outside forms by hand, but were mixed all through the concrete, this giving an accidental distribution of white and dark particles far more beautiful than if the arrangement of the particles was deliberate. The walls above the water table are 10 inches in thickness; 8 inches of concrete and 2 inches hollow porous terra cotta furring blocks.

In describing the effect of this surface to the eye, it is almost impossible to present the color effect produced even by means of a photograph. Before viewing the house some architects criticized this method, stating that it would give too rough an appearance, others did not think it practicable from an economical standpoint, others expected efflorescence, and all kinds of trouble, but after viewing the house their opinions were changed, and it is now believed by some of the best architects and engineers in New York to be the correct method of treating concrete economically and artistically.

The difference between stucco finish or mortar face concrete and exposed selected larger aggregates, is that the stucco finish even though scrubbed or treated with acid would present to the eye, too fine a grain for the large space of wall. This fine grain surface even though of good color becomes monotonous. Some will say that the finished block of granite shows a fine grain surface which is beautiful, forgetting that when set in a wall, the surface of the wall is from convenience and necessity broken by the mortar joints. The surface of exposed selected larger aggregates gives a "Basso Relievo" effect, and their accidental, therefore natural, distribution throughout the concrete, not only avoids monotony, but brings about extreme beauty.

The window openings were provided for as the concrete was placed, by temporary wooden forms so arranged as to form a rebate all around the window frame on the inside of the concrete wall, so that a permanent frame could be set in this space, making the window water tight. The windows being set in the inside of the wall, showing shadows and depth of wall forming part of the architectural scheme. The sills were not placed until after the walls had been entirely completed. These were scrubbed on the sides but trowelled on the top.

The south porch, with its square pillars and plain caps ornamented with hand-made various colored tile, is noteworthy. The roof of this porch is a 6-inch slab reinforced with bars and expanded metal. The top of the slab is painted with two coats of "Dehydratine" on which was placed a mortar coat trowelled and finished, and cut in squares as in sidewalk paving. This has proven to be perfect waterproofing, and acts as a floor to the open porch above. The floor of the lower porch is a 6-inch reinforced slab finished on top with a 1-inch red mortar coat marked off in small squares.

The fireplace on this porch, which is one of the illustrations, was built up with the walls. It was afterwards decorated with the tile mosaic of the "Indian Making Fire," which was designed by Mr. Henry C. Mercer. This pattern, which is 20 inches in diameter, consists of pieces of clay burned in many colors superficially or throughout the body and unglazed. The tesserae are not rectangular as in Roman or Byzantine mosaics, but are cut in multiform shapes to suit the potter's process, and whose contours themselves help to delineate the design.

MONOLITHIC CONCRETE OF EXPOSED SELECTED AGGREGATES.
Residence Albert Moyer, South Orange, N. J. Tracey & Swartwout, Architects, New York.

As the lead in stained glass holds together the glass units, so does the Portland cement in these tile mosaics. The fireplace is furthermore a good illustration of a concrete design. No one could think of this design in marble, brick, granite, wood or other material.

The same may be said of the balcony under the large front window. This is also decorated with hand-made tile of various colors. This balcony was first carved out of clay as a model, the moulds being made of wood in accordance with the scale of the clay model.

MONOLITHIC CONCRETE OF EXPOSED SELECTED AGGREGATES.
Residence Albert Moyer, South Orange, N. J. Tracey & Swartwout, Architects, New York.

The fireplaces inside the house are solid concrete. Wood mantels of plain design are used; the breasts around the opening being covered with hand-made Moravian tile in colors and various designs. The hearths are of concrete in which are laid hand-made Moravian tile, glazed and unglazed. The mortar joints were not pointed; in fact, were purposely roughened.

There is no woodwork outside of this house which touches the ground, or comes anywhere near the ground. The roof is of dull red Japanese pan tile, the tile being taken from the run of the kiln, so that there were colors all the way from dark purple to salmon. The general effect being a dull red.

The beams supporting the roof were tied to the walls by means of bolts set upright in the concrete. The same method was employed in tying the floor beams and girders to the walls, so that no "battering ram" action could take place in case of earthquake. The floor beams were not set in the concrete, but rested on and spiked to 4x4s fastened to the concrete by means of bolts set every 15 inches. These bolts being firmly anchored. When the inside forms were taken off these bolts protruded 5 inches. The 4x4s to be used were then placed up alongside these bolts, and marked where they came. Holes were then bored through the 4x4s, which were slipped over the bolt, each bolt fitting in its proper place and screwed very tight by means of nut and washer. This method on first glance was open to criticism on account of shrinkage of the wood, but on futher thought the shrinkage would not be as much as the pressure of the nut against the wood, they having been screwed very tight.

The concrete back of these 4x4s was dampproofed with "Dehydratine." This method of providing for the floor beams was very economical and convenient, serving the purpose admirably.

Decoration and color of the outside walls were provided for by primitive hand-made colored clay tile, both glazed and unglazed. All tile mosaics were designed by Henry C. Mercer, and furnished by the Moravian Potteries at Doylestown, Pa. These tiles were set in design and placed inside the forms before the concrete was dumped in.

The size of the panels and their distribution were from drawings furnished by the architects. When the forms for the concrete walls were taken down, these board negatives were left in the concrete until the wall had been scrubbed. They were afterwards removed, thus leaving a 1-inch recess conforming to design, in which the hand-made tiles were placed, they being set in mortar, sometimes light-colored mortar, sometimes darkened. As Mr. Henry C. Mercer aptly expresses it, "I paint my patterns with clay paint, but I draw my outlines with your cement."

Each panel of hand-made tile produced most artistic results and forms a very handsome combination with the color and texture of the concrete surface. The color effect produced is glorious and yet unobstrusive, being of earth color and pastel shades of a very primitive nature.

With no straining for oddity, simply to be original, this house can well be said to be unique in this country. It is simple, dignified, the countenance is full of expression and alive with purpose, and it harmonizes with the natural surroundings and gives a feeling of strength and repose.

MATERIAL DEALERS' CONVENTION

THE fourth annual meeting and banquet of the Mason Material Dealers' Association of New Jersey was held at L. Achtel Stetter's, in Newark, March 12. A large number of representative retail dealers were present when the executive session opened shortly after one o'clock, and the number was greatly augmented when the associate members and visitors, representing manufacturers and wholesalers, added their presence at the beginning of the open session at three o'clock. Thirty minutes after adjournment the banquet was announced, and then the company, numbering about 150, gave undivided attention to the splendid menu, which began with a Manhattan cocktail and ended with coffee. The day's program ended with a visit to a vaudeville show attended in a body by the banqueters.

THE EXECUTIVE SESSION.

The fourth annual meeting of the association was called to order shortly after one o'clock by President Walter C. Shultz, of Hoboken. Secretary James M. Reilly, of Newark, called the roll, after which several communications from other associations of material dealers in various parts of the country and from friends of the New Jersey association were read. Following these, applications for membership were presented which resulted in the election of one active member and six new associate members. The report of Treasurer Horace P. Cook, of Newark, which was next presented, showed the association to be in excellent financial condition.

The address of President Shultz, which briefly reviewed the objects and success of the association's work, was received with applause. Mr. Shultz began his speech by stating some of the ways in which the association may be made to benefit its members, and related how, in many instances, trade conditions, from the dealer's point of view, have been improved since the organization of the association. He said that not only is there less interference from manufacturers in selling direct to consumers, but some of the large dealers who could have taken many orders from local men have kept out of their territory. "Your customers have also been protected from contractors who have attempted to pose as material dealers, and so get the advantage that the wholesale price would give them to underbid builders that are your customers," said Mr. Shultz. "There is a better understanding between manufacturers and dealers to-day than there has ever been before. Many of the former who did business directly with the consumer have not only changed their own policy but have done a great deal to influence other manufacturers to sell entirely through the dealers."

In concluding his address, Mr. Shultz said: "If there is an occasional sale by a manufacturer in your territory, do not take that fact as conclusive evidence that the association is doing no good for you. It takes time and work to accomplish anything worth while. We are going slowly and aiming at permanent improvements in trade customs that are bound to benefit you; hut the change must be brought about gradually. It would be unfair to ask a manufacturer to drop customers without giving him a chance to have them supplied with his goods in another way."

The president's address was followed by the report of the board of directors, presented by Secretary James M. Reilly, in which it was reported that three active members and sixteen associate members had been added to the list of membership during the year. According to the report, the total membership now on the roll of the association is composed of ninety-six active and thirty-five associate members. The address dwelt at length on the progress of the association work in the past and the efforts being put forth to maintain the policy of "Sell to dealers only."

On the report of the Committee on Nominations, signed by William C. Salmon and Horace Osborn, the following officers were chosen: President, Walter C. Shultz, Hoboken; vice-presidents, Charles Agnew, Paterson, and J. C. Richardson, Trenton; treasurer, Horace P. Cook, Newark; secretary, James M. Reilly, Newark. The three new members of the board of directors elected for a term of three years are Uriah F. Washburn, Jersey City; James P. Hall, Jersey City, and Edwin Demarest, Tenafly. The advisory board is composed of Charles W. Ennis, Morristown, and George W. Tomkins, Newark.

Following the election of officers open discussion was held on the proposed revisal of the lien law in the State of New Jersey, and upon motion all members of the association were requested to use their best influence with their various representatives in the Legislature to secure the passage of Assembly Bills 225 and 226, which have for their object the satisfactory revision of the lien laws. At this point there was an intermission of ten minutes before the beginning of the open session, during which time dealers and manufacturers held an informal reception.

THE OPEN SESSION.

Mr. A. F. Gerstell, of the Alpha Portland Cement Co., was the first to address the open session upon the subject of "Trade Customs from a Wholesaler's Viewpoint." Mr. Gerstell in a brief manner congratulated the association upon the success it had attained, and from the wholesaler's viewpoint said that he expected great good to come from the work of the organization. Mr. Gerstell said that the manufacturer looked to the retail dealer for co-operation and for the best results in distributing his product. He expressed the opinion that most manufacturers endorse the policy of the association in establishing the plan of "To dealers only." He suggested that the association elect an official from their body whose business it would be to meet the manufacturers' bodies and to lay complaints before them.

Following Mr. Gerstell, Mr. Charles Warner, of Wilmington, Del., addressed the convention on the same subject. He looked to the retailer as the proper party for the distribution of manufactured products, as the dealer was well acquainted with local conditions, the reliability of various consumers, and had all information necessary to a successful cooperation with the wholesalers and manufacturers. Mr. Warner said that he believed greater strides had been made in association development during the past six or eight years than in the entire existence of the world. He advocated harmony as an invaluable business asset, and said that the manufacturer or wholesaler who did not recognize the rights of the retailer in marketing products was only courting trouble and adding gray hairs to his head. In defence of the manufacturers Mr. Warner declared it unfair when the dealers of any community placed a ban on a manufacturer's business arbitrarily.

The address was greeted with applause, and Mr. Jones, of the Dexter Portland Cement Co., was asked to say a few words upon the same subject. After congratulating the association upon its success, Mr. Jones prophesied that the time will come when every manufacturer will recognize the rights of the retail dealer and that this will find its expression in the difference of price to dealers and consumers. He regretted that this condition does not universally exist to-day.

Mr. Howard B. Green, sales manager of the Whitehall Portland Cement Co., of Philadelphia, analyzed and explained the functions of manufacturers and dealers. He stated that the manufacturer's business was to make and advertise his product, and that the dealers should supply the brand which was called for by his customers.

Mr. J. M. Campbell was the next speaker on the program and addressed the association on the subject of "Trade Customs from a Retailer's Viewpoint." Mr. Campbell was followed by Mr. J. D. Loizeaux, of Plainfield, who made a few remarks upon this subject.

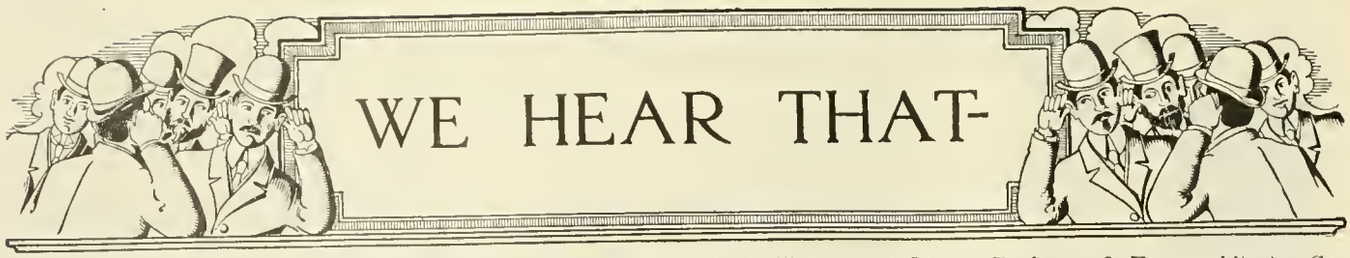
The president addressed the convention in a brief way on the subject of "Giving Preference to Associate Members in Placing Orders," and urged that the members of the association, all things being equal, reciprocate by purchasing from the associate members of the organization whenever possible.

There was an open discussion participated in by both manufacturers and retail dealers on the subject of "How Shall Cement Block Manufacturers be Classified?" Many active and associate members were called upon and responded to this subject, and the last one on the program, which was "What Should Constitute Wholesale Orders?"

The business of the day was concluded at five o'clock, when the meeting adjourned. The banquet began at five-thirty, and in the meantime the members enjoyed a social half hour. No speeches were made at the banquet, and after the feast the association attended a vaudeville performance in a body. Among the guests were Messrs. T. C. Cummings, C. W. Toxell, W. E. Crocker, and Allen T. Huke, of the Rockland Rockport Lime Co., of New York.

LEGAL CONSPIRACIES TO FLEECE CREDITORS.

To the Editor of the Record and Guide:



Mr. Guy B. Waite's remarks in your recent issue regarding the mechanic's lien law are not only pertinent, but they strike the nail on the head.

It is high time that the laws are amended so that unscrupulous building companies (and there are many of them in our midst) can be prohibited from forming LEGAL conspiracies to fleece their creditors.

Under the present laws it's easy money for the rogue, and he has his "coach and four," while the merchant is forced to patronize the nickel routes.

The Dillman Construction Company is making extensive experiments at its works with the material of plaster partition blocks, believing that a lighter material has been discovered to be used with plaster in the manufacture of the blocks. The experiments are also extending to the size and form of the blocks, with a view to lessen the weight and increase their sustaining power.

The preacher of a new principle is sometimes confounded at the utter inability of certain individuals to grasp the slightest inkling of his idea. This fact was brought forcibly home to Mr. Frank B. Gilbreth, the originator of the "cost-plus-a-fixed-sum" contract and chief advocate of its equitable principles. While inspecting one of his jobs recently he overhead the following lunch-time conversation between two of his bricklayers: "'Phot is this 'cost-plus-a-fixed-sum' contract the boss do be always ta'kin' about." "Shure, I don't know why he always sez 'cost-plus-a-fixed-sum.' There always do be some ye can fix and some ye can't, but 'phoy the —— he talks about it I don't know."

are the better custodians of your money. This is proven by the fact that many of our savings banks are ordinarily managed by men who would not be regarded as worth consideration by the people who are engaged in the business of becoming multimillionaires in the few short years that are allotted to the business life of the average man.

Fourth: Never be carried away by the size of an institution. See what proportion the capital and surplus of the institution bears to its liabilities. An institution which has one million dollars of capital and surplus and liabilities of $20,000,000, is not, as a rule, other things being equal, as safe as one with five millions of capital and surplus and liabilities of $20,000,000. This consideration is often lost sight of.

Fifth: Never trust the institution which is known to be a heavy buyer and seller of stocks, nominally called investment, but really speculation under another name. Look carefully at its assets and see whether they are in speculative stocks or whether they are in solid investments.

Sixth: Take the same care of selecting your depositary as you do of any of your other business concerns. Your money is not safe merely because the people who are eager to take it call themselves a bank or a trust company. The name does not give you security, nor does the superintendence of the institution by the State, valuable as it is, do so. You must be your own superintendent. Find out the kind of people you are to deal with before you trust them. If more of this were done by the public it would have a salutary effect upon the whole financial fabric. Never be worried because the people who deal with you are careful, so careful as to give you some inconvenience. You are safer with such people than with those who are not so.

Seventh: Never be deterred from dealing with an institution which is old-fashioned. It was in vogue lately to call this "unprogressive." Caring for money is an old business and in the main the rules for doing it safely have not greatly changed. Where they have changed, it probably has not been for the better, and although the stockholders of "progressive" institutions may have temporarily profited, the depositors have not.

Deal with the people who value the good name of their institution. Those who lend it to improper promotions, even when they do not run any financial risk, are to be shunned. This is highly important for you, for those who value their connection with the public will safeguard your connection with them.

Eighth: Look carefully to see that the institution is not run by "one man power." This is one of the danger signs. Deal with the institution that seems to value the counsel of its officers and committees. This is not necessary in routine work, but in affairs of importance it is a favorable thing for your interests.

These suggestions can almost be continued indefinitely, but in the main they will furnish a good guide to the public in selecting a trust depositary. Had some simple little rules like these been followed by the public in the past, the great losses which have occurred would not have been possible.

What has been said above is applicable to all classes of depositories, but as trust companies will probably be the institutions selected by the non-mercantile side of the community as custodians of their money, this communication is principally intended for that portion of the public.

TALKS WITH THE OWNER OF THE BUILDING.

BUNGALOWS AND HOW TO BUILD THEM

[Home-loving people are finding comfort and satisfaction in bungalows, which are solving the building question for many New Yorkers. Mr. William Jeffery, of Berkeley Heights, N. J., author of the following paper, is the vice-president of the New Jersey and New York Real Estate Echange, and has been a leader in the bungalow movement.]

THE American bungalow was originally designed by the writer to induce city people to live comfortably in the country during the summer. It was important, in order to meet the popular needs, to offer a simple structure at a low cost, where the housework could be reduced and comforts increased.

People's earnings vary, but the rent expense amounts to about the same in proportion, so a variety of styles of bungalows were in order at different prices. Great care was exercised in the details of construction to prevent the building of ugly, pretentious structures which could result only in reducing land values and make a veritable shanty town. So suitable restrictions are enforced to avoid these difficulties.

Many people are learning how to discard the old-fashioned parlor and carpeted halls, for these are not a part of bungalow equipment—just a few small rugs. No dress suits and costly garments are needed in this simple life; the children don't have to be kept extra neat and clean to suit the neighbors. Bungalow neighbors are wise, and the children too busy in the fresh air to bother with whims and notions of silly people.

Servants like bungalows because there is less work and no stairs. Most bungalow folks manage very well without servants—they send out the wash; and they always have available land for the hennery and garden.

The bungalow for summer use is simply a shell; to make it suitable for winter costs about as much again.

The shell bungalow is encased with wood, using sheathing and siding, or is built of concrete or cement blocks. If a wooden structure, the sills may rest on stone or brick piers set at least 4 ft. into the ground, so that the frost will not disturb the structure.

I am building cement block foundation walls under all now instead of the piers, with concrete to grade level and cement blocks above to sill; chimneys of rock-finish cement block. Using the the block foundation. Screens at each end for ventilation keep out rats and mice and prevent dry rot. Sods can be placed right up close to the walt.

The kitchen is an annex to the bungalow, and a cellar is put under that alone.

The items necessary to complete the transformation are as follows: Another floor, set on strips placed a foot apart to provide air space between the two floors, and to keep the bungalow warm.

Low lines are more attractive, showing the beams, which, when filled and varnished, together with the ceiling and interior decoration, look beautiful. Adjustable stairs; trap door over them in two sections, one for persons to go up and down, and both open permits large articles of furniture to be taken up and down.

Lath and plaster or plaster board and muslin, base board, wainscoting, moldings and closets, door saddles, paper for walls and picture molding, doors and casings.

When real cold weather comes the dear old open fireplace is closed and a modern stove installed, having heat radiation; open fires give too little heat and require too much attention, and in most cases draughts are affected by varying winds.

Cement block and concrete bungalows are popular on account of durability and few outside repairs and cost but little more.

THE COST.

I figure one to two dollars per square foot of floor space for bungalow shell, and an additional one to two dollars per square foot for converting into permanent all year round bungalows. This includes range, boiler, sink, wash and bathtubs and the builder's profits. A bungalow 30x30 shell would cost $900 and $900 more to finish—total, $1,800. This would be about doubled by elaborate finish and insertion of many angles and acute lines. A smaller bungalow having the same improvements would cost more in proportion; everything is the same in the smaller bungalow, except that the rooms are smaller.

Ordinarily the cost of a small bungalow shell, say, one 20x20, would be just one dollar per foot. $400 plus $400 for completing, exclusive of plumbing; this costs about $250. Total, $1,050.

These are not Western prices, but are those prevailing right here at Berkeley Heights, N. J., inside of 27 miles from New York, on the Lackawanna R. R.

After living last winter in our bungalow here we liked it so much that we have just completed another bungalow within 30 ft. of ours, for our six boys. They make their own beds, and attend to the work of their own quarters—in this way, with their workshop, a fitting opportunity is given the boys to learn on sound, independent lines. Each boy does what he likes best to do, and consequently does it well.

WILLIAM JEFFERY.

A STORY GAINED BY THIN FLOORS

WE are now fairly accustomed to seeing factories, warehouses, power plants and an occasional office building constructed of concrete, but apartment house architecture in that material in New York is still somewhat of a novelty. An example of such a building, designed by Messrs. Snelling & Potter, may be seen at 35 East 30th st. It has a frontage of 75 ft. and a depth of about 80, and is nine stories high.

A STORY TO THE GOOD.

One of the commercial advantages claimed by the architects for this construction is the extreme thinness of the floors; they are only about nine inches finished, the concrete being five inches thick, the finish four inches, three inches for floors and one inch for ceilings. This fact makes it possible, with a judicious distribution of the girders, to obtain a 9-sty building where eight stories would be the limit for the same height with any other construction. This is important, as the law limits the height of certain buildings according to the width of the street.

This story gained, it will be seen, also makes a considerable difference in the investment. The possibility of rapid construction and its great fire resisting qualities also do much to recommend reinforced-concrete construction for dwelling and apartment houses. There are, however, disadvantages as well as advantages in this new system of construction. The largeness of the interior columns up to about the fourth or fifth story is objectionable, as is also the great depth of the girders in kitchens and bedrooms. In the principal rooms, however, the structural members are used as the basis for architectural treatment and are very effective.

FACED WITH BRICK.

The wall-columns are built with an offset on each side to form a bond with the brickwork, which is a curtain wall of common brick on the court and rear, and is dressed with face brick, terra cotta and limestone on the front. On the courts and from the rear the house reveals a frank structural treatment; all columns and girders are on the same plane with the brickwork and consequently exposed to view, making a treatment of rectangular panels in brick and cement. The apartments of which there are two on a floor are admirably lighted by very large windows that run clear up to the under side of the concrete girder, which thus forms its lintel.

A wide foyer hall runs through the axis of the plan and leads to the elevators and the stairway in the rear. This grand foyer carrying nine stories of wall is no small feat in engineering, and is made possible by the nature of the material; coupled girders of reinforced concrete thirty inches deep do all the work. This solution is based on the fact that the economic depth of beams and girders for reinforced concrete is the same as for steel for the same carrying capacity.

On the whole the attempt to introduce reinforced-concrete in the construction of apartment houses seems a step in the right direction; the system may be capable of many improvements in its details, but the principle seems sound.

PASSENGER ELEVATORS.

OF recent books on matters affecting architectural subjects, none gives greater promise of effecting good results than does "Elevator Service," by Reginald Pelham Bolton, 527 5th av, which has just been published by that engineering authority.

Although elevators have been adapted to the increasing heights of business and hotel buildings, there has been hitherto no definition of the real work accomplished by an elevator, nor of its limitations, yet it has been increasingly evident that for some reason or other the work of elevators of similar character in dissimilar buildings was not alike and that in a number of cases great disappointment had resulted.

All this is made very clear in the work now presented, in which the operating conditions and the proportions of elevators to the building in which they are placed are brought out, and much information not only as to these points but as to express systems, car sizes, loads and speeds is clearly illustrated.

The relation of the floors served to the elevator work is the first point made, and it is made clear that with any given number of floors an average number of passengers will result in a time for the trip which will afford the maximum amount of traffic. The interesting thing for architects is that if too many passengers be carried on each trip, then the delay by the numerous stops is such as to result in a less number per hour being carried than when fewer are taken per trip. The author points out that the speed of any elevator may be of no avail if it be applied to the service of an undue number of floors, or be allotted so much traffic that its flights between stops become too short for its speed to be developed.

The larger the number of passengers per trip, he points out, the less will be the distance between average stops and the less will be the mean speed of the car; and in addition the greater will be the delays by passengers getting in and out and interfering with each other's movement.

The best effects are shown by diagram and computations and the conclusion reached that when the elevator's work is so planned as to handle the visiting traffic which runs each way, it has the capacity to operate the tenant traffic which is all in one direction.

In this way it becomes clear that a relation between the elevator and the building may be established, because, while the visiting travel cannot be estimated, the tenant traffic can be ascertained, and in the volume will be found statistics and suggestions by which for various classes of buildings, and for their varying location, such estimates may be made.

Some of the interior conditions are interestingly explained, such as the suggestion that "a restaurant on the top of a building divides the lunch hour travel and does not, therefore, always add to the work at that time," though a club will do so.

The diagrams include one in which all these features are brought together in such manner that the travel resulting from the operation of a number of elevators of known speed to any number of floors can be readily found and related to the occupied area of the building. Perhaps the part of the work that will most directly contribute to relieve architects' troubles is that relating to the proportions of cars, and here we find some extremely valuable and practical information. The relation between the area of the car, which means its passengers per trip and the number of floors that are served, is very enlightening, and the author has laid down for every number of floors served, resulting average loads for testing, for mean service and for economical balancing of parts.

There are four standard sizes recommended, and suggestions are made as to details in which the architect can contribute to economy in time and power. One good point is the space occupied by the operator, who in some cases is required to reach across the entire front of the car to operate the door latches.

A matter of great present moment is that of express service, the work and effect of which is clearly explained and illustrated. The author takes the point that the upper section of any building should receive equal service in time and convenience, that is, in the number of elevators and their schedule, as a lower portion, since if this be not provided, there will be eventually dissatisfaction with the service and lower rentals will be the result.

He says in effect that if a certain building has a value due to its position and conveniences, then if another building be added on top of it with equal conveniences, the upper building is of equal value and occupies practically the same position as to time and access as the lower part.

This leads up to the interesting point of the line of division between local and express services, which are figured and illustrated up to a total height of 36 stories.

The author shows that with the allotment of the proper work to each elevator an adequate service is assured, possessing the capacity to deal with both forms of travel, tenants and visitors, and to accommodate itself to the surges or irregularities of traffic, and finally having the maximum capacity to bring out the occupants in case of fire, a point too often lost sight of altogether.

FIREPROOF DWELLINGS: HOW TO BUILD THEM.

FIREPROOF HOUSES OF TERRA COTTA HOLLOW TILE AND HOW TO BUILD THEM.—A New Fireproof Construction for Houses of Moderate Cost and Other Small Buildings. National Fire Proofing Company, Flatiron Building, New York City.

Can private residences and other small buildings be built of fireproof materials at a cost which will compare favorably with frame or brick-and-wood construction?

"Fireproof Houses and How to Build Them" is the title of a unique booklet just issued by the National Fire Proofing Company as a working handbook on this subject. Its 63 pages comprise illustrations, plans and details of finished buildings and methods of construction adaptable to any proposed building. These reproductions and plans are of buildings ranging in cost from $1,000 to $30,000, and are simply types and examples of what has already been accomplished with terra cotta hollow tile and the methods of construction used to secure the results set forth. Most of the reproductions are of private residences, ranging from a workman's modest cottage to the palatial dwelling of the millionaire. The remainder include a post office at Briarcliff Manor, a stable in New York, a garage at Westchester and a church in West Orange.

Photographs show the general methods of construction used in the buildings described and are supplemented by a series of twenty-three drawings giving specific information as to details that can be readily applied wherever hollow tile is used. One of the most interesting plans shows how the difficulty of satisfactory roof construction has been overcome without the use of structural steel members. Here the plan shows a roof of reinforced hollow-tile construction which bears on the end or gable walls of the building and on cross partitions of hollow tile, built up solidly from the floor immediately below the roof. The entire load is, therefore, carried by the gable walls and cross partitions and there is no load to act as a thrust on the side walls. By the insertion of nailing strips or sleepers (as shown in a plan) the finished roof of slate, tile or composition, is readily laid. Plate 7 is interesting as showing the method of carrying pipes and electric wires through partitions of hollow tile. Figures 16 and 17 show a hollow tile wall with wooden floor beams, and a hollow tile and reinforced concrete floor construction. In fact, every detail of hollow tile construction in the type of buildings shown, has been worked out in actual practice and carefully set forth in accompanying plans.

Hollow-tile blocks of the type used in the construction of the buildings described were tested at the request of the Fire Proofing Company by Professor Ira H. Woolson, of Columbia University. The first ten blocks tested were of semi-porous material with six holes through. The thickness of webs was about ⅝ of an inch and the bed area of the blocks was 8 ins. x 12 ins. and the height was 12 ins. All four sides were scored to receive stucco or plaster. The average maximum load on each block was 137,700 lbs., giving an average of 3,292 lbs. per square inch of material used. The tests were witnessed by representatives of the Bureaus of Buildings of the boroughs of Manhattan, Brook'yn and Bronx, and a complete table of the results of each test is given at the end of the booklet.

As issued by the National Fire Proofing Company this booklet is not only valuable in showing what has already been accomplished in the construction of strictly fireproof dwellings and other houses of moderate cost, but it is also full of suggestions of what may be done further in this direction by the use of hollow tile. It affords a practical and complete guide to the architect for the erection of inexpensive houses of a substantial fireproof material which will render them immune from fire, increase their durability and lessen expense for repairs and depreciation. It shows how houses built in the manner described are warmer in the winter, cooler in summer, free from vermin, damp proof, inwardly comfortable and outwardly attractive. For such houses there has always been a demand, limited by the increased cost of construction.

THE CONSTRUCTION REVIEW OF REVIEWS-WHAT CURRENT PERIODICALS ARE TALKING ABOUT

DOINGS IN STRUCTURAL STEEL.

Undoubtedly the most important single operation in the construction world to-day is the work on the new rolling schedule of the Bethlehem Steel Company's Saucon plant at South Bethlehem, Pa. As this mill has been erecting, the Iron Age has kept its readers in touch with its operations, beginning Nov. 1, 1906, when an outline was given of the improvements, which involve an expenditure of twelve million dollars:

The new plant is now in operation, the rail mill started and the open hearth furnaces. The original plans called for basic open hearth furnaces, blooming mills, rail mill and structural mills. These were to be in a group about one mile east of the blast furnaces of the company. The starting of the rail mill will be followed by the beginning of operations with the Grey universal beam mill, and a third unit structural mill will start early in 1908.

The various articles in the Iron Age have detailed the installation and operations of the machinery, the scale of which is shown in a description of various appliances, among them the eight-hundred ton shear:

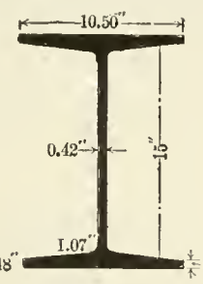

Fig. 2.

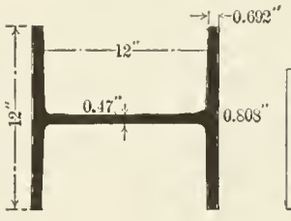

Fig. 4.

SOME OF THE NEW BETHLEHEM STRUCTURAL SHAPES.

(Fig. 1—24-in. I-Beam, 72 lb. per foot. Fig 2—15-in. Girder Beam, 73 lb. per foot. Fig 3.—30-in. Girder Beam, 200 lb. per foot. Fig. 4—Rolled 12-in. H Column. Fig. 5—Method of increasing area of Rolled H. Column.)

The blooming mill is equipped with an 800-ton shear, after a new design proposed by Henry Grey & Son, New York, and built by the Mesta Machine Company. It has a stroke of 18 ins., and the width of the knife holder is 5 ft. The shear is of the up-cut type and has one operating cylinder fitted with a plunger of 40 ins. diameter. The line pressure of 500 lbs. may be used or 1,500 lbs. pressure secured through the intensifier. The top knife is supported by the working cylinder, and this is carried by two side cylinders, to which water is admitted for raising or lowering the working cylinder, and with it the top knife. The stroke of the side cylinders is regulated by two screws operated by an electric motor, but there is this difference from the usual construction, that the screws are not subjected to any of the pressure of shearing.

The most interesting feature of the new work is the Grey beam mill, which is a universal mill. Instead of the horizontal grooved rolls of the ordinary beam mill the Grey mill has separate horizontal and vertical rolls. These form the web and flanges of an I-beam shape by combined rolling operations acting at right angles, thereby making it possible to produce larger and wider flanges than can be rolled by the ordinary beam mill.

Both web and flanges are produced in a manner similar to the rolling of universal mill plates. The Grey mills at Bethlehem are like that at Differdingen, Germany (also built by Henry Grey & Son) except that the Bethlehem mills are larger and embody many improvements and modifications that have been suggested by the five years of operation of the mill in Germany, which has been producing beams up to 30 ins. in depth with flanges 12 ins. wide.

By means of the Grey method of rolling beams, the section can be designed to give economical distribution of the metal, larger beams can be rolled and the flanges can be made very much wider than it is possible to produce in the usual beam mill. The wide flange beams rolled by the Grey mill in Germany are extensively employed in bridge and building construction in Europe, England, Canada and other foreign countries. The smaller sizes are used for column purposes and the deeper sections are used to take the place of riveted girders. The operation of the Grey mills at Bethlehem will make the advantages of such sections available to engineers and constructors for the first time in this country.

The Bethlehem special shapes are designed to meet the requirements of American structural practice. Three distinct types of shapes will be provided, viz.: Special I-beam sections, girder beam sections and rolled column sections of H shapes.

It is known to those familiar with the design of beam shapes that the webs of the standard shapes are thicker than is required for an economical section; but with the ordinary rolling method it is not practical to reduce the thickness of the web. With the Grey mill, however, the web can be made of the desired thickness and by adding part of the metal thus saved to the flanges the strength of the section will be preserved, with the result of a diminished weight of section for the same strength. The Bethlehem special I-beams will have the same section modulus or coefficient of strength as standard beams of corresponding depth, but by reason of the better proportion and distribution of metal between web and flange the weight of the special beams will be 10 per cent. less than that of the standard sections.

The Bethlehem girder beam sections up to 24 in. in depth have a coefficient of strength or section modulus equal to that of two standard beams of the same depth, but the girder beam weighs about 12½ per cent. less than the combined weight of the two standard sections.

Large girder beams from 24 in. to 30 in. deep will be rolled for use instead of riveted girders. A 30-in. girder shape weighing 200 lb. per ft. is the largest size of beam it is intended to roll at present. These beams of larger size than any now rolled in this country can be used to advantage as girders for buildings, crane runways, bridges and for many other purposes where otherwise riveted girders would be required, with a saving in weight or in cost of fabrication, and frequently with an economy in both items.

These special wide flange beam and girder sections may be used for columns for mill buildings and other purposes to advantage, but a separate line of rolled column sections of H shape will be provided, specially designed to fill the requirements of columns for building construction. Seven sizes of these sections will be provided, from 8x8 in. to 14x14 in., inclusive, varying by inches.

The columns for an ordinary 12 or 15 story building can be selected with the proper areas to suit the variations of load, and by using sections of similar shape throughout, the columns for the entire building can be made at the same rolling without change of rolls, securing a promptness of delivery from the mill unobtainable in the present system of column construction, where numerous sizes and shapes are needed to cover the same range of strength.

The plant is one of the thoroughly equipped electrically of the steel plants of the country. It is probably the first plant designed and constructed with a view to using electrical drive wherever possible. Screwdowns, reversing tables, transfer tables, shifters, saws, straighteners are all operated directly by Crocker-Wheeler motors. In fact, all operations except the driving of the rolls, where steam engines are used, and operations, such as heavy shearing, requiring enormous pressure, where hydraulic power is employed, are carried on by means of electrical drive. The obvious advantages of motor drive and the ease of manipulation and control made it desirable that a motor should be designed for steel mill work. In undertaking this the Crocker-Wheeler Company obtained the advice of leading mill engineers as to what was required and then proceeded to develop an entirely new type.

These conditions had to be observed:

1. Electrical.—The motor must be designed primarily for 230 volts. Commutation must be such that sudden reversals and sudden and extreme overloads will not injure the commutator or produce undue heating. The insulation must be of such character that it will not deteriorate with heat. Shunt field winding must be provided in nearly all cases in addition to the series field to prevent racing. Finally, the motor must have tremendous starting torque.

2. Mechanical.—The frame must be of such design that it can be securely bolted down. The shaft must be of very large diameter, as all the extreme jars and shocks must be taken up in the bearings, not by springs. The frame must be split and readily separable, so that the armature can be instantly removed and replaced in case of injury to the shaft or windings. The armature must be of comparatively small diameter to avoid danger from high speeds and to minimize the inertia and facilitate sudden starting, stopping and reversal. The armature winding must be retained by means that will not give way under extreme heat. The shaft must be readily replaced. The journal boxes must prevent the escape of oil and the admission of dust. Means for oil lubrication must be provided. All parts must be readily accessible without disassembling the motor. In general, every part must be extremely strong and durable, fastened in such a way that no amount of vibration will loosen or dislodge it, yet readily replaceable at will. Parts must be interchangeable.

The fullest investigation of this enterprise will appeal to all architects, structural engineers and progressive technicists generally, for the Bethlehem special structural shapes are an innovation in steel construction, greatly extending the range of application of rolled steel shapes and effecting a material reduction in the cost of steel frame construction, which must be seriously considered by our investors in metal structures.

TALL BUILDINGS—A MENACE?

Notwithstanding the fact that in New York we build under a most expensive system of construction when critical tests occur the results show that we are vulnerable in many respects in the matter of fire prevention in some high buildings. The burning of the 12-sty fireproof Parker Building was of absorbing interest to architects, engineers and fire protectionists. Thus the Engineering Magazine says the behavior of such buildings under fire test is ever a vital speculation. Each trial of modern fire-resisting methods in high buildings is of great value in helping to determine the worth or worthlessness of so-called fireproof construction:

In the latest and best examples of fire-resisting construction the problem of an architectural and yet efficient elevator enclosure has been solved through the use of wire glass. But it is still indisputably true that stairways should also be isolated, preferably to serve as safe fire escapes within masonry partitions, with fire-resisting doors at each floor; or as has been the case in a few commendable buildings, they may be placed within a shaft adjacent to the elevator well, with a stairway enclosure opening onto each floor of the same construction and architectural treatment as the elevator front. Doors in such partitions may have counterweights and fusible links, thus closing automatically at a certain heat.

The second serious defect was the absence of thermostats or automatic fire-alarm system. This fire had evidently gained great headway before it was discovered by the watchman, and, although the building was equipped with special building signal fire-alarm box, it is asserted that the watchman turned in the first alarm from a street box. The building was also provided with standpipe and basement open sprinklers, but these auxiliary appliances are required by law, and the provision of such protection is too often perfunctory, to cover some requirement in the local building laws or regulation of the fire department, rather than to provide and suitably maintain a system of fire protection auxiliaries which may very likely prove of the utmost importance.

The only possible remedies lie, therefore, in the improved design and construction of high buildings, and in the employment of auxiliary fire detecting and fire fighting appliances which should especially be incorporated in the inherent design of each and every building exceeding the height limit of fire department efficiency.

Construction concerns the carrying out of such design through the employment of suitable fire resisting materials, and with a minimum use of combustible trim, etc. But, beyond all of these elements of fire resisting design, there are still required those auxiliary aids for detecting and extinguishing incipient fire, such as auxiliary fire alarms and automatic sprinklers, and also those auxiliary appliances which go so far to aid the fire department work under severe conditions. Such appliances include the open or basement sprinklers for flooding underground areas, standpipes and hose connections and reels at all floors, and monitor roof nozzles. It is only through the installation and use of such auxiliary equipment that buildings over ten stories high may be considered in any sense fire resistive.

The condition of this building was carefully surveyed and reported on by Engineer P. H. Bevier. Insurance Engineering presents this report, together with three views. In the caption of one of these it is asserted that "the building was erected before the requirements of fireproof construction were understood," etc. The actual fact is that the Parker Building was a speculative venture and was constructed as near the deadline as it well could be. The report goes into a brief but sufficient description of the various elements of fireproof arches, skew backs and flange protection and partitions. It then gives the present condition of the building. In the summary it says:

The building was in no sense a type of modern first-class fireproof construction. Many of the subdividing partitions were of wooden boards, others of wooden studs and metal lath, and some of plaster blocks, which are all down. Cinder concrete should have been of better quality. More attention should have been paid to the fireproofing of steel members carrying the roof construction.

This building with all its faults is an example of the value of fireproof construction. Had it been built in any other way the floors and walls would have collapsed and spread the fire to the surrounding buildings, and perhaps caused a disastrous conflagration.

As it is, however, in spite of lack of water, the fire did not spread beyond the building in which it originated, and the building itself is not so damaged but that it can be readily repaired and put in proper condition.

Ernest Flagg recently said that the time is upon us when high buildings are becoming a nuisance and a peril, and we are only just beginning to take fright, and that we are now looking about for remedies, which had much better have been applied a dozen years ago:

We now see before us the prospect of streets little better than deep canyons. With the clearest atmosphere of any great city in the world, our rooms and offices are becoming so dark that we must use artificial light all day long. Mr. Babb, of the Underwriters, has called attention to the danger of a general conflagration raging through the upper stories of these monstrous structures far beyond the reach of any possible control by the fire department. The Baltimore and San Francisco fires have proved that these so-called fireproof buildings can blaze like tinder in a general conflagration, and if Mr. Babb's warning may be thought premature now, the hour will soon come when the danger will be very real.

Our streets are becoming congested. Artistic considerations have been thrown to the winds, and these huge masses, devoid of any good qualities but revenue production, rear their heads like monuments to greed, and make our city a byword to the cultivated foreigner accustomed to the orderly appearance of the cities of the Old World.

* * * * * * * * * *

A SOLUTION.

It seems to Mr. Flagg that a better solution of the problem may be found in some such plan as that adopted for the Singer tower:

The high part of the building occupies only about one-sixth of the area plot on which it stands. It depends on its own land for its light. It casts a shadow, to be sure, but it seriously interferes with the light of no surrounding property. It presents a finished facade to all points of view. It adds to the picturesqueness of the slime of the city, and its bulk rises from a line well back of the street facade.

As a matter of course the scheme of the tall building tower set back from the building line was projected a dozen years ago by Sullivan in the proposed Odd Fellows' Temple at Chicago, and partially carried out in the Schiller Theater. As to the canyon proposition, Nassau st may resemble one, but it always did, even in the days of 5-sty buildings. Chicago does not seem to bear this resemblance in any of its streets. Mr. Flagg's comments concluded thus:

"I think the height to which they may be carried needs no restriction; practical consideration will regulate that. People will build as high as it pays to build, and no higher. A thousand feet will doubtless be the maximum, and if the towers are sufficiently separated from each other I see no great objection to even that height."

As to the fears of Mr. Babb, a writer in the American Architect says:

Most of our skyscrapers are moderately well built. As a matter of fact, the grave danger apprehended by Mr. Babb is only most remotely possible. And if the owners of the existing tall buildings would but add a few protective devices, costing but little additional expenditure, they can make it absolutely and utterly impossible for their buildings or any great proportion of their contents to be destroyed or even materially damaged. * * *

In the West, the cradle of the tall building, the Inland Architect and News Record bears testimony that instead of being a fire menace in itself, the skyscraper is about all that there is to depend upon to check the flames when a city is swept by a fierce fire.

While the lofty buildings represent the highest type of building construction, it is well at this time when they are under suspicion, that they undergo critical expert examination to learn in what degree they may fall short of being absolutely fireproof. It is probable that in some, especially among the older ones, it will be found that all the vertical shafts and openings are not properly enclosed and protected against the spread of flames from floor to floor. The window openings may not be protected from external fire by such safeguards as fire shutters or wire glass in metal sash. As these are business buildings, any combustible appointments and finish could well give place to that which will not burn. These weaknesses can be corrected at relatively moderate expense. They should not be found in that ideal of modern construction, the absolutely fireproof skyscraper.

Meanwhile the Singer Building is surmounted by its big flagpole and its even taller projected rival uptown is rising skyward. With the increasing cost of land in large cities and the influx of capital into real estate investments instead of wildcat stock operations, further development of the tall structure may be expected in the next few years.

EFFECT OF DRYNESS IN CONCRETE MIXTURES.—A case of difficulty with concrete that may be of interest to engineers and contractors is cited by Mr. E. A. Mollan, of Chicago. Some time ago a piece of concrete work was being constructed which gave trouble because, after the forms were removed, the cement was found to be unset.

The concrete could be easily broken into pieces and the cement was dead. The stone could be picked out of the mortar and much of the wall fell down. Although not regularly testing the cement he was asked to examine it. It proved sound and good, as were the sand and limestone, so a block of concrete was made from the same sand, cement and stone taken directly from the work.

The block was left in the laboratory for 24 hours and he was naturally surprised to find that it could be broken up with the hands. The cement was dead and did not adhere to the stone. Not having any stone handy at the time the pieces that were used in making this block were picked out and used with some more of the cement and sand in making up another block. This was allowed to stand 24 hours, when it was found to be hard and satisfactory in every way. He became convinced from this that the cause of the trouble was the unusual dryness of the sand and limestone, which had been exposed to very hot sunlight for several weeks, with practically no rain.

It seemed that the only explanation of the trouble with the first block and the success with the second block was the probable absorption of so much moisture by the sand and limestone that there was not enough water left for the setting of the cement. A hose was played on both sand and stone for some time, and then some concrete was made up in the usual way, which proved as good as could be desired, and by following this plan the work proceeded without any more difficulty.

ANOTHER LANDMARK TO DISAPPEAR.—The awarding of the contract to the Amsterdam Building Co., 43 West 27th st, to erect the new edifice in Lawrence st, near Amsterdam av, for St. Mary's Episcopal Church, means the disappearance of an old landmark in Harlem. The present frame structure was built in 1823 and is one of the oldest in the city. The proposed building was designed by Architects Carrere & Hastings, and will be an attractive structure of stone and brick. It will cost about $35,000.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE SPECIFICATION ROOM-STANDARD AND NOVEL BUILDING MATERIALS.

THE "OR-EQUAL" FALLACY.

By JOHN M. BRUCE, Assoc. Am. Soc. C. E.

It is indeed unfortunate that the present development of the public taste as to good architecture has not extended to a knowledge of the value of good specifications.

The newer buildings and homes all over our country demonstrate how well the lesson of the value of artistic design has been learned. Unfortunately, however, the dry, practical and uninteresting details of correct specifications have had no such wide acceptance.

When the architect has completed his plans and elevations of the proposed structure the owner's only remaining interest in the work is to see that the specifications are so drawn as to ensure the lowest possible bid. He is obsessed with the belief that calling for the highest grade of material "or equal" is the surest method of accomplishing the desired result.

It is undoubtedly true that the common antipathy on the part of the owners to a definite and closed specification of materials is based not only on ignorance, but on the former practice of some of the building supply houses to exact a high price for specified goods.

It is one of the payments exacted for past misdeeds that their odor rises as a stench in the nostrils of a reformed penitent long after the practice has been eliminated.

It would be well enough to let nature take its course in this respect were the sinner the only sufferer; but, unfortunately, the man who suffers most is the innocent party.

It is an indisputable fact that with certain rare, though notorious, exceptions, the price of standard building material is absolutely as standard as that material itself. In his desire to escape from the exaction which the owner fancies may wait upon any definite specification of material he is apt to cast a suspicious eye on the conscientious architect who, realizing the utter futility of open specifications, calls for the exact materials which his experience has told him are best adapted to ensure the comfort and profit of the owner.

It is a mark of established worth and reputation when one finds an architect or engineer strong enough to ignore this suspicious spirit and insist upon specifying what he knows is right.

The enormous growth of the building industry, even if unassisted by an awakened business conscience, is in itself the best possible corrective against such practice as "one price in competition, two prices when specified."

Every up-to-date contractor and subcontractor is to-day possessed of an estimating department whose duties consist in making up accurate estimates in the shortest possible time. In order to do this they must have on hand at all times an up-to-the-minute price list of practically every standard material used in their branch of the building industry.

It would be utterly impossible to handle the present-day building business on the old method of taking the heating specification, for example, to the radiator man for his price, to the valve man for his price, to the boiler man for his, to the pipe-covering man for his, etc., etc. Handled on that basis the estimator would consume twenty times the present amount of time and, consequently, money.

In place of such methods the present-day heating contractor has yearly contracts with the leading radiator, boiler, valve, pipe and covering concerns, guaranteeing him certain base figures with reasonable notice of any advance or reduction in price.

But this suspicion is, as above stated, a part, and, in reality, more of an excuse than a part, of the owner's reluctance to have the material for his proposed structure definitely specified. The greatest trouble lies in the fact that many owners regard the building business as a gambling proposition, instead of a plain business proposition, exactly similar to any other business transaction.

The owner cherishes the hope that he can get a lower price with the "or-equal" specification because a contractor may estimate on a cheaper article and he, the owner, may later be able to force his architect into coercing the contractor to supply the high-grade material.

Frankly, it is the elusive hunt for something for nothing that causes the owner nine-tenths of his troubles. As a matter of fact, the process of estimating a building is somewhat as follows:

The general contractor invited by the architect each parcel out to the various sub-contractors the several departments of the operation not in the general contractor's immediate control; and the general contractor and sub-contractors alike the job exactly as specified, on the most literal translation of the specification. When figuring the "or-equal" clauses are ignored in nine cases out of ten because the contractor's interest in the work is really—contrary to the common theory—to be sure to get the work at profitable prices, rather than to be sure to get the work at any price.

It is after the job is let that the fine work on the "or-equal" specifications is begun. And then the owner's fine dream of something for nothing is rudely translated into extra profits for contractor and sub-contractors.

Of course the owner does not realize his bad bargain at the time. It takes time to uncover defects.

In this discussion the writer holds no brief for the highest priced goods. This is simply an effort to advise the owner to take an intelligent interest in his specifications and decide for himself exactly what grade of material he does want and then insist upon getting it.

There are grades and prices of good materials in every detail of the building trade exactly as in other trades, and there is also the shoddy.

The ornate and exquisite plumbing fixtures will wear no better than the less highly polished, plain and substantial fixtures of less artistic merit and lower price. But the highly polished brass work, so thin that the proverbial beggar can spit through it, is dear as a gift; and it is the latter type that is almost invariably supplied on the "or-equal" specification.

The man with enough confidence in his commodity to trade mark and advertise it is the man who is willing to have the permanent success of his business depend on the reputation of his goods.

The owner may rest assured that the product of such a concern is exactly as represented, because it cannot afford to be anything else.

In order to throw more light on this, the darkest and most neglected corner of the construction industry, it is the purpose of the Construction Record and Guide to publish in each Owner's Number some further data as to specifications; and in the department headed "Why It Was Specified" to describe new and valuable additions to the building industry and to furnish the owner with a non-technical description of these devices so that he may form an intelligent opinion for himself as to their value to him.

The owner who will overlook the dryness of the subject and study these series of articles cannot fail to find their value reflected in the contents of his pocketbook, not only in the first cost of his building, but in its maintenance.

THE UNIQUE FLUSHING TANK.

The Staples Valve Company, of Newburgh, N. Y., offers in the Unique water closet tanks a new construction, a feature of which is the valve which can either be operated by a lever or by seat action.

In operation the water flows into the cylindrical flushing tank through a valve at the side and base of the tank. The tank is set in operation by pressure on the valve, which permits it to rise and carry up an internal plunger. This allows the contents of the tank to flow into the flushing pipe, scouring the bowl of the closet and effecting the ejectment of its contents into the waste pipe. An internal float in the tank is held back until the flushing is over, then drops into its seat as the result of the pressure above it, and makes a tight connection as the valve seat has been thoroughly washed in the flushing of the closet. At each operation provision is made for an inflow of air to the tank so that the air pressure is always maintained in a normal quantity, and in the refilling of the tank the air is compressed according to the water pressure on the supply system. Leakage of water from the tank back to the supply pipe in case of a cessation of pressure is avoided through the use of a check valve at the top of the supply pipe. The tanks are not recommended for use where the water pressure is below 10 pounds, as this pressure is considered insufficient to insure a proper operation and flushing.

The tanks are made in two sizes, 7 in. diameter and 31 in. high, and 8 in. in diameter and 38 in. high, the smaller one for use in connection with pressures above 30 pounds and the larger one for pressures below 30 pounds. The tanks and the connections are so made that they can be placed behind wainscoting when the operating valve is located in front of the flushing connection to the closet. The seat is arranged with the weight as shown so that the valve is always closed until the seat is released after the closet has been used. The tank is made from cold drawn steel and is subjected to a pressure test of 400 pounds. It is copper plated and then tinned on the inside and outside. Both the tank and the valve are finished with aluminum bronze, which not only gives an attractive finish, but is said to be more durable than nickel plate. All of the other parts of the inner chamber and float are of copper, heavily tinned. The external parts of the valves are brass.

Its features thus may be summarized:

A check valve so perfect that not a drop of water that enters the tank ever comes back into the pipe.

X-RAY VIEW OF VALVE.

At each operation air is forced into the tank, increasing the working pressure up to a desired point, when the surplus of air is automatically discharged each time, so that the tank always works at a positive normal.

The valve seats without any shock (on a seat washed clean by the flush) whether the pressure be 10 pounds or 100 pounds, and is then held tight by all the pressure above it.

It will never leak. The strength of one finger operates it. It works in muddy water just as well as in clean water, and under the highest pressures without any adjustment.

TESTS OF BOND BETWEEN PLAIN BARS AND CONCRETE.

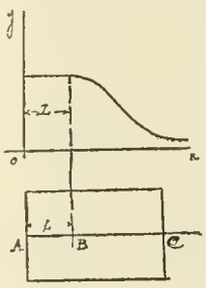
These tests were made at the testing laboratory of the Washington University for the Reinforced-Concrete Construction company, of St. Louis, Mo., who were acting by request of the Board of Appeals of the Building Department of the city. The tests were performed under the direction of Prof. J. L. Van Ornum, M. A. S. C. E., of the Civil Engineering Department of the University, and were witnessed by a number of engineers, architects and contractors.

By mutual understanding between the engineers of the Building Department, the engineers of the Reinforced-Concrete Construction Company, and Prof. J. L. Van Ornum, it had been agreed that a series of five tests should be made on medium steel bars, and another series of five tests should be made on high carbon steel bars. The bars used were round, and of the following diameters: One-half inch, five-eighths inch, three-fourths inch, one inch and one and one-fourth inch.

They were embedded in concrete prisms the cross section of which was uniform for all tests and 12x12 inches. The lengths of embedment were twenty-five times the diameter of the bar tested for the medium steel, and forty times the diameter of the bar tested for the high carbon (with one accidental exception). The concrete was a 1-2-4 Red Ring cement, Mississippi River sand and gravel, moderately wet mix.

The bars were embedded in the concrete on Aug. 30, 1907. The wooden forms were removed from the prisms after six weeks and the bonding tests were made ninety days after the bars had been embedded in the concrete—viz: Nov. 29 and 30, 1907. These tests have set forth the following facts of interest:

1. On every one of the bars tested the first slip occurred shortly after the elastic limit of the steel had been reached, which tends to show regardless of any figures that the bond between a plain bar and the concrete in which it is embedded is fully developed until the elastic limit of the steel is reached, then the steel begins to stretch and the bond is slowly destroyed from one section to the other.



2. That after the bond proper had been destroyed there still remained a considerable friction.

3. That the maximum bond obtained per sq. in. of surface in contact was 460 lbs. on medium steel, the minimum being 370 lbs. That the maximum bond obtained per sq. in. of surface in contact was 470 lbs. for high carbon steel, the minimum being 330 lbs.

4. That higher values per sq. in. of the ultimate bonding stresses would have undoubtedly been obtained had the lengths of embedment been shorter. In fact, the 1-in. bar of high carbon steel had been accidentally embedded in the concrete only 32.7 inches instead of 40 inches, and the bond per sq. in. went up to 470 lbs., a higher value than any other one of the same series.

This fact tends to prove that there is very likely for a bar of a given diameter a certain length of embedment corresponding to a maximum value of the bonding stress per sq. in. of surface in contact, and taking that length of embedment for basis that the bonding stress per unit surface decreases when the length of embedment increases.

In other words, if a bar of a given diameter is given different embedments in a prism of concrete, if the embedments are plotted in abscissas x, and if for each embedment is determined the bonding stress y, and that these are plotted in ordinates, the resulting diagram would be as shown by Fig. 1.

These, of course, are purely theoretical assumptions, and it would be interesting to verify them by a series of experiments. Let L be the length of embedment corresponding to the maximum bonding stress per unit, then let us consider a prism of concrete in which is embedded a bar of diameter D, the fact that the bar begins to slip slightly after its elastic limit is reached, leads to believe that the length L produces anchorage of the bar in the concrete, and that the bar begins to stretch at or around the section B, the bar stretching from B to C, naturally its diameter decreases and therefore its bond between B and C is slowly destroyed, then the pull on the bar is sufficient to overcome the bond between the portion A–B of the bar and the concrete, consequently the bar begins to slip.

Another interesting feature set forth by these experiments is the fact that after the bond proper has been destroyed there still remains a considerable friction, as mentioned in No. 2.

As the allowable tensile stress on a bar is taken at 40 per cent. of its elastic limit, if we assume an allowable safe bonding stress of 80 lbs. per sq. in. in contact, the fact that there still remained a friction of about 200 lbs. per sq. in., shows that the bond proper of 80 lbs. insures a safety of 40 per cent. on the ultimate friction, should the bond have been prematurely destroyed.

FIRE FELT.—A 4 pp. folder from the H. W. Johns-Manville, 100 William st, New York, describes the new asbestos roll fire felt.

It is a fibrous asbestos felt, somewhat similar in texture to wool or hair felt, and gray white in color. It is pliable, so that it can be easily bent into any desired shape, and is indestructible. Being made entirely of pure long staple asbestos, it is fireproof, and is, therefore, an excellent fire-stop, for use in floors, walls, ceilings, etc. Confining in its construction a large number of dead air cells, asbestos roof fire-felt is a most efficient insulator against heat and cold. It is especially recommended for use where insulation is required to resist very high temperatures. The combination of its perfect fireproof and insulating qualities and reasonable cost adapts it to numerous uses, some of which are as a pipe covering, for water-tube boilers, and for heat-retarding purposes on automobile exhaust mufflers.

PULP PLASTER.—A pamphlet from the Elastic Pulp Plaster Co., Warren, O., sets forth the essential principles and merits of the elastic pulp plaster, and also Warren wood fibre plaster.

In regard to the former, the company points out that it is a non-conductor of heat, sound and electricity; will hold on metal, wood or brick and will neither disintegrate, crumble nor crack. It is also both fire and frost proof. The claim is made that it will cover from 125 to 150 sq. yds. per ton when laid with 3-16-in. key and ⅝-in. grounds. With a view to meeting the demands of the trade for a wood fibre plaster containing sufficient sand to render it suitable for brick and stone walls, the company has brought out what is known as Warren wood fibre plaster, the covering capacity of which is about 100 yds. to the ton.

And News Regarding Source of Supply

By WILLIAM L. HALL.*

THE hardwood lumber cut in 1899, according to the census,† was 8,634,021 thousand feet; in 1906 it had fallen to 7,315,491 thousand feet, a decrease of 15.3%.

This decrease took place during a period when American industries sprang forward at a pace unparalleled; when there was the strongest demand ever known for every class of structural material; when the output of pig iron increased 15%, that of cement 132.17%, and even that of softwood timber 15.6%.

That the decrease is due to diminished supply rather than to lessened demand seems to be proved beyond question. During the same period the wholesale price of various classes of hardwood lumber advanced from 25 to 65%; every kind of hardwood found in quantity sufficient to make it useful has been put on the market, and hardwood timber is now being cut in every State and every locality where it exists in quantity large enough to be cut with profit. These conditions could not prevail were the decrease in production due to a falling off in demand.

CONDITION AS SHOWN BY KIND OF TIMBER.

The most notable shrinkage has been in the leading hardwoods to which the public has been long accustomed. Oak, which in 1899 furnished over half the entire output of hardwood lumber, fell off 36.5%. Yellow poplar, which in 1899 was second among hardwoods in quantity produced, fell off 37.9%. Elm, the great standard in slack cooperage, went down 50.8%. Cottonwood and ash, largely used in many industries, lost, respectively, 36.4 and 20.3%.

A complete comparison of output for the fifteen leading hardwoods is given in Table 1.

(a) Not separately reported.

The table shows clearly the three points already mentioned: First, several of the most important hardwoods are fast being exhausted. Second, the cut has increased in less known and less abundant woods. Maple increased 39.4% and rose to second place in the list. Red gum gained 59% and advanced from seventh to fourth place. Chestnut and birch have increased tremendously, and beech and tupelo have been prominently introduced. Third, although almost all possible new woods have been brought into use, there has been a shrinkage in the total output of 15.3%.

CONDITION AS SHOWN BY STATES.

An examination of the figures for certain States in which hardwood production has centered in the past shows a condition almost startling. Ohio, with a cut of 918 million feet in 1899, had fallen to 433 million in 1906; Indiana, with 976 million feet in 1899, had fallen to 446 million, and Tennessee's 862 million fell to 535 million.

The condition can be realized by a study of Table 2, in which the hardwood cut is given by States for the years 1899 and 1906.

This table is convincing as to two things: First, the supply in Indiana and Ohio, the original centre of hardwood production, is practically exhausted; second, the cut is now widely distributed and is heavy in every State where there are even small bodies of hardwoods.

Together with Illinois, Ohio and Indiana produced 25% of the hardwood in 1899. In 1906 they produced only 14%. They can never regain their lead, or even maintain the standing they have. Their many wood-using establishments, which are now hard pressed for supplies, will exhaust their remaining remnants within a few years. The land which bore this timber, as fast as it was cleared, was turned to agricultural use, for which most of it is well suited. The improved farm lands of Indiana increased 10.4% between 1890 and 1900; those of Ohio, 4.9%. In both States there is some waste land which will continue in timber and turn out local supplies, but not enough to have any considerable effect on the country's hardwood supply.

States not thought of in former years for their hardwoods are now turning out considerable quantities. Maine, with a cut of 29 million feet in 1899, went to 73 million in 1906; New Hampshire turned out 60 million in 1906 as against 23 million in 1899. Even Oregon, Montana and other Western States came into the list with unexpected amounts. In all of the States west of the Mississippi Valley the supply is small and can never become much of a factor. The impressive thing is that we are bringing hardwoods from far and near, and still the cut is going down.

ADVANCING PRICES OF HARDWOOD.

Only within the last eight years have prices begun to reflect the dwindling supply, though the immoderate cutting away of this resource has been going on for decades. The diagram (Fig. 1) shows the advance in prices of some of the principal hardwoods during the past eight years. It also shows the almost steady level of prices previous to 1898. Considering the impoverished supply and the tremendous demands on the part of all the industries for timber, there is nothing surprising about the increase, which seems not quite to have kept pace with the increasing prices of softwoods. This is rather remarkable, in view of the shorter supply, but is probably due to the fact that softwoods, forming the main bulk of the lumber supply, have led in establishing prices.

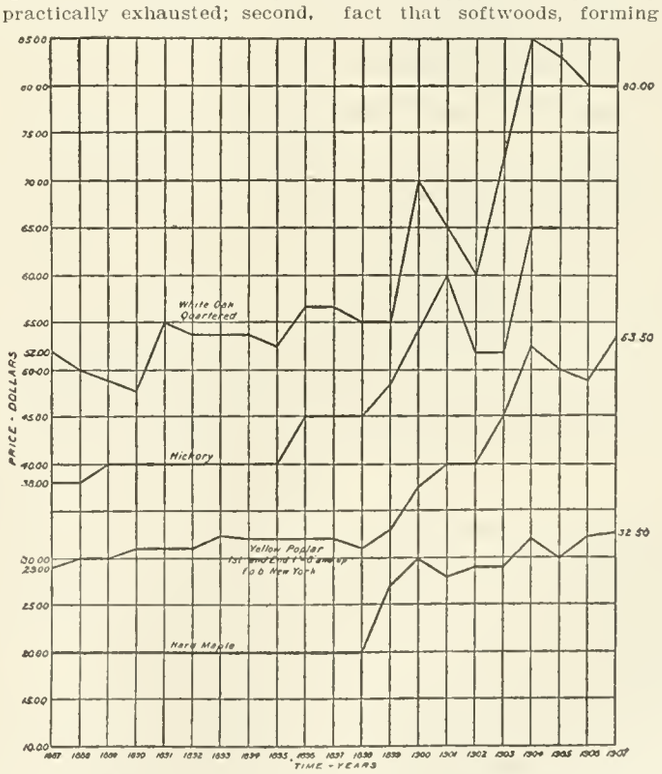

FIG. 1.—SHOWING ADVANCE IN PRICES OF PRINCIPAL HARDWOODS.

Along with the increase of prices there has been an almost constant and an entirely necessary relaxation of the rules by which lumber is graded and sold. The latest and most significant change is that made by the National Hardwood Association at its meeting in Atlantic City in May, 1907. Heretofore only even lengths, such as 6, 8 and 10 and 12 feet have been upon the market. The changed rules allow even lengths down to 4 feet, and 15% of odd lengths above 4 feet. Similar standards of thickness are also allowed. Many other equally significant changes are included. It emphasizes the fact that we are down to rock bottom and require every sound piece of hardwood lumber that can be put upon the market.

There seems to be one practicable solution, and that is to maintain permanently under a proper system of forestry a sufficient area of hardwood land to produce by growth a large proportion of the hardwood timber which the nation requires.

Where is this land to be found? Not in the Ohio Valley, the Lake States, or the Mississippi Valley, for the reasons already given. It is to be found in the Appalachian Mountains. These mountains increased their proportion in the nation's hardwood output from 42 to 48% during the past seven years. On the principle of using the land for its highest purpose, they should further increase their proportion to not less than 75%. Other sections of the country will readily furnish the remaining 25%.

Will Send Tiling to Antipodes.

A shipment of tiling will soon leave New York for Auckland, New Zealand. The consignment will be manufactured by the New York Metal Ceiling Company, 537 to 541 West 24th street, whose orders are received from all parts of the civilized world. The sending of metal ceilings and tilings to the Antipodes is not a common occurrence with this firm, but so many contracts have been executed for supplying these parts of modern buildings to governments and private concerns in almost every quarter of the globe that the shipping of goods to such distant destinations is not regarded as very unusual.

Within the past few months the New York Metal Ceiling Company has received orders for shipments to South Africa and various parts of South America, and it is not so very long ago since the company sent some tiling to an isolated place in Siberia. A consignment of steel ceilings is to go very soon to Ceara, Brazil, to be used in the construction of a bank; a large quantity of tiling will leave shortly for Lima, Peru, going via the port of Callao, where the U. S. torpedo flotilla called en route to the Pacific coast; and another order will be sent to Buenos Ayres, Argentina. At times the shipments have to be packed in New York in such a way that they can be readily sent inland on the backs of burros, which carry about 200 pounds, 100 pounds hanging over either side. In such cases the order calls for the goods to be sent in packages weighing so many kilos.

American Bottoms for Our Exports.

"It is generally quicker to send orders to South America via England," was the comment of Mr. John C. Upton, secretary of the New York Metal Ceiling Company, 537 to 541 West 24th street, the other day in the course of a conversation about the export trade of his company.

"There is no direct line of steamers between the United States and the ports of some of the South American countries where we do business and the result is that the goods have to first cross the ocean to Europe and then be transshipped to a vessel of one of the regular lines operating between England or Germany and South America. English and German bottoms carry nearly all of the export trade to South America. It is hard to understand why this should be, but it is the case, nevertheless."

Mr. Upton's comment is another sidelight on the stunted transportation facilities afforded by the American marine. Many New York concerns ship to all parts of the world, as does the New York Metal Ceiling Company, and it happens time after time that the merchandise has to travel thousands of miles out of the way by water to reach its destination. The delay attending such conditions handicaps the business of the firms in question.

Proof Against Bad Omens.

Mr. A. W. Tuthill, assistant manager for the Sayre & Fisher Company, manufacturers of brick, must have been born under a propitious star. After being assigned to stateroom No. 23, en route from Baltimore to Old Point Comfort, Va., last week and arriving at that place on Friday, the thirteenth day of the month, he secured a contract to supply 2,000,000 of brick for the new officers' quarters in course of erection at Fortress Monroe. After Mr. Tuthill discovered the number of his berth he was afraid the combination of landing on Friday the thirteenth and stateroom No 23 would be too much to buck up against, and he asked to have his stateroom changed. He was then assigned to No. 41. The Sayre & Fisher Company will supply the brick for the ten new buildings to be erected for the United States Government at Fortress Monroe. The material will be sent in several consignments on a three-master from the company's plant. A full cargo for such a boat is generally 300,000 brick.

Unique Situation in Brick Contracts.

To have contracts on hand at one time for the supplying of 70,000,000 of brick is a task that few concerns would face, yet that was the situation for a while with the John P. Kane Company. Of course the contracts were not all signed at the same time, some of them having been in force for a year or more before others were taken up; but for a period the firm was supplying brick called for in fourteen different contracts aggregating seventy million. The largest item was the 25,000,000 required for the new New York Library The next to that was the 10,000,000 needed in the construction of the New National Theatre. The others varied from four and a half million to one million, the structures being the Marbridge Building, the Importers' and Traders' Bank, the new Grand Central station, the Holbrook Building, the Singer Building, the Lawyers' Title Insurance Building, the German-American Fire Insurance Building, the World Building, the Tribune Building, the Royal Insurance Company Building, the Second National Bank and the Pennsylvania Terminal. The 25,000,000 contract for the Public Library is probably the record for one building in New York. This company has just closed a contract to supply 40,000 barrels of cement for the National Theatre.

Activity in Contracts for Brick.

The statement made by Mr. Pfotenhauer of Pfotenhauer and Nesbit, noted on another page, to the effect that there had been a decided improvement in business within the last two weeks was borne out by mentioning the number of contracts closed by his firm in that time. These included the supplying of 200,000 Norman white brick for the city hall at Yonkers, Edwin A. Quick and Son, architects, and Geo. T. Kelly, builder; 400,000 white face brick for the Van Rennselaer Polytechnic building at Troy, N. Y., Lawler and Haas, architects, and Jas. Stewart and Company, builders; 150,000 impervious white face brick for the Mercantile building at the corner of Franklin street and Broadway, Fred. C. Brown, architect, and Chas. H. Peckworth, builder; 50,000 brick for the bank at Hempstead, L. I., J. W. Allen, architect, and the Tidewater Building Company, builders. Other recent contracts closed by this firm were the supplying of the face brick for the six buildings being erected for the Jesuit school in Brooklyn, each of the structures requiring about 150,000 brick, Raymond F. Almirall, architect, Thos. Reilly, of Philadelphia, builder; the brick for the Boston Museum, for the Mutual Life Insurance Company's building at Springfield, Mass., for the Lawyers' Title Insurance and Trust Company building at 160 Broadway, for 300,000 face brick for the new physiological laboratory at Princeton University, and for 100,000 face brick for the new high school at Ossining, N. Y.

Large Contract for Front Brick

The Harbison & Walker Refractories Company of 1133 Broadway, Manhattan, with general offices at Pittsburgh, and who are the largest brick manufacturers in the United States, with sixty-eight factories in this country alone, have just been awarded the largest contract for light impervious front brick ever placed in Pittsburgh, to be used in the erection of the great Carnegie Technical Schools in that City. The architects are Palmer & Hornbostel of New York. This contract was awarded after the building committee, which is composed of ten of the most prominent business men of Pittsburgh, had visited the works of other brick manufacturers and examined their product and facilities for deliveries. They found that the Harbison & Walker Refractories Company were prepared to make deliveries so that delay in the work would be absolutely impossible. This job calls for two and one half millions of high-grade front light-colored brick, and when completed these buildings will be among the most prominent in the United States.

Order for Brick from 'Frisco.

The directors of the Royal Insurance Company are so pleased with the appearance and quality of the Down Draught Repressed red brick used in the construction of their new home at the northeast corner of Maiden Lane and William st that they have decided to use the same brick for the facing of the new building to be erected for this company in San Francisco. This brick is handled by Sayre & Fisher, which means that the order will have to be sent across the continent. The Royal Insurance Building in New York was designed by Architects Howells & Stokes, who are also the architects for the structure to go up on the Pacific coast. The Thompson-Starrett Company are the builders.

Will Manufacture Purple Slate.

The E. J. Johnson Company, 38 Park Row, has just started the manufacture of a purple roofing slate at a quarry which is located near its well known Unfading Green quarry in Vermont, and which has not been quarried for 30 years. Mr. Johnson has in his office samples of this rare purple slate taken from the top of the quarry after being exposed to varying weather and storms for 30 years and so unaffected is it that it is impossible to discover with the naked eye any difference in color between the unexposed and the exposed part of the slate. The quarry had been lying undisturbed for three decades, and it was decided last year to resume work. It has required several months to remove the "top" and install the machinery necessary to begin operations. Later the E. J. Johnson Company will branch out to manufacture slate for steps, platforms, etc.

Contract for Two Million Face Brick.

The contract for supplying 2,000,000 of brick to be used in the construction of the New National Theatre at 62d st and Central Park West was awarded to the Sayre & Fisher Company, 261 Broadway. The brick will be used for facing and will be gray. The same concern secured the contract to supply the enameled brick required for the corridors and light shafts in the City Bank Building, on Wall st. Carrere & Hastings are the architects and Marc Eidlitz & Son the contractors.

Sent Brick to Philippines.

It is a long call to send brick 20,000 miles. A contract to this effect was recently closed by the Sayre & Fisher Company and 30,000 square fire brick are now on their way to Manila in the Philippine Islands. The order was from the Manila Electric Railroad and Light Power Company, of that city. The shipment was made around the cape, taking the same course as that traversed by the U. S. battleship fleet, and is now nearing the Orient. It is understood that the difficulty of making fire brick is the cause of the contract being made here.

Association Meeting.

The regular annual meeting of the Association of Dealers in Masons' Building Materials was held at the association rooms, 18 Broadway, Manhattan, on Thursday, March 19. Preceding the meeting a luncheon was served by Delmonico. There was a large attendance. The following officers and directors were elected to serve for the ensuing year: President, Francis N. Howland; Vice-President, John A. Philbrick; Treasurer, Nathan Peck; Directors, Francis N. Howland, John A. Philbrick, Nathan Peck, Wm. H. Schmohl, Daniel Darrow, Wm. K. Hammond, John B. Rose, Audley Clarke, A. E. Aldridge, Wm. H. Barnes, Ernst Braun, Wright D. Goss, John C. McNamara, John J. Bell, John H. Mahnken.

PRICES CURRENT.

BRICK.—The Cornell Steamboat Company has notified brick makers that hereafter the rate for towing brick barges will be by the thousand of brick carried, so that payment will be according to the actual amount of freight moved. The rate from Kingston to New York will be 20 cents a thousand; from Catskill 22 cents and from Newburgh 16 cents. The rate from other points will be in proportion.

This will make a great difference to the owners of large boats, amounting to twenty-five or thirty dollars for the round trip. But for small boats the rates are not much different. By large boats are meant those having a carrying capacity of four hundred thousand and upwards.

The previous towing rates were made a long time ago when the average capacity of the boats used in the trade was only from 250 to 275 thousand bricks. Since then larger and still larger vessels have been launched, until there are some having a cargo capacity of 550,000.

The first tow of brick boats from Haverstraw arrived on Wednesday, March 18. The supply is larger than last year just after the opening of navigation. Buyers are few. Some have not made a purchase in several months.

President W. K. Hammond, of the Manufacturers' Association, foot of West 52d st, says they wish that the real estate market would begin to move and operators to realize that they can obtain building material at exceptionally advantageous prices at the present time. He understands that Labor is anxious to give every encouragement in the way of good and faithful work, and that master builders are in a position to select the best mechanics.

CEMENT.—During the past fortnight requirement for Portland cement has picked up, and there has been enough to start up some of the mills that were idle, though not under full headway. Manufacturers feel that business will improve steadily from now on until next year, when many and large orders are expected.

Local supply men say that cement has been selling below cost for some time, but that this condition will not last long now. Former good years have enabled concerns to sell at a loss and remain in business, but the profits of preceding years have been slashed right and left.

The largest single contract for cement ever given out will shortly be let by the United States government. The Isthmian Canal Commission was to have received estimates last week for 4,500,000 barrels to be used in connection with the construction of the Panama canal, but the time for submitting the estimates has been postponed. Local dealers say that no one firm would undertake the responsibility of supplying the entire amount, even though it would be spread over a period of about five years, and that the contract would probably be divided among three or more concerns who have been supplying the government for this kind of work.

A record breaker in the awarding of contracts for supplying cement is that of the 1,100,000 barrels to be supplied for the construction of the Ashokan dams. This contract, regarded as the largest one for a specified amount of cement ever awarded to date, was secured by the Alsen Company. It means about 50,000 barrels a month.

IRON AND STEEL.—Dealers report a little better demand for iron, but fear a price war, such as never before seen, unless improvement is more rapid. Structural Steel mills have still a very good business on their books, but the end of the list is within hailing distance. A number of Sheet and Tin Plate mills which were closed are starting up.

Local jobbers report a very fair market as a general condition, but that Sheets are not going so fast as they ought to. Galvanized and Black are slow for this time of the year.

The Spelter market is strong; also solder. Sheet copper on the 17 cent base is very low, and an advance is not expected immediately. Merchants are not laying in much stock.

The order for the erection of 1,000 tons of structural steel for Henry Corn at Fifth avenue near Forty-second street, has gone to the Hay Foundry Co. at Newark.

The Otis Elevator Company had a record breaking year in 1907.

The Company reported net earnings of $996,104. compared with $855,167 for the previous year; dividend disbursements on its preferred stock of $371,794 compared with $347,792 for the preceding year; common dividend payments of $191,259, compared with $191,259 for 1906, and a balance of $433,051, compared with $316,116 for the previous year.

The general balance sheet, as of Dec. 31, 1907, showed total assets of $18,571,283 compared with $17,894,235 on Dec. 31, 1906. Of the total assets, $10,895,362 represented plant account; $753,034, cash $186,644, bills receivable; $3,524,556, accounts receivable, and $3,211,687, inventories.

In his report to the stockholders, W. D. Baldwin, president of the company, said that, while the outlook for the current year is not as promising as the outlook for the last two years, the company does not expect a large volume of business in the immediate future, because of the depression in almost every industry. He believes that it will secure a moderate amount, sufficient, in any event, to operate its main plants on a profitable basis.

"The company's factories are in excellent condition," said Mr. Baldwin, "and the very large output which it has recorded at reduced cost during the past year, has been substantial and gratifying evidence of the wisdom of the large expenditures made during past years in enlarging plants and increasing facilities for doing work."

LIME.—Thus far into the year the Lime trade has felt the depression in the building business, the same as other materials have; yet under the abnormal monetary circumstances, and the winter season, business in lime is reasonably fair at the edge of spring. There has been a noticeable improvement in the last week or two. Still, trade is "spotty"—better in some sections than in others.

With so many banks closed in Brooklyn the state of the building and real estate there can be imagined. In the Bronx trade is picking up.

LUMBER.—Most sales of late have been made on the basis of cut prices to dealers, but measures are being taken by the operators, particularly in Spruce, Hemlock and North Carolina Pine, to eliminate this adverse condition. In North Carolina Pine there has been an appreciable change.

Local firms report a good deal of figuring in mill work. Stocks of doors, sash and blinds are said to be badly broken. When a demand springs up again a lot of hurry orders are certain. Prices in this line are a little off now.

The quotations given in this list are the wholesale prices to the retail trade on well manufactured and graded stock, according to the inspection rules at present obtaining. It is not practicable to give a line of retail quotations thoroughly reliable because terms of sale and other factors influence prices. The wholesale figures are given.

STONE.—Granite and cut-stone firms are figuring on considerable work which does not seem to come out. Prices are low and competition strong. The Woodbury Granite Company received last week the contract for the Youngstown courthouse work, amounting to about two hundred thousand dollars. Woodbury grey granite is specified. This firm is fairly well supplied with work, having several particularly large contracts.

The cut-stone trade is in better shape than six months ago.

This is not the best season for either structural or roofing slate, but the prospects are brighter than they were a month ago. The feeling in the trade is that the year will yet prove a fair producer of business. A recent change in quotations was an advance in genuine No. 1 Bangor of about 25 cents per square. There was a large demand for this stock last fall. Demand is behind what it was a year ago. Twenty or more figure on a job where only three or four would have done so three or four years ago.

Slate three quarters of an inch thick will be used in putting the roof on the new laboratory of physics for Princeton University. The contract for the slate was placed with the E. J. Johnson Company and calls for the Unfading Green all the way from three quarters of an inch to three sixteenths of an inch. The thickest slate will be used above the cornice and it will graduate to three sixteenths at the top. The building is being erected by the George A. Fuller Company and was designed by architect H. J. Hardenbergh.

BUILDING OPERATIONS.

New Equitable Building.

BROADWAY.—It is again reported that Architects D. H. Burnham & Co., of Chicago, Ill., have prepared plans and will supervise the construction of what it is understood will be the world's biggest building. This structure will have more floor space than any other building in the world, and will be erected by the Equitable Life Assurance Society on the block it owns, bounded by Broadway, Nassau, Pine and Cedar sts. The estimated value of this block is about $20,000,000, and the new building would easily entail an expenditure of between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000. D. H. Burnham & Co. have been officially commissioned and have submitted plans for a skyscraper, although the exact number of stories has not yet been decided. It is estimated the proposed structure will contain approximately 1,650,000 square feet of floor space. The Record and Guide first announced the project in issue of Dec. 28, 1907.

The building will be 4-stys, of light brick and limestone, and the foundation work will be of stone reinforced with concrete. Bids are being received on the latter, but as yet no estimates have been taken for the general contracts. Details will be given in later issues.

Broadway and 59th Street Corner.

It is still undetermined what is to be erected on the property owned by George Ehret, the brewer, situated at the southeast corner of Broadway and 59th st. It was noticed the past week that the fence enclosing the site was being removed, indicating immediate developments. At Mr. Ehret's office on Thursday the Record and Guide was informed that nothing definite had yet been decided with view to building operations. Some time ago, it will be recalled, Mr. Ehret had under consideration the construction of a large fireproof music hall building, but the project was abandoned.

Building operations are looking up at Glen Cove, and there is a promise of renewed activity and plenty of work in the spring. A handsome residence is to be erected by R. F. Bowne, on Highland av. F. Building Operations for February.

Official reports from some fifty cities received by The American Contractor, show a total decline of 33 per cent., or practically one-third, as compared with the operations of February, 1907. The loss, amounting to about fourteen million dollars, is nearly accounted for in the decrease in New York and San Francisco, amounting to more than twelve million dollars. Last month the reports showed a gain in 9 cities, and those below indicate a gain in 16 cities. This is an encouraging indication, the gains being widely distributed. Chicago holds up remarkably, showing a gain of 9 per cent., while the total value of permits issued is but little more than a million dollars less than those issued in Greater New York.

Among the other cities showing gains, are the following: Bridgeport, 39; Cincinnati, 29; Denver, 18; Milwaukee, 87; Minneapolis, 33; Omaha, 6; Philadelphia, 27; Paterson, 61; St. Louis, 9; Spokane, 149; Syracuse, 140; Salt Lake City, 63.

New York State.

AUBURN, N. Y.—Architect W. J. Beardsley, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., has secured the commission to remodel the Cayuga County Jail. The plans have just been started and provide for a general interior remodelling, the installation of new cells, changes to plumbing, etc. It is probable that project will be advertised early in April.

BATAVIA, N. Y.—Board of Trustees of the village of Batavia, B. W. Tomlinson, Capt. Geo. Wiard and Wm. G. Pollard, Mayor, have been discussing the question of a monument as memorial to the soldiers of the Civil War. It is probable that a local architect will be retained to design the structure, but it is not definitely decided when the necessary funds will be available.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—General contract has just been awarded to William C. Sandell & Co., Buffalo, N. Y., for a $3,500 shelter house, to be erected at Washington Market for the City of Buffalo for the Dept. of Public Works. H. L. Beck, Bureau of Buildings, Buffalo, N. Y., prepared plans for this building, which is 1-sty brick, 30x44.

CATSKILL, N. Y.—Architect Marcus T. Reynolds of Albany has completed plans for a 1-sty, 30x100 ft., bank building, to be erected by the Catskill Savings Bank, on Main st, Catskill, N. Y. Local contractors are expected to estimate for the construction of the building within a few days.

DUNKIRK, N. Y.—After two years of contemplation and discussion the Board of Education awarded the contract for alterations and additions to the High School on Swan st to P. Meister Construction Co., on Railroad av. The plans include a general rearrangement and assembly hall, gymnasium, boiler house, etc. Total cost, $75,000.

The Week.

There was somewhat of a falling off in the volume of business reported during the week just past. Several important sales, however, went through. All sections of the city are contributing their shares of transfers. Business is well distributed, though the volume is not large.

The purchase by Samuel W. Bridgham of 954 5th av is of more than ordinary importance. It does not simply mean the acquiring of an important parcel of Manhattan realty by a new owner, but has direct bearing on the house where Mr. Bridgmah has resided for some time. The property referred to is 49 West 23d st. This is the old Schermerhorn mansion. It is the last of the old time residences in that street. Business has crowded all the private families out of this zone. Strangers view this old remaining landmark with curiosity and interest. It certainly seems strange to see a residence in the heart of the retail dry goods district. It has a frontage of 50 ft. and a depth of 98.9. On the west is the Eden Musee and on the east a large furniture store. This property is doomed now for residential purposes. Undoubtedly before long plans will be filed for a modern business building. As the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Colford Schermerhorn, parents of Mrs. Bridgman, it was the scene of many notable functions. Several flattering offers have been received for the holding, but up to the present time all of them have been declined.

Among the sales put through in that section south of 59th st was one by the Watson estate, of the 3-sty tenements 6, 8 and 10 Minetta st. These houses occupy a plot 66x75, and are located about 153 ft. north of Bleecker st. This property formed part of the Elbert Herring farm, which was acquired in 1755 by Hendrick Brevoort.

The block front comprising about twelve lots on Riverside Drive, between 98th and 99th sts, was bought by the Century Holding Co. They contemplate the erection of a 12-sty high-class apartment house. The seller bought this holding in 1880. Nine years later he sold nine lots in the south side of 99th st and four lots in the north side of 98th st. All these lots have been subsequently improved. The block front on 5th av, between 103d and 104th sts, was purchased by Henry Clews. This plot adjoins Public School 171. Henry Phipps, Jacob Ruppert and George Schenken own the block front between 102d and 103d sts, and Henry Stern the block front between 104th and 105th sts. The plot of 5½ lots on Riverside Drive, at the northeast corner of 138th st, was also one of the sales reported. This property is going to be improved with a high-class elevator apartment house.

The American Ice Co. gave to the United States Trust Co. of New York, as trustee, a mortgage on the property on 91st st, about 5 ft. east of Av A. The plot is very irregular and includes land under water, all wharfage, cranage and other rights. Property in Kings, Queens, Nassau, Ulster, Greene and Columbia counties are included. The amount is $500,000 for five years at 6 per cent. from March 2, 1908. Mrs. Hetty Green renewed for a term of five years the mortgage for $115,000 on the property 3 East 69th st. The rate of interest will remain the same, 5 per cent. This dwelling adjoins the corner of 5th av.

The total number of mortgages recorded for Manhattan this week was 156, as against 160 last week, and in the Bronx 104, as against 103 last week. The total amount involved is $3,701,601, as against $4,884,144 last week.

The total number of sales reported is 61, of which 12 were below 59th st, 36 above, and 13 in the Bronx. The sales reported for the corresponding week last year were 154, of which 49 were below 59th st, 58 above, and 47 in the Bronx.

THE AUCTION MARKET

There were thirty-seven parcels all told offered at the Exchange Salesroom during the week. Of these about twenty-five were forced ones. Nine went to the plaintiffs in the various actions; four were adjourned; one was withdrawn and the rest went either to outside buyers or parties in interest.

The principle sale of the week was that of the Meeks estate holdings, the account of which is noted in another column.

At the stand of Bryan L. Kennelly on Thursday, immediately after the Meeks sale, the residence of the late Daniel O'Day, 128 West 72d st, was put up for sale. This house is an exceptional one. It is on a street which has park supervision. There is but little doubt, however, that before long this street will be turned into a business thoroughfare. Steps have already been begun to that end. The Trust Company of America was the executor of the estate, and it was on their order that the property was disposed of. It is a 4-sty building with limestone front, box stoop, bay window and bedroom extension. The house is expensively decorated, by Baumgarten, and the electrical fixtures were made to order at considerable expense. The walls of the drawing-rooms were decorated with satin and the hangings went with the sale. While the trust company had nothing to do with the fixtures or the hangings, still the heirs put them up for voluntary sale, and they went with the building to Samuel Armstrong for $72,000. This property is subject to a mortgage of $45,000, at 4½ per cent., which is overdue. It is held by the New York Life Insurance Co. They have expressed themselves as willing to continue the same at the rate of 5½ per cent. The frontage of the building is 25 ft. and the lot of full depth. The block front on 183d st, between Bathgate and 3d avs, 238x130, was bid in at $56,000.

The amount involved in the auction sales this week was $1,346,088, and since Jan. 1, $12,226,175. Last year the total for the week was $252,427, and from Jan. 1, $6,615,882.

Torrens Mass Meeting.

In the board room of the Board of Brokers, 156 Broadway, last Thursday afternoon, a mass meeting was held in support of the Torrens system of land registration. All classes of realty interests were represented. There were present delegates from various real estate organizations, taxpayers' associations and building trades.

Resolutions were passed declaring that the system now in use in transferring titles to real estate was too slow and cumbersome. The Land Title Registration Bill introduced in the Legislature by Senator John J. Cohalan and Assemblyman George A. Green was heartily endorsed. This is the bill as recently prepared by the Torrens Commission appointed by Gov. Hughes. The meeting urged the enactment of the bill. The speakers included Prof. Alfred G. Reeves, M. J. Harson, Ralph Folks and Sidney V. Lowell.

Friars Lease Clubhouse.

The Friars have taken a lease for four years of the 3-sty and basement building 107 West 45th st from May 1 next. This house is situated 100 feet west of 6th av and has a frontage of 20 feet. The property belonged to Albert J. Adams, but was sold by his executors on Nov. 15, 1907. Robert Taggart, Jr., was the purchaser, and he paid $30,750, including a mortgage for $18,000. The building is going to be extensively altered. A new front is going to be put in, bringing the building closer to the street and changing its appearance. There is a large hall in the house which can accommodate about 200 persons. The clubhouse will be fitted with a library, billiard room and restaurant. The decorations will be monastic in style.

Who's Who in Real Estate.—VI.

COLONEL JOHN JACOB ASTOR takes an active interest in the management of his huge estate. For years he continued the ground-leasing idea, which means that the property, at the time vacant, was leased for a long term, with a renewal based on a valuation to be placed on the property at the time of renewal. The lessee builds, and so improves the property, and at the end of the term the building belongs to the lessor. In this way much of Col. Astor's realty was improved. Then he has done a great deal of building on his own account, small private dwellings, and other classes of buildings.

JOHN JACOB ASTOR.

It is the custom of the estate to consider a row of houses as a unit. This unit must yield a fixed rate of interest. Should one house receive more than its due share, it is balanced by the others in the row. The result of this idea is that all the property is in splendid condition. More money is spent on an "Astor house" than the average owner would think of expending on his own property. This scheme is only possible when an individual or an estate owns enough property to be able to average up. A deficiency in one house is made up by a surplus in its neighbor.

Another idea adopted by Colonel Astor in regard to the management of his holdings is that the rents of a given row of buildings are all alike. There is no dickering about it. A schedule price must be paid by the prospective tenant or it is not rented to him.

Colonel Astor has in the last ten years been interested in large building operations. In 1897 he completed that portion of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel known as the "Astoria." In 1905 he completed the Hotel St. Regis, and the Knickerbocker was finished this year. There are rumors afloat that he is contemplating the building of other hotels.

Colonel Astor has invented a pneumatic machine to remove worn out stone from road beds before the new stone is laid. This machine has been used with success in several suburban towns. It took first prize in the World's Columbian Exposition in 1893. He has also invented a practical turbine engine and other mechanical devices. He is the author of "A Journey in Other Worlds," published in 1894.

The real estate holdings of Colonel Astor are scattered in nearly every section of the city. He has large holdings in the downtown section, very valuable Broadway business property, as well as a number on 5th av, all of which have increased immensely in value during the last five years.

Some of his properties as they appear in the Real Estate Directory are as follows: Nos. 416 Broome st; 24 Dey; 67 Ganseveort; 140 Grand; 163 Greenwich; 93 Prince; 10 Stanton; 12 Vesey; 6 Wall; 819 Washington; 193 East 4th; 505-6 East 5th; 441, 502-3 East 6th; 309, 331, 403 West 14th; 333, 402, 409 West 15th; 143, 342 West 16th; 55 West 25th; 21, 52, 58 to 62 West 26th; 1 East 33d; 2 West 33d; 18, 241 West 34th; 3, 234 West 35th; 611 West 50th; 2 East 55th; 7 West 58th; 8 East 59th; 40 East 62d; 5 East 65th; 237 West 78th; 94, 189, 277 Bowery; 52, 96, 211, 842, 2141, 2201, 2523, 2556, 2802, 2858 Broadway; 29 Park Row; 401 Riverside Drive; 44 Union Square; 328, 344, 386, 697, 840, 884, 2100 5th av; 304, 414, 424 6th av; 74, 102, 121 8th av, etc.

Why This Discrepancy?

With all the talk about unequal taxation that has been going on for some time past a conveyance just recorded is of unusual interest. The property in question is 402 Broome st. The building is a 3-sty tenement on the north side of the street, about 25 ft. east of Marion st, and is 25.3x75.3x24.10x71.4. George Thum deeded it to the City of New York on March 13, 1908, for a consideration stated in the document to be $40,000. It is assessed at $18,500. Has the city been receiving too little in the way of taxes, or did they pay too dearly for the parcel?

FINDING BUYERS.

One of the greatest problems encountered by the broker is in the building of a strong list of Realty Buyers. The solution is found in the geographically arranged conveyance records, with addresses of grantees, as given in the Record and Guide Quarterly. For example: Select a property which you consider reasonable in price or terms, and have a circular letter, offering the parcel, sent to all the buyers during the quarter or year, in the block, street or neighborhood. This method cannot fail to produce results.

Favors a Business Tax.

I do not want to start a debating society on the business tax. I find that some of the reform tax associations as a rule are aiming at taxing land and evidently aiming to spare everything else. I claim, and the facts will show it, that a business tax will get its chief income from articles of extravagance, and that the charge to a small shop keeper will be nominal. The large commission houses whose sales run into the millions, the department stores whose silks and satins create the big total of sales, the brokers and bankers whose profits are enormous, and the picture dealers and jewelers will pay the largest share of the tax.

The small shop keeper will be better off to pay a nominal tax than by having his rent steadily raised by reason of higher real estate tax. My object in asking for a business tax is to get the means to pay for our extra firemen, extra policemen (the streets are now full of policemen who are only used at the business crossings) and to get the people to pay for it who cause the expense. Land speculators will always exist; and I am not sure that they are a bigger nuisance than the merchandise or other speculators. The income of the city is often and generally increased by the fancy values they make for land. Take speculation away from land and you will see a drop in the tax receipts of the city.

March 16, 1908. REAL ESTATE.

Brokers and Brokerage.

Real estate brokers are practitioners in a profession that has no recognition as such in the institutions of learning that assume the function of preparing the practitioners in all recognized professions, and starting them forth upon their careers duly certified as "doctors" or "bachelors" or "masters," with their respective diplomas. Yet many of these soon or late find their way into the real estate profession. It may be that after training for the law, medicine, the ministry, or journalism, one has preferred to follow in a father's footsteps, or has been attracted by some fortunate family experience to the buying and selling of real estate for others, or, as often happens, having experimented in other professions or employments without satisfactory success, one has turned to brokerage as to something offering better opportunity for successful achievement.

But in this profession as in all others, careful preparation is essential to success. Unless the broker can make his services of value to his clients, he is unworthy of a place in the profession and is not likely to make a permanent success in it. In a different order of society there would be no place for the broker, but while society continues to be organized on the competitive basis, and while private ownership of land continues to be tolerated, the real estate broker who knows his business will continue to be a useful member of that society. Particularly in a city of so complex organization as is New York the real estate broker is not only useful but to all who have any interest in real property, either as buyers or sellers, peculiarly necessary. His stock in trade is his knowledge of the elements of values, the trend and course of market development, the knowledge of what properties are for sale at possible prices, and of the personnel of the general market. He should also keep informed of the general trend of the money market, so as to be able to give wise and conservative counsel when called upon.

It is a fact, not perhaps peculiar to the real estate brokerage profession, that the broker and his efforts are most highly appreciated by the most expert and extensive dealers in real estate, and it is only the ignoramus whose view of the broker is begun in disdain. It follows as a natural sequence that it is the ignoramus who makes mistakes in real estate operations, while the operator or speculator who consults freely with the brokers has a large line of opportunities from which to make his selections, and is generally successful in his operations. Examples of this character could be quoted in great number, but would be invidious; the general experiences of the thousands of poor people who bought lots in the sandy wastes of remote Long Island in the wild orgy of speculation of 1904-05-06 will be sufficient. On their faith in big newspaper advertisements, Sunday trains, free tickets, band concerts and partial payment contracts, they parted with hard-earned money that they can never hope to recover. If they had taken the advice of established and reputable real estate brokers they would have avoided such an experience, and saved much money that has literally gone to waste.

In the larger operations the advice and assistance of the alert and progressive broker are of proportionately greater value. If it is a question of investment, the experienced broker knows and can advise whether the statement of income is within the range of probability and whether the statement of expenditures is comprehensive and accurate; and of even greater importance, whether the future prospects of the property in question justify an investment. If it is a question of exchange, he can intelligently advise respecting the marketability of the property to be taken in exchange. If it is a speculation that is intended, he can lay out the probabilities with approximate accuracy. It is in this latter branch of operations that the great profits in New York City and suburban real estate operations are made, and it is here that the broker is of most value to his client; and as a nautral sequence it is here that the broker makes his largest profits. For there is not only the negotiation of the purchase, but often the financing of the operation and invariably the resale of the property.

If, in process of time the successful broker becomes the successful operator and investor in real estate, it is only a natural evolution, justifying again the confidence which the best posted and most intelligent judges feel in the present stability and future attractiveness of New York City real property, both as merchandise and as a permanent investment.

Hearings Held on Rapid Transit Amendments.

Amendments to the Rapid Transit Law were introduced by Senator Travis and Assemblyman Beverly R. Robinson at Albany Monday evening and Tuesday afternoon of this week. This is the bill, as printed in the Record and Guide, with some minor changes.

Allan Robinson, president of the Allied Real Estate Interests; J. Edward Swanstrom, Oliver Semple, counsel of the Public Service Commission, 1st district, and ex-Senator Brush, of Brooklyn, all favored the bill.

The object of this bill is to meet the demand of the public for the immediate construction of subways. If public money is unattainable, private capital must be interested. The bill provides for the sale of franchises at public auction for a term of thirty-five years. The city has the option of buying the road, any time during twenty-five years, by paying for the equipment and rolling stock. Pipe galleries may be built at public expense. This, however, is entirely separate and must be maintained by the city. Provisions are made for the extension of present roads, either at private or public expense.

Ex-Senator Elsberg appeared before the Senate Cities Committee at the request of Chairman White and Senator Travis and opposed the amendments. He could see nothing in the bill to encourage private capital except "the practically perpetual franchise proposed."

"The people should vote on the proposition before it is changed," asserted Mr. Elsberg. "The bill is in contravention of the people. It provides for perpetual franchises unless the city buys back the road, and to all practical purposes this would never be done."

There will in all probability be a hearing next Tuesday when the matter will be again considered.

Again the Saxe Bill.

The following letter was sent to the members of the Allied Real Estate Interests relative to the Saxe bill introduced a short time since in Albany. The Allied Interests are making a strong stand to prevent its passage and are using every means in their power to that end:

To the Members of the Allied Real Estate Interests:

At the hearing on March 11, before the Senate Judiciary Committee relative to the Saxe bill requiring the consideration of real estate transfers to be stated, the association was represented by Alfred L. White, of William A. White & Sons; R. G. Babbage, of the United States Realty & Improvement Company; Clarence W. Eckardt, of Horace S. Ely & Co., and the undersigned. Representatives from a number of other organizations were also heard in opposition. Hon. Lawson Purdy, president of the Board of Tax Commissioners, appeared in support of the bill.

The association submitted a hundred original letters from real estate owners and brokers opposing the enactment of the bill. While we believe that the opposition which has been aroused to this measure will result in its defeat, we shall not cease our efforts in this direction. I am,

Very truly yours,

March 16, 1908. ALLAN ROBINSON, President.

New Bridge Connected.

On Thursday of this week "Little Tim" Sullivan, representing Mayor McClellan, walked across a girder between the spans of the Blackwell's Island cantilever bridge at 3.33 o'clock precisely. When he reached the centre of the girder he stopped and broke a bottle of champagne. The day was not propitious for a festival. It was a cold and rainy day and the coats of those present had an ice coating before half an hour of the wait of two hours was ended.

Commissioner Stevenson, of the Bridge Department, followed Alderman Sullivan, and with him were C. M. Ingersoll, chief engineer of the department; J. D. Wilkens and J. A. Knighton, the engineers in charge for the city; E. C. Felton, president, and J. V. W. Reynders, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, and Thomas Earle, F. C. Kunz and F. W. Cohen, who were in charge of the erection of the bridge for the company. Others in the party were F. Van Zant Lane, traffic engineer of the Bridge Department; O. M. Kelley, engineer in charge of the Williamsburgh Bridge; Charles MacDonald, Professor William H. Burr, of Columbia, and A. L. Bowman, consulting engineer of the Bridge Department.

The Sale of Business Property a Specialty.

IN this era of concentration and competition the business of every well regulated real estate office is divided into separate and distinct departments, such as selling, renting, appraising, management, repairs, mortgages, etc. The head of each department must be an expert for his particular position. Usually he is trained for years for that especial branch of the business. Concentration of effort is the essence of success.

CHARLES F. NOYES.

The field covered by a successful real estate office, whether located downtown or uptown, is arranged and divided into zones. For each zone there is a selling and renting man who is held responsible for the success of the business in that particular district. They have been trained for their particular position and know, from actual experience, the conditions existing in their field. They must know the know the owners in their owners and firms in their district and be well posted as to valuations, sales, etc. They must also know, in a general way, the expiration of most leases, and the rental capacity and values of the various types of buildings. In other words, each real estate office should be a bee-hive of active specialists and its success depends upon the carefully directed efforts of these different departments.

The most difficult branch of the business is that of selling. Success in selling real estate depends first of all upon a long experience in a particular district gained by the closest sort of application. First of all the broker must have an unquenchable fondness for the business and make a study of every detail connected with it. Only years of study and effort will enable him to even master the rudiments of initial success; and no matter how able or experienced a broker may be, success will not be his, unless he has, above everything else, the confidence of his clients, and is well regarded throughout the district in which he labors for strict honesty and all it implies; truthfulness, and conservatism. No business requires a more sturdy honesty than real estate. Relations between broker and client are of the most confidential nature. To make a deal and earn a commission, the broker must bring about a condition whereby seller and buyer are both satisfied.

A successful broker must know and be able to tell of all sales that have been made throughout his district, he must know every owner in his district; he must know, in a general way, all property that is for sale and under what conditions; and last, but not least, he must know the business conditions as they actually exist. For the value of real estate usually depends upon its earning capacity, earning capacity upon rents, rents upon supply and demand, and supply and demand cannot be created by theory, but only by actual conditions among the business firms located in any particular neighborhood. In a metropolis such as New York, business conditions are continually changing—firms migrate to other business centres. One line of business goes out, another comes in. A successful broker must be in touch with and have his hand on the pulse of these conditions and be able to anticipate all possible changes and note any improvement or depression in business conditions. Having mastered these rudiments of the business he can then, and only then, present a selling proposition in an intelligent manner.

A broker should never attempt to sell a property that he does not thoroughly believe in. He should endeavor to fit the property to the man. Only will experience tell him how to obtain the best results. It may be the adjoining owner who will be interested; it may be the occupant of the building. Experience may lead him to offer the property to a successful firm whom he knows will be interested in procuring by purchase a business home. The successful broker must personally know all the investors and speculators who are operating in his particular district. Some there are who specialize in corners—others in strategic "key lots."

Success is certain to come to the broker who has common sense, who is an indefatigable worker, who is strictly honest and conservative, but not until he has served a long apprenticeship, and from experience thoroughly learned his business.

And, in this business, as in no other, the axiom is true, "Nothing suceeds like success." If the broker from experience is found to be honest, trustworthy, and conservative; if his predictions and opinions as to realty values are realized and fulfilled, and his clients are successful in their operations, then will his business continue to grow and increase, but the moment he errs, thenceforth confidence in his judgment is shaken and his success an impossibility.

CHARLES F. NOYES.

Condemning Lands for Public Use.

EXCERPTS FROM AN ADDRESS DELIVERED BY JOHN H. HALLOCK BEFORE THE Y. M. C. A. RECENTLY.

Under the old feudal system in vogue in England from the time of William the Conqueror, all land was owned by the Crown or Sovereign, which the subjects had the use of as a grant in return for the services rendered by them.

Great abuses grew from this ownership, and to such an extent that in 1215 at Runnymede the subjects of King John forced upon him the execution of the Magna Charter, which provided that the land of the subjects could not be taken from them unless just compensation was given therefor. So that here the first limitation was placed upon the Sovereign power. This provision is recognized and followed in most constitutions since that time.

From this limitatiou sprung various rules and procedures which are followed in acquiriug title to private property for public uses or utilities.

The inherent sovereign power is held by the people or Government over estates or individual's private property to take back or appropriate the same for public uses and for public uses only, and takes the same without reference to the burden imposed on any one else. In the United States the right can be exercised either by a State or the Federal Government. The legislature has the power to decide whether the property should be taken for public purposes and for public purposes only, and not take it from one man for public uses, and then transfer it to another. It is not necessary for the power to be used for the benefit of a whole community but can be exercised if a great number of inhabitants are to be benefited. The mode of exercising this power is regulated by constitutional provisions and by statutes. The whole right is controlled by constitutional amendments to Article 5 of the Constitution of the United States, as follows: Relating to taking private property for public purposes: "nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation." This same right is recognized generally by all civilized nations.

One must be careful to properly understand the meaning of the word property, for property itself is nothing more than the right to own, enjoy and dispose of, which also includes the use; in fact, it is nothing more than a bundle of rights to be handled in any way one see fit and use without the courtesy or permission of any one, and may be disposed of after death of the owner in the way he may have wished or specified.

Land for public parks is acquired in the same way as streets: First, there is a demand in the section for the improvement; next the petition is presented to the Local Board and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for the layout. It is then returned to the Local Board for the purpose of acquiring title and back again to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and direct to the Corporation Counsel to begin the proceeding. It is not necessary to present the matter to the Local Board at all. The matter may be brought directly to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, which has the power to initiate the proceeding.

The present policy of the Board of Estimate in the matter of acquiring title to property for public parks and public places which increase the street area is for the city to bear half the cost and the other half assessed upon the property benefited. Heretofore the entire cost was borne by the City of New York, and public parks were always in demand, but under the new policy of the Local Board the entire situation has been changed.

An amendment to the present system of acquiring property has been suggested by some able minds for the city not only to take the property which is actually required for the improvement, but also all the property that is deemed to benefit thereby. The plan is also to acquire this property and the city to sell it at public sales; it would reap the benefits of its improvements. Those opposed to the plan claim that the city is reimbursed through increased taxation. Nothing has ever been done on this line; it is simply a suggestion, but some day something of the kind will be adopted. As soon as the site for any improvement has been selected the newspapers get the news and it is published broadcast that on or before a certain day the city will erect on a certain location a fire house, a school or a police station, bridge approach, or will tear down the buildings and develop the location into a park. The tenants see the plan clearly and immediately seek other quarters; the small boy seeing his chance breaks windows and otherwise damages the property. The thief gets in his high art and carefully removes all gas fixtures, copper, boilers and lead pipe. The building is a wreck.

Now the city sends a photographer around and gets a picture, so that when testimony is taken some months afterwards the owner is confronted with a picture of his property in a most dilapidated condition.

The expert first examines the property in question very carefully. First as to its general condition of repair, then the number of apartments and stories and stores if any, number of rooms in each apartment. Draws a diagram of each floor, showing location of all improvements and the staircases, etc. He looks up the actual sales that have been made in the neighborhood.

The mode of appointing commissioners as now provided should be changed and entirely removed from politics. The power of appointment should rest with a reputable body of sound business men like the Chamber of Commerce or some similar body or organization. The city should be divided in sections, like south of 14th st, West Side, south of 14th st, East Side, 14th st to 59th st, East Side, same on West Side. Appoint three, six, nine or twelve commissioners to each district, as the improvements might warrant or according to the population. Have each commission comprised of three men, the chairman being a member of the bar, at a salary of $10,000 per year, and the other two members at $7,500 each, to be appointed for a term of years. Let them hold sessions every day in the week except Saturday and Sunday and the same number of hours as the court is now held by the Justices of the Supreme Court. These commissioners to act only in the case of dispute between the city and the owner of property the city is about to take for some improvement. All property should be purchased within 60 days from the day it is selected for a public improvement and paid for in the day in which the title is vested in the city. The price should be arrived at by two or three real estate experts making their appraisals for the city, and finally agreeing on the amount among themselves to be paid for the property, and this amount paid on the day of taking title, and if this amount is not agreeable to the party selling, let him accept this amount as part payment and go before one of these sets of commissioners and prove the value of the property, and endeavor to get the difference between the amount and his figures. In this way the owner would get a certain amount in cash which he could immediately use, and the balance would be tied up until such time as the property was sold.

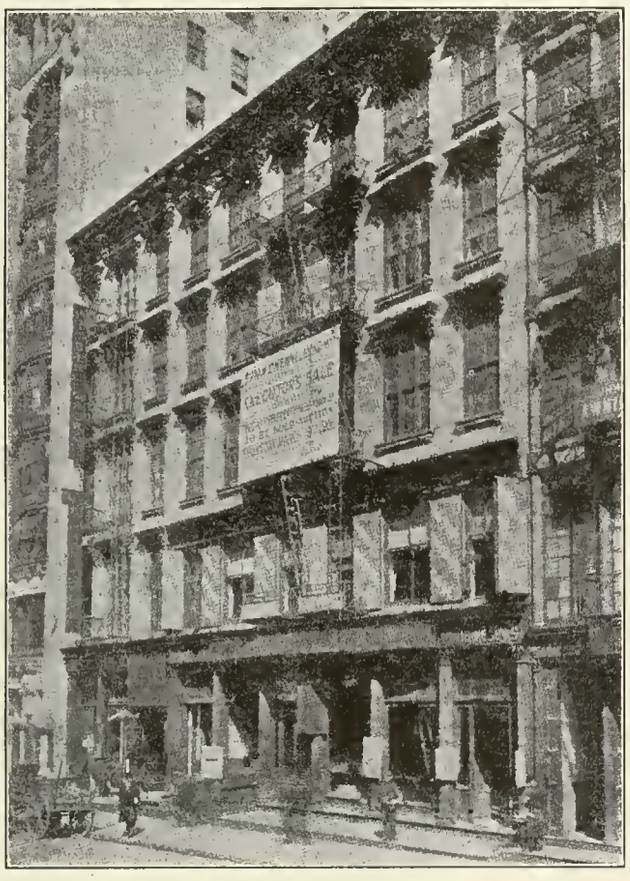
Lawyers Who Lend Money.



Lawyers who lend their clients' funds on real estate experience great difficulty in selecting from the mass of applications presented those which may be worthy of investigation. The collateral mortgage records in the Record & Guide Quarterly will show at a glance what loans have been made in a street or block during the quarter or year.

Sale of the Meeks Estate.

At the stand of Bryan L. Kennelly on last Thursday three parcels were offered at public auction by order of Edwin B. Meeks, sole surviving executor of Joseph W. Meeks. There were two parcels on Vesey st and one in West 27th st.

The uptown one was the first offered. It was 31 West 27th st, formerly used as the residence of the Meeks family. The story as to how it came into the possession of the family has already been related in this paper. It is a 5-sty building, which up to a few years ago was used as a chop house. It is centrally located, being 137.7 west of Broadway. The McAdoo subway station is on the corner of 6th av and 28th st, as is the elevated station. Directly on the east is the old Metropolitan Hotel. It has a frontage of 28 ft. and a depth of 98.9. The opening bid was $50,000. They jumped in steps of $5,000, and finally the price at which it was knocked down was $70,000. Louis Cohen was the purchaser.

The second parcel to be offered was the northeast corner of Vesey and Church sts. This property is 52.5x about 75. It has an extremely desirable location. The light privileges are especially good. The opening bid was $200,000, and after some spirited bidding it was bid in by Charles A. Draper.

NOS. 14 AND 16 VESEY STREET.

The last parcel to be offered was that of 14 and 16 Vesey st. This is the building in which the sale took place. The leases amounted to $18,000 a year and expire May 1, 1910. There is one vacancy. The opening bid was also $200,000 and by jumps of $10,000 the sum of $300,000 was quickly reached. Then there was a lull and it was finally knocked down to George M. Baker, a party in interest, for $315,000.

The terms of sale were generous. Ten per cent. of the purchase price was to be paid at the time and place of sale. Seventy per cent. might remain on bond and mortgage, at 4½ per cent., at the option of the purchaser, for three or five years, with the privilege to pay same off any time on giving ninety days' notice.

The only other recent sale where a comparison in price might be made was that of the Evening Post plot. One-half of their present holding was purchased for $126,000. This included an old 5-sty business building which was torn down to make way for the present structure, which was said to have cost $500,000.

Among the bidders on the Vesey st parcels were George Milne, Max Marx, Alfred E. Marley and William H. Chesebrough. A party in interest was the highest bidder on both pieces.

Offering Adjoining Property.

Some real estate brokers have made a marked success in the past few years of selling property to owners of adjoining property. Property under contract, property held for years, property recently bought, all figure in these transactions, and the news and records of the Record and Guide Weekly should be carefully followed. Another favorite method when an owner refuses to sell is to offer him adjoining property if he thinks so well of the neighborhood.

REAL ESTATE NOTES

Isabel C. Nash recorded a lease of 290 5th av to Irving E. Raymond for 21 years at an annual rental of $17,500.

Partition proceedings have been begun against Robert B. Marten by Charles W. Ballard involving the property 94 Fulton st.

Oscar D. and Herbert V. Dike announce the removal of their offices from 67 and 69 West 125th st to the Century Building, 1 West 34th st.

The Germania Life Insurance Co. loaned the Leo Co. $90,000 for a building operation in the east side of the Southern Boulevard, 186.10 ft. north of Home st, on a plot 150x105.

The Webster Realty Co., Mayer S. Auerbach president, is the buyer of the block front on the west side of Broadway, between 152d and 153d sts. This property was reported sold last week by the estate of Charles T. Barney.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. loaned to Louis M. and Thomas W. Jones $700,000 on the property situated at the northeast corner of Broadway and Franklin st, 50x150, where a 12-sty basement and sub-basement office building is to be erected by Louis M. Jones & Co., 350 Broadway.

A lien filed against 173 and 175 Rivington st last week reveals an unusual business complication. The owner, A. L. Kass, received a check from an officer of the lienor company for $40 nine years ago, which has not yet been paid. The company refuses, after long disputation, to accept this check as part payment of its claim of $150. Mr. Kass will bond the lien and fight.

Judgment Reversed in the Telephone Case.

An opinion of much interest to property owners, especially apartment landlords, was handed down by the New York Supreme Court, Appellate Term, in February, in an appeal by Emanuel E. Fox, plaintiff, from a judgment in favor of Francis A. Murdock, defendant, rendered in the Municipal Court of the City of New York, Borough of Manhattan, Tenth District. It says:

The action is for rent for the month of June, 1907, under a written lease for the term of one year, commencing October 1, 1906, and terminating September 30, 1907. The defendant moved out of the premises the last day of May, 1907, having given plaintiff notice of his intention to move in a letter dated May 3, 1907. The defense to the action is a constructive eviction. As the Court below found for the defendant, the Appellate Court will accept the defendant's version as correct as to disputed questions of fact.

It appears that plaintiff's superintendent was in the habit of listening at the switchboard or at the telephone in her apartment when defendant's wire was in use, and of making insulting and even slanderous remarks concerning the defendant's wife to the elevator boys in plaintiff's employment. For a long time neither defendant nor his wife knew anything of this nefarious procedure on the part of plaintiff's superintendent. Consequently it cannot be said that the said note formed the basis for or would justify a finding that the defendant was annoyed or disturbed in his possession at the time these acts were going on. Finally, however, when the elevator boys had been discharged by plaintiff, they informed defendant's wife of this reprehensible conduct of plaintiff's superintendent, and thereupon defendant's wife called on plaintiff and complained to him of the behavior of his said superintendent. There was also some trouble of a minor nature between the superintendent and defendant's wife arising from a demand by the former that defendant's servant use the basement door only in going in and out of the house.

"A constructive eviction," it continues, "is something done by a landlord or his agents, which deprives a tenant of the full use, benefit and enjoyment of the demised premises; and such acts of the lessor, or his agents, accompanied by an abandonment of possession by the lessee, with reasonable promptitude, is deemed a virtual expulsion of the tenant, and, equally with an actual expulsion, precludes the recovery of rent. If the landlord suffers acts to be done, which make it necessary for the tenant to remove, or if he permitted interference by those acting under his authority which deprives the tenant of the means or power of beneficial enjoyment of the premises, or, at least materially impairs such enjoyment, such acts must be considered an eviction (McAdam on Landlord and Tenant, 1293; 120 N. Y. 345, 351; 38 Misc., 300; 128 N. Y. 284). Furthermore, the landlord is liable for the misconduct of his agent, when perpetrated by the latter in the course of his employment, even though the landlord did not authorize, justify or know of the misconduct (McAdam on Landlord and Tenant, 848). But, as before stated, the alleged acts of the superintendent not having been made known to the defendant or his wife personally or made in their presence or hearing, it cannot be said that the defendant could base an eviction thereon. If, however, after notice to the landlord of the misconduct of his superintendent, the former had permitted the annoyance to continue, he would have been accountable for the acts of the superintendent. But there is no evidence whatever of any continuance of the said misconduct of the superintendent subsequent to the making of the complaint by defendant's wife to the plaintiff. The inference, therefore, is that such misconduct ceased. So far as the question of laches in moving out of the premises is concerned, it may be said that the peculiar circumstances of the case were such that it cannot be said as a matter of law that the defendant lost the right to repudiate the hiring by reason of lack of reasonable promptitude in moving out. The question of reasonable promptitude in removing from the premises was a question of fact to be determined by the court, sitting as a jury, from all the facts and circumstances disclosed by the evidence, and his decision on that question should not be disturbed.

"For the reasons above stated," concludes the court, "the judgment should be reversed and a new trial granted, with costs to appellant to abide the event."

Concurring, Justice MacLean says:

Without determining the question of constructive eviction in this action, for rent accruing after vacation by the tenant of the premises leased, by or through acts and conduct of an agent of the plaintiff in interfering with a maid of the defendant and in lending in and out of season a too willing ear at the telephone switchboard, rendering the tenancy, as declared, very unpleasant and annoying, even unbearable, the case is barren of such facts or conduct later than the middle of March, 1907, and, upon hearsay, later than sometime, not appearing, in April, when the plaintiff was informed and though requested refused to discharge that agent. Upon the occurrence of circumstances amounting to a constructive eviction, the tenant is put to his prompt election to tolerate what is unwelcome or to remove from the premises. If he does not speedily evince the latter determination he will be held to have accommodated himself to the former alternative. Retention of the premises until the 25th of May even upon written notice dated May 3, 1907, by the defendant that he would vacate and surrender on or before the 31st inst., without reason therein, may not, in view of the evidence, be determined to be a prompt election. The judgment should therefore be reversed and a new trial ordered.

Judgment reversed and a new trial ordered with costs to appellant to abide the event.

Washington Heights Activity.

The recent activity on Washington Heights has been a source of gratification to the real estate community at large. Not only those who are interested in that section but every broker in the city is affected. For something like two years this particular section of the city has been the sore spot in the market. Being newly developed, it was questionable in the minds of many what its future would be. When it was observed that a cheap grade of apartments was being constructed in certain streets in that district, dire results were prophesied. Some of these buildings were finished, others were stopped for one reason and another. Most of these properties have changed hands.

The man who purchased land on a long contract with but little money invested has been disposed of. The man who went in for a "quick turn" has long since sold his holdings. The fact is that the section has come down to a business basis—a basis that will interest a business man. Substantial builders have been acquiring large corners, prominently situated. Their object being to develop these properties at the earliest opportunity. A lesson, however, has been learned. It was an expensive one, and its effects have left their mark. While some paid the price for their knowledge, others are reaping the reward, with the result that Washington Heights to-day has a great future. HOUSES CHEAPLY CONSTRUCTED ON THE HEIGHTS ARE A FAILURE.

The man who bought in a centrally located section and built a good house has made a success of his venture, even though he paid a slightly advance price for his property unimproved. The man who gave room space a little more than the minimum laid down by law, has a class of tenants who are permanent. Vacancies in these structures are easily filled. The man on the other hand who has figured down to the foot the greatest number of rooms possible on a floor, all of the smallest size allowable, has vacancies enough in the year to make his ledger compare unfavorably with the more liberal man.

A retired builder, who for years was prominently connected with Washington Heights, said the other day on this subject: "The proposition is comparatively simple. It is absolutely necessary for the builder to cater to the woman of the house. After all, this is only fair. She is at home all day, and must have conveniences. Give her a good ice box, a range that will cook, a closet in the principal bedroom that will hold a skirt. Do away with those horrible cupboards where you climb up on the base drawer and have to stretch yourself all out of proportion to reach the hook. After all, it is the little things that make an apartment comfortable. It is to looking after the details that I attribute my success."

Parisian Model Tenements.

There is a tenement society in Paris which builds houses of the most approved type for the poorer class of tenement dwellers. The first house was built in Menilmontant, the Parisian "lower east side," about three years ago. The rents range from $32 to $80 a year. Every family must have at least three children. A short time after completion every apartment was occupied The house has 72 apartments, 2, 3 and 4 rooms each. At the present time it shelters 435 people, 344 of whom are children. The mortality in this house is only 9 per thousand, while the city mortality is 19 per thousand. So successful was this house that No. 2 was decided on and immediately built. This latter house has 94 apartments, shelters 640 people, 427 of whom are children. The rents range from $36.50 to $84.50 a year. The largest family in this house belongs to a letter carrier. The family consists of himself, wife and fourteen children. He pays $81 a year rent.

There are several innovations in these buildings. The windows are placed so high in the wall that the youngsters cannot reach the openings in the absence of their parents. The walls separating the children's apartment from that of their parents does not extend to the ceiling. Below the ordinary balustrade for the use of adults is a smaller one for the children. The company receives about three per cent. interest on its investment. The tenants are mostly railroad men and municipal laborers.

Meeting the Exactions of Present-Day Tenants.

Nowadays the requirements of the average apartment seeker are so exacting that greater care is given to the arrangement of rooms and their appointments than ever before. Heretofore not a few of the large number of apartment buildings erected in Manhattan have been designed with more regard toward conserving space for the owner than for the convenience and comfort of tenants. Such, however, cannot be said of the half dozen or more large structures of that class recently erected in the upper Riverside Drive section. Among these may be mentioned the "Concord," at the southeast corner of Riverside Drive and 119th st, erected by Nathan Loewy Realty and Construction Co.

The building in question is 9 stories in height, of limestone and steel construction with steel partition walls, covering a plot 100x100. In the layout the apartments are arranged in suites of seven and eight rooms, with two baths each, butler's pantry and abundant closet room. The front apartments are so conveniently grouped that parlor, library and dining-room may be thrown together, making practically one large room overlooking Riverside Drive and the Palisades. The bedrooms in the Concord are grouped together and in the quieter portion of the apartment. The trim throughout is unique, and some new and attractive designs and effects have been produced.

CONCORD APARTMENT HOUSE.
Southeast Corner Riverside Drive and 119th Street.

The parlor, library and all bedrooms are in white with mahogany doors, and all floors are of oak of high quality and finish. The building was constructed under the constant supervision of the owner, Mr. Nathan Loewy, a builder of wide experience in such work.

"All plumbing in the Concord," said Mr. Loewy, "has received the special and careful attention of a competent engineer, only the best material and workmanship being used."

One of the features to which more than ordinary attention has been paid is the laundry, which necessary adjunct has fittingly been relegated to the basement of the building. It contains a complete laundry outfit, with tubs, steam drying rooms and ironing tables, so that tenants may have the weekly wash entirely removed from the apartment when desired. A wide centre court, 27x27, insures excellent light, and the entrance and private hallways are more than ordinarily inviting. "Both in the grouping of rooms and appointments the aim has been to please, and judging by our success in renting, we have succeeded," observed the owner.

To the Record and Guide on its Fortieth Anniversary.

"We've been together now for forty years,
And it doesn't seem a day too much;
There's not a Record of New York land
That the Guide has failed to touch.

"We've been together now since '68,
In this good old isle of the Dutch,
So here's to the friend of real estate—
For the Record and Guide is such.

"We've been together now for forty years
And the money I've made is much;
For I studied the Record and Guide each week—
Then I bought like the good old Dutch."

Sixth Avenue Will Benefit by Subway.

Very few transfers of properties along 6th av, from 23d to 42d st, have recently taken place, as the majority of the owners in that section are either holding their realty for future higher prices, or to use for certain lines of business in which they are interested.

Values in the section in question are steadily getting higher, which can be easily verified by the fact that mostly every owner of real estate in that section has been offered higher figures than what they have paid for their property. Another reason which is very important to investors is that prospective tenants are inquiring through various channels as to securing locations in the district mentioned, and always intimating that they will readily pay an advanced rental over what property is bringing at the present time. This in our opinion is conclusive, and if property were offered at private sale or at auction, the owner of the property would readily find the buyer willing to pay him a profit over his original purchase price.

It is very hard to place any definite standard value upon any single parcel of real estate in the 6th av section, as the selling value is liable to vary over night. Any suggested improvement in the immediate vicinity causes the asking price to be changed to a higher amount for all property in that part of the city.

Sixth av will benefit as much and probably more than any other avenue in the city when the new McAdoo terminal and subway are completed, together with the Pennsylvania Railroad depot.

The character of the different business houses in this section of the city is gradually becoming better, which is partly caused by the opportunity given to the owner of property in this section, when a vacancy occurs, to select his tenant, as there are always so very many applicants in various lines of business, and it is to the owner's interest at all times to select not only a new tenant who is willing to pay higher rental, but also a tenant whose class of business he considers will be an improvement to his property.

Very few long leases are being made at present, as it is very easy to obtain a high enough rental for a short term lease, to pay all carrying charges, for any property purchased in this section. When the terminal station on the west side of the avenue, from 32d to 33d sts, is completed, it will certainly assure the avenue of many other improvements in the way of new buildings. I. J. POCHER.

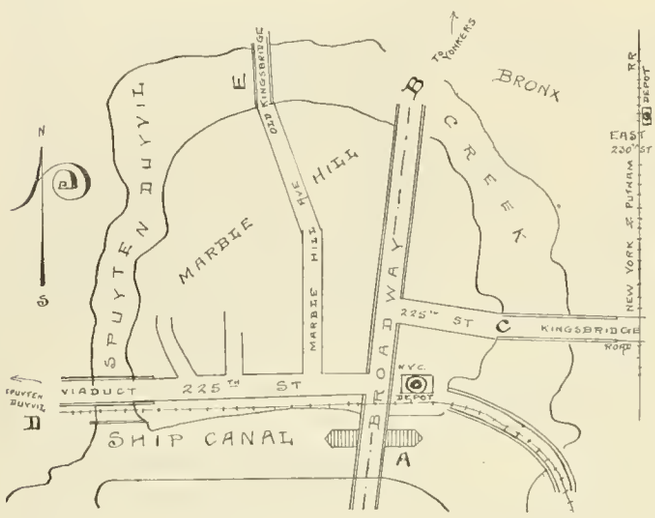
Old Mortgage Being Foreclosed.

The premises on the north side of 19th st, 216.8 east of 4th av, is going to be foreclosed to satisfy a judgment amounting to $6,067.50. The interesting feature of this sale is that the mortgage was made June 30, 1855. The action is brought by John A. Stewart against the estate of Thomas J. Oakley. Francis C. Huntington was the referee.

Adams Property at Auction.

Several properties owned by the estate of Albert Adams will be disposed of at auction by Byran L. Kennelly on April 8 next. The properties to be offered are 344 7th av, near 29th st; 181 to 189 Columbus av, northeast corner 68th st; 9 James slip, southwest corner of Water st; 413 and 415 East 34th st, and 19½ to 23 Borden av, Long Island City.

Rules of Appraisals.



Every broker is called upon from time to time to render formal appraisals. Every transaction in which he engages makes necessary one or more informal appraisals, for his own benefit. The Record and Guide Quarterly, geographically arranged, is of the greatest assistance in the determination of values.

PROPERTY OWNERS' SECTION.

Much Needed Improvements in the Kingsbridge Section.

Where the extreme upper end of Manhattan meets the winding shore of the westerly part of the Bronx Borough, nature, assisted by the U. S. Government, has located a small island, known as "Marble Hill," which forms the connecting link at that point between the two boroughs. Created originally a peninsula, bounded on three sides by the Harlem River and Spuyten Duyvil Creek, Marble Hill became an island when the U. S. Government separated it from Manhattan by cutting the Ship Canal through it at the south.

As no traffic can pass from one borough to the other at this point without crossing this little isle, a number of bridges (leading north, south, east and west) are required in order to readily connect the thoroughfares of the Bronx with those of Manhattan. (See accompanying map.)

The north and south ends (see A and B) are completed, viz.: the double-deck drawbridge over the Ship Canal at the south end of Marble Hill (A), connecting it with the lower city, and the Broadway bridge (B) over the Spuyten Duyvil Creek, at the north end, leading to Kingsbridge. These carry the elevated extension of the Broadway "Sub" and trolley lines from Manhattan towards Van Cortlandt Park and Yonkers.

The connection eastward (see C) has so far retained its rural character over the old "Farmer's Bridge" (erected during the early Dutch period), notwithstanding the continuous efforts of the local taxpayers to have it replaced by a modern highway. After years of agitation the widening of this necessary road (known as Muscoota or West 225th) st, has passed the local Boards of the two boroughs affected and has also been authorized by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment—and yet, the actual work is being held up. Why? Are the authorities waiting for another grade crossing calamity at this point? It came very near being supplied recently, when four persons in a carriage had a miraculous escape at this crossing of the N. Y. & Putnam R. R. just east of Farmers' Bridge.

The contemplated widening of Muscoota st carries with it the abolishment of this dangerous railroad crossing by raising the grade of this street over the railroad tracks, and for that reason alone no time should be lost in starting and completing this necessary improvement. The territory lying east of this railroad crossing, known as the Bailey tract, which is rapidly being built up with 1 and 2-family houses, needs this thoroughfare in order to reach the new subway and N. Y. Central stations at Broadway and West 225th st. Inasmuch as it also is to connect on the Bronx side of the Harlem River with Kingsbridge road, it would complete a great crosstown artery from the east side of Broadway via Fordham sq and Pelham parkway to Long Island Sound.

In order to extend this crosstown highway westward to the Hudson River and for the purpose of making the entire Spuyten Duyvil and Riverdale district directly accessible to the Broadway Subway, a viaduct has been planned from Marble Hill to Spuyten Duyvil Hill, which would be an extension of West 225th st, west of Broadway, to the Hudson River via Spuyten Duyvil road. The N. Y. Central intends building a four-track tunnel under Spuyten Duyvil hill to take the place of its two-track cut at this point, and in order to get the concessions for this project, it has arranged, in connection with the estate of Isaac G. Johnson, to deed the necessary right-of-way for the proposed viaduct to the city, free of charge. Thus the vast tract of property to be benefited by this viaduct will only have to bear the cost of the structure itself, and each individual owner will therefore be assessed only a comparative trifle.

Another point requiring attention by the Bridge Department is the "old original Kings Bridge" (E) of revolutionary times, which connects the northerly end of Marble Hill av with the southerly end of Kingsbridge av at 230th st. This historic landmark (which Gen. Washington and the American Army crossed after the battle of White Plains, followed by Gen. Howe and the Hessians) will be left way below the new grade recently established at the intersection of Kingsbridge av and 230th st, and hence will have to be replaced by a new structure, similar in style to the Broadway Bridge (B) a few hundred feet to the east.

With these improvements and the turning of the abandoned head of the Harlem River, between 225 and 230th sts, into a public playground for the rapidly increasing juvenile population of Kingsbridge, the extreme west approach to New York City would present a finished appearance.

RICHARD ALEXANDER.

Modern Flat Attractive to Average Tenant.

Notwithstanding all that has been said and written in favor of new idea flats these creations are not generally looked upon with favor among owners and builders in New York. It is maintained by them the time is unripe for radical changes in this direction, and that since the requirements of the average tenant are quite fully met in the layout and equipment of the modern flat, it would appear unwise to attempt the experiment. The owner who erects flats for income purposes must needs consults the whims and fancies of his prospective tenants.

In this connection, an authority argues that the apartment that catches the eye of the average tenant who is in a position to pay, say $45 a month, is one that offers great show facilities, being possessed of two parlors, a fine dining-room and a spacious and attractive entrance hall—one susceptible of being turned to the greatest advantage in creating a decidedly crushing first impression. As much as one-half of the floor space of such an apartment is devoted to the parlors and the entrance hall. The dining-room, likewise, is an important consideration, but the rest of the apartment—kitchen, sleeping rooms, closets, etc.—is of small consequence, since they are not on show, and pertaining only to the comfort and health of the family, count for little.

It wou'd therefore seem that the common sense flat is unattractive to prospective tenants, generally, although it cannot be denied but that such a domicile would meet the ideas of tenement dwellers, who, unfortunately, do not possess the means of paying the rent.

For a while, at least, it is believed that flat builders will continue in the well beaten path and leave experiments to the theorist or would-be reformer.

Metallic Protectors for Concrete Curbing.

As the use of plain concrete for curbing is increasing to a large extent hereabouts, it becomes apparent that the exposed outer edge or corner of a curb of that material be reinforced with a metallic protector of such form and strength that it will effectually resist shocks, without in the least becoming separated or loosened from its contact with the concrete. The protecting bar should be galvanized in order that it may repel the damaging attacks of rust. If it be made of material too thin, it will yield to heavy shocks and is liable to develop a slight opening between the metal and the concrete, thereby admitting moisture and frost, which will loosen the protector, rendering it of little or no value as a guard.

It has frequently been pointed out by demonstrations that it is impossible to anchor any kind of bar so that it can be depended upon to remain as placed, unless the anchorage is a solid and integral part of the bar itself. A bar once loosened from the concrete, says Machinery and Trade, rapidly loses its value as a protector when it depends upon bolts to hold it.

Call for a Mass Meeting.

In accordance with the resolution adopted at a recent meeting of the North Side Board of Trade, a mass meeting will be held in the rooms of the Association of Bronx Real Estate Brokers, 149th st and 3d av, at 8 o'clock on Monday night, to consider complaints from property owners relative to the alleged attitude of the Tenement House Department concerning violations.

Property owners' associations are invited to join with the North Side Board of Trade in furthering the desired end. Chairman J. H. Jones will be pleased to receive the names of associations and their secretaries at 950 Ogden av.

Important Test Case for Damages.

During the week Justice Davis, of the Supreme Court, handed down a decision in the case of James Roosevelt and others against the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, as lessees of the Manhattan Elevated Railroad. The court awards the plaintiffs $30,000, as well as $1,800 in rental damages, for the premises 29, 31, 33 and 35 9th av.

Mr. Roosevelt and his associate trustees, who represented the Astor interests, charged that the railway company placed the third track at that point without right, and without their permission, and that their easements were violated and their property damaged.

The Court says that the Legislature granted to the company the right to operate a two-track "L" railway in 9th av, each of the tracks not to exceed five feet in width between the rails.

"The right to use the open space between these tracks for a middle track was not included in this grant.

"Then the third track was built between the two outside tracks. The outside tracks help to support the third track, which then became an integral part of a single structure composed of those three tracks, and the defendants were enabled to run more trains and carry more passengers on the original tracks than was possible before the third track came into use."

It is believed by many that the success of the plaintiffs will be followed by similar suits by owners of realty on both 9th and 3d avs. On 3d av the railway company has a third track nearly all of the way.

The decision is important, as it may ultimately involve millions of dollars.

Another Aid to Renting Apartments.

Every practical improvement which adds to the convenience of a well-planned apartment increases its rental value and enables the owner to secure tenants more quickly than otherwise. Among the latest contrivances now being used in many well-known apartment buildings in Manhattan is a device known as the Lowrie wall safe. It consists of a strongly made iron box for the safe keeping of valuables which may be built into the walls of a chamber or other room, and is said to be both fire and burglar proof. The safe is usually embedded breast high from the floor, at which elevation it is most accessible. In appearance it is unique, and when set up little more than the dial and its small knob is seen; no handles, bolts or hinges. The lock is operated by a combination and is efficient. When opened the door is brought out squarely and carried to one side, allowing for panel work when desired.

Many architects are now specifying these safes in apartment houses and other buildings where a number are to be set. Their cost varies in accordance to dimensions from $17 to $30. Not a few of the large West Side apartments, such as the Bonavista, at 109th st and Riverside Drive; the Hohenzollern, 84th st and West End av; the Rossley Court, 85th st and Central Park West, and a host of equally important structures in Manhattan are equipped with wall safes, which have been found highly satisfactory.

Key to abbreviations:

1st.—Q. C. is an abbreviation for Quit Claim deed, i. e., a deed wherein all the right, title and interest of the grantor is conveyed, omitting all covenants and warranty.

2d.—C. a. G. means a deed containing Covenant against Grantor only, in which he covenants that he hath not done any act whereby the estate conveyed may be impeached, charged or encumbered.

3d.—B. & S. is an abbreviation for Bargain and Sale deed, wherein, although the seller makes no expressed consideration, he really grants or conveys the property for a valuable consideration, and thus impliedly claims to be the owner of it.

4th.—The street and avenue numbers given in these lists are, in all cases, taken from the insurance maps when they are not mentioned in the deeds. The numbers, it will occasionally be found, do not correspond with the existing ones, owing to there having been no official designation made of them by the Department of Public Works.

5th.—The first date is the date the deed was drawn. The second date is the date of filing same. When both dates are the same, only one is given.

6th.—The figures in each conveyance, thus, 2:482—10, denote that the property mentioned is in section 2, block 482, lot 10.

7th.—It should also be noted in section and block numbers that the instrument as filed is strictly followed.

8th.—A $20,000—$30,000 indicates the assessed value of the property, the first figures being for the lot only and the second figures representing both lot and building. Letter P before second figure indicates that the property is assessed as in course of construction. Valuations are from the assesment roll of 1907.

MORTGAGES

NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows: The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given and the amount. The general dates used as headlines are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.

Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street, in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgage, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date.

The first date is the date the mortgage was drawn, the second the date of filing; when both dates are the same, only one is given.

Subscribers will find mortgages in this list with the wrong block number attached. The block number we give is taken from the instrument as filed.

Mortgages against Bronx property will be found altogether at the foot of this list.

March 13, 14, 16, 17, 18 and 19.

HUDSON TERMINAL OFFICE BUILDINGS. CLINTON & RUSSELL, ARCHITECTS

OVER 60 per cent. of the lime used in New York City during the past year has been Rockland-Rockport, and to-day in the building material trade Rockland-Rockport Lime is considered the Standard. This reputation has been won by the quality of lime produced, which, for over a century, has given satisfaction.

The quarries are the best in the United States, the manufacturing being carried on by modern methods, backed by ample capital ($4,000,000), and to-day the equipment is such that the Company handles its own product from the quarries to the consumer. Not only has Rockland-Rockport Lime been used on some of the finest buildings, where quality and material were necessary, but on thousands of apartments and tenement houses, where economy counted.

Used on the Hotel Plaza, Hudson Terminal Buildings, City Investing Building, West Street and U. S. Express Buildings, U. S. Custom House, Police Headquarters, Astor Apartments, etc.

STRONG support is being given in Harlem and the Bronx by property owners' associations to the movement which has for its object the elimination of houses hereafter to be erected for occupatiou by only three families from the operation of the Tenement House Law. The board of trade, the building employers' association and all the organized interests allied with real estate and building in the Bronx, where the movement principally centers, have either registered their approval or are understood to favor the change. Ordinarily, an appeal made with such unaminity by all the business interests concerned would be effectual, as the presumption would be that the reasons were conclusive. In recent years a state of affairs has arisen in the Bronx, especially, that has interfered with the growth of the dwelling-house population. Building sites have become too expensive, in the popular view, for the erection of houses or cottages for one and two families, and the large tenement house is the only recourse of the speculative builder under the restrictions imposed by the law. The situation was in some degree explained at a meeting of the Congestion Congress at the Museum of Natural History by a committee of one of the associations named, the speaker being Mr. Edward J. Murray, who, endorsing all that had been said as to the evils of congestion, suggested this change as one practical way of alleviating them. The Sheridan bill, which is the particular expression of the movement, would regulate the construction of dwellings to be occupied by three families, but would not classify them within the legal definition of "tenements," when they shall stand detached and occupy not more than sixty-five per cent. of the area of the lot. If built on a full lot such a house would have a frontage not exceeding twenty-two feet; it would be a rather superior house by the force of circumstances, and would appeal to people of refinement and in good circumstances, as the minimum investment per house is estimated at eight thousand dollars. At any rate, the plan appeals strongly to building and general bnsiness interests, situated as are those in the Bronx, as a means of making further progress and of obtaining a desirable accession in population.

WITH no thought of detracting from the proper aims and purposes of the social and official forces working for the betterment of conditions in the congested tenement districts, there is yet a very general belief in building and real estate circles that the essential principle in the Sheridan bill—that so-called "three-family houses" hereafter erected in a manner prescribed, shall not be classed and treated as tenements—is a proper provision, and one necessary for the further prosecution of building operations and the encouragement of small investors in the outlying districts of the city. It is said that the erection of hundreds of such dwellings would be commenced immediately in the Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens and Richmond upon the enactment of such a law. The advantages which an owner of a house of this sort would have, from occupying one floor and having two to rent out, would insure an unfailing market among those home-seeking classes who consider themselves debarred under present values and circumstances from investing in dwellings of other kinds in the zones which they prefer. Relief from those visitations of inspectors would be appreciated in a very marked degree, and with each floor independent in all parts these houses would be sought for and rented by people brought up in and preferring to live in private residences, as these would be to all intents and purposes. Ownership or tenancy of such a house, we can believe, would produce, as is claimed, "thrift, good citizenship and civic pride," which are the ends hoped for by the friends of the Tenement House law. Doubtless much of the opposition that has developed against the measure is owing to a false impression, which could be removed if the property owners' associations should undertake a campaign of education among the law-makers. The ambition for home-owning among the people of New York is one which the constituted authorities should take every means to encourage, as it is not so deep-seated in this metropolitan community that it can be neglected under a misapprehension that it can altogether take care of itself, when the fact is that the natural tendency of things now is to eradicate it.

THE Board of Education has called on the Board of Estimate for a special appropriation of three milllon dollars to make alterations in 429 school buildings to render them more safe, or more capable of being readily emptied of pupils in case of fire, the holocaust at Collinwood having served to point out the weaknesses of our own schools, and also an imperative duty in connection therewith. The alterations will consist largely in rearranging hallways, stairways and, in general, the means of speedy exit. Divided among so many jobs, the sum will be exceedingly helpful to some of the building trades in these dull times, much more so than an equal total wonld be if concentrated into only a few large contracts. The feeling is strong among working people and settlement workers that more thought should be given to ways of providing employment by those possibly in a position to undertake large works, or to make more available the means for carrying them on. With two hundred thousand men idle at the opening of spring, there is reason for bringing this suggestion to the attention of those who are custodians of vast funds, or the directors of large interests, who might possibly at this time, as well as any other time, put into motion schemes of betterment—some long in contemplation perhaps—that would in the aggregate set at work large numbers of men. The action of the Board of Education is proof of the possibility of accomplishing a great deal in this direction with concerted action on the part of the well-disposed. This is the feature of the school board's resolution that will be most commended. Though the probability of a repetition of the Collinwood incident in any one of our schools may be remote, the wisdom of taking precautions can not be doubted. As opportunity shall offer every schoolhouse of doubtful construction, judged by present standards, should be replaced by one built from the most approved plans, which are well known to and have often been exemplified by the architectural staff of the school department.

BROKERS see evidences of returning confidence among that class of people who invest their money in real estate. The number of sales reported has been increasing from week to week, and the inquiries from prospective purchasers are growing more numerous each day. This is largely due to the fact that the money market has eased up perceptibly. There is a class of real estate investors who are known as bargain-hunters. After having looked a property over carefully offers are made far below the market value, and at the first sign of trouble these are withdrawn. This is exactly what happened last fall. Disappointment was the result, except in a few isolated cases. The property was not sold. It was astonishing to the real estate interests at large how firm and steady this class of investment held during the troublous times. With the returning confidence in the mercantile world, the realty holder is also encouraged to keep his realty for better prices. The argument put forth by those who considered prices too high was that there was no market. They claimed it was all very well to ask a fancy price, but it was another thing to get some one to give it. The deals that have been put through since the first of the year clearly show that there are people that have confidence in Manhattan realty. It would certainly be a venturous man who would state that prices have reached their apex. Many of the banks, during the recent financial flurry, had a large amount of money invested in Wall Street securities. These were in many instances sold and the cash placed in the vaults, so that should there be any unusual withdrawals on the part of depositors no difficulty would arise. This money is now coming to light. One prominent bank is reported to have approximately five millions of dollars that is to be placed on bond and mortgage. Should this plan be followed very generally by banks the effect would be beneficial in no small degree to real property. Everything points to better and more prosperous times, and in all probability business will be in full stride when the Presidential campaign is over.

PROBLEM OF HEIGHT AND AREA.

I ASK any fair-minded person who is conversant with the condition here in New York if the following statements are not true:

1st. It would not be good public policy either to reduce the value of the land or to curtail the attainable floor space in rooms, offices, etc., in a place of limited area like this below what can possibly be had with due regard to public health and safety, and with justice to private interests.

2d. It would not be just to discriminate in favor of land owners who have already built high buildings and pre-empted their neighbors' light by placing any restriction on the earning power of other land beyond what is absolutely necessary as aforesaid.

3d. To allow unrestricted liberty to build high buildings as at present is both unwise and unjust because:

(a) They are unwholesome. As high buildings multiply and districts become solidly built up, light and air are shut out both from the buildings themselves and from the streets. Even if people are willing to build in that short-sighted way, public policy demands that they be not allowed to do so.

(b) They cause congestion of the streets. Streets designed for a city five or six stories high become too congested when the entire area is built up to several times that height.

(c) They are dangerous. In districts solidly built up with tall buildings fires may break out above the reach of the fire department and spread over large areas unchecked.

(d) They are unjust. Private land may be built in on all sides to any height by buildings taking their light from it, and the owner has no redress. If he builds and closes the windows of his neighbors he will have no light himself.

(e) They are offensive to good taste. Esthetic considerations, which will undoubtedly have more weight here in the future than they have in the past, are set at defiance by present methods. Our street facades have a ragged, wild western appearance, more suitable to a half civilized community than to a city which claims rank with the other great capitals of the world. Great buildings having one or two sides ornamented rear their gigantic walls of naked brickwork far above adjoining buildings, and force their ugliness upon public view. Esthetic morality requires that our streets of the future should have that sober, dignified and restrained aspect which comes of a uniform line. Only monuments and buildings of a public character, such as municipal buildings, churches, theatres and the like should break the line of the street facade by going above its general height and thereby obtain the setting and background which is their due.

If the truth of these propositions is admitted, we arrive at the conclusion that it is neither just nor expedient to limit the height of buildings in New York as is done in other great cities, or to permit of the unrestricted multiplication of high buildings as at present. We must therefore find some other expedient to cure the evils which are being forced upon our attention by present conditions.

I maintain that to establish a limit of height such as has often been proposed, ranging all the way from one hundred and fifty to two hundred feet, is no remedy at all; it will do no good. A limit of height to be effective must not be over five or six stories. A district built up solidly with buildings of even one hundred and fifty feet high could not be properly lighted by courts of a size the ordinary lot will permit of. The truth of this can be seen by observing the new law tenements. Here buildings five and six stories high having thirty per cent. of the area of the lot vacant are none too well lighted when built up solidly. If this illustration is not enough, is not the almost universal practice in foreign cities of limiting the height of buildings to once or, at most, once and half the width of the street sufficient proof that this is as high as it has been found wise to build them?

We are apt to judge in this matter by our own experience, because our ten-story buildings are generally sufficiently lighted. We assume that they always will be so, but they won't. Up to the present time such buildings have been comparatively isolated. We have yet no districts solidly built up with buildings as high as ten stories. When we do have we shall find that they are not sufficiently lighted. Eight stories I regard as the extreme limit at which a district solidly built up can be lighted by courts of practical dimensions, and by streets of the width of ours, and this height is only possible on account of the exceptional purity of our atmosphere.

Now, as a cure for all these difficulties and dangers, I suggest a most simple remedy; I would have only two restrictions.

1st. A restriction against building higher than a distance equal to once and a half the width of the street, with a maximum of one hundred feet, over three-quarters of every plot.

2d. A restriction against building higher than this limit on the remaining quarter within a distance of the street facade equal to the distance of the curb from the building line.

In addition to this I would require that the part of any building carried above the limit above fixed should be architecturally treated on all its sides, and that no wood whatever be used in the building or its equipment. For if people choose to build abnormally high they should at least be required not to offend public taste or endanger public safety.

I would make no restriction as to the area which may be covered below the limit of height, and I would make no restriction as to the height of buildings on the unrestricted part of the plot. I would allow absolute liberty in the purchase and sale between adjoining owners of the right to build high on one-quarter of the land, so that an owner wishing to build high on more than one-quarter of his plot may do so by acquiring the rights of adjoining land, but the adjoining owner having once sold his rights to build high would be restricted within the limit. Thus in any event, only one-quarter of the land would be covered by buildings of a greater height than the limit established for the street facades.

As an illustration of what I propose I present the Singer Building as complying with all the requirements, except that the low part exceeds the limit of height here recommended.

1st. Sufficient light and air would be secured for the buildings and streets.

2d. The threatened congestion of the streets would be avoided.

3d. Land values would be but slightly affected, if at all.

4th. It would afford all the floor area which is compatible with common justice and good public policy.

5th. No man would be compelled to build a low building because his neighbors had pre-empted his fair share of light.

6th. It would secure justice to the individual land owner because if he refused to sell his rights to build high to a neighbor, no great damage could be done him, and if he did sell he would receive compensation for any injury he might receive.

7th. It would sufficiently separate the high parts of buildings to prevent the spread of fire from one to another, even admitting that they could burn, and it would bring all inflammable material within the easy and convenient reach of the fire department.

8th. It would establish uniform and dignified lines of street facade.

9th. It would prevent unsightly walls of unadorned masonry such as we now have thrusting themselves into public view under the pretext that they are the sides or rears of buildings.

10th. It would add to the picturesque sky line of the city as seen from a distance. We should have a city of towers.

Finally, it would make a city of an entirely new type in conformity with modern methods of construction and modern methods of vertical transit. It would be simply the carrying out the steel skeleton and elevator ideas to their logical conclusion.

BULLETIN OF THE TENEMENT HOUSE DEPARTMENT.

FIREPROOF DOORS AND WINDOWS.

Bulletin No. 22. Where fireproof doors are called for, it is primarily for the purpose of preventing interference with the use of halls or other egress passageways through the entry of fire therein. To that end the department requires that not only shall the doors proper be satisfactorily fireproofed on both sides, but that the jambs shall also be so protected that they cannot catch fire and allow the door to fall. Where the jambs are blocked out from the wall of hall or passage, care must be taken to see that the space between jamb and wall is completely filled with fireproof material or is covered over with metal, so that there will be no opportunity for fire to reach and weaken the jamb or its supports. The department will not object to the placing of non-fireproof trim over the metal or other protective covering or filling on the apartment or store side of the door jamb, provided that opportunity is given to the inspector to note and report that the construction underneath same is fireproofed as per regulations. The construction on the hall, passage, or court or shaft side must be entirely fireproof. (This includes dumbwaiter doors). Similar construction is required for all fireproof windows, store fronts forming sides of fire passages, etc., except that windows from entrance halls, stair hall windows entirely on entrance floor, and windows on lot line (Bulletin 8), must be fireproof throughout. Windows of entrance halls may be glazed with cathedral, leaded or other fancy glass, provided the same is covered and protected on the outside with wire glass. On plans filed after April 1, 1908, stair hall windows partly or entirely above the entrance floor will be required to be fireproof throughout, except as to the glass. (For bulletins from 1 to 20, see Issues Oct. 26, Nov. 2, 9, 16, Dec, 21, 28, March 7.)

WOULD OPPOSE PROPOSED REVISION.

ARGUMENTS ADVANCED AGAINST CONTEMPLATED CHANGES IN ELEVATOR REGULATIONS.

The announcement that there will be a public hearing next Wednesday afternoon by the Committee on Elevators and Escalators of the Building Code Revision Committee has aroused considerable interest among elevator manufacturers and dealers, engineers, general contraotors, architects and others who are more or less connected with the installation and operation of means of vertical transportation. The hearing is to take place in the Aldermanic Chamber, City Hall, at 2 o'clock on April 1, and its object will be to give opportunity for discussion to those interested in the revision and amendment of the building code in relation to the running of elevators for passengers and freight and the operation of escalators and the like.

The proposed amendment of the code in this respect will meet with active opposition from some quarters. Mr. P. R. Bolton, 527 5th av, a well-known consulting engineer closely identified with the elevator question, was visited by a Record and Guide representative with reference to the contemplated changes. He said:

"The present rules and regulations relating to elevators, which have been in force since 1903, and formulated by the Bureau of Building Improvement, manifestly need revision and certainly extension, but this should be done under the direction of experts in so far as the particularly technical matters are concerned. As an illustration, take the proposed amendment of the code formulated by the Building Code Commission. This was drawn up by those unacquainted with the subject and, while it has some useful provisions relating to the construction and protection of elevator hoistways, the provisions relating to elevators are so ill-expressed as to he really worthless.

"As an illustration of the lack of information on the subject, the classifications were made so absurd that they would defeat the object aimed at. For example, the classification of an elevator as a car is incorrect, as the car is but one part of the combined apparatus properly known as the elevator. If such a classification is used it would be practically impossible to enforce the regulations and safeguards in respect of the whole machine, when the law specifically describes it as a car.

"Regarding the escalator, a serious machine largely used for the convenience of the public and by many properly thought to be a better means for handling crowds than any other in certain public places, the classification of it under the present amendment as an amusement and also in the advertisement announcing the meeting to be held is absurd. My suggestion is that there should be no attempt to draw up rules and regulations regarding the operating conditions, together with all applications of safety devices, unless such work be placed in charge of a committee under the general supervision of the department of building, and this committee should be composed of expert mechanical engineers."

In connection with the point brought out by Mr. Bolton to the effect that loose classification, such as designating an elevator as a car, he has proposed a glossary of terms that would prevent the resultant confusion of names. Carrying this idea out Mr. Bolton has defined what is intended in the use of such words as elevator, story, floor, floors served, travel of passengers and travel of car, service, round trip, schedule, operator, starter, live load, dead load, landing, stop, start, acceleration, retardation, speed with its different applications, car, machine or engine, hoistway and pit. An explanation of one of these terms will indicate the object aimed at. An elevator is an apparatus for vertical transportation, the term being inclusive of the machine, all of its appliances, the guides, ropes, counterweight, and the car. The car is the complete structure within which the live load is carried up or down, comprising the cage, platform and cab. The confusion, especially in courts of law, resulting in the use of elevator and car as synonyms is apparent.

Mr. G. E. Stanley, of the Electric Elevator and Machinery Maintenance Company, 1 Beekman st, suggested some useful improvements:

"The regulation of elevators would be more effectively carried on and more regard would be given to the safety of the public if there were more inspectors. The present number should be increased. The number of elevators in use in the City of New York has increased so rapidly in the last few years that it is quite impossible for the limited number of inspectors to do all that is expected from them, no matter how conscientiously they attend to their dutles. To have the rules and regulations enforced as they should be, a very difficult undertaking now, requires a larger staff for this purpose.

"The more general use of safety devices, such as for notifying the operator when the gate has not been closed properly, would be advantageous. The rules in this respect are very strict in other places, as in Philadelphia.

"The requirement of a license for operators would mean more safety for the public. There are scores of men, especially colored men, who know almost nothing about an elevator and who are employed to operate cars. They can handle the lever, but if anything happens to the car while it is in motion the operator is helpless and gets to the bottom in the best way possible.

"It would be advisable, also, to consult practical elevator men, experts in this line, when any changes are made in the code in so far as they relate to elevators. One who has worked with these machines, in the manufacture, installation or repair, appreciates best the needs."

Mr. Charles D. Seeberger, of the escalator department of the Otis Elevator Company, who has been identified with the manufacture of escalators since that name was used, was surprised at the classification of this practical feature in vertical transportation in the announcement regarding the public hearing primarily as a device for amusement purposes. Concerning this and the coming meeting he said:

"It is contrary to the policy of the Otis Company to sell escalators for amusement purposes. The work of the escalator is most needed in places where there are large crowds of people to be moved, as from one floor to another in the large department stores and at elevated stations. The average number handled by escalators is about a quarter of a million every day, which means from 75,000,000 to 100,000,000 a year. In large establishments, where there is a complete equipment of escalators for both ascending and descending, the number using this mode of going up and down is about 75 per cent. of the total.

"The escalator is adapted only for situations where there are large numbers to be moved, and inquiries for the supplying of such means of transportation in places where the number of people is limited are not encouraged. The public appreciation of the escalator is best evidenced by the effect on traffic at the elevated stations where it has been introduced. The escalator at an elevated station has a capacity for almost any crowd. It is usually rated at from 10,000 to 12,000 persons an hour, but this capacity can be almost doubled when each step is well filled.

"From statistics handed to us we find that in stores with only elevators the percentage of people going above the first floor is 28 as compared with from 53 to 90 per cent in stores where the elevators are supplemented by escalators."

A representative of a large elevator concern, when asked about the difficulties to be brought up at the public hearing, said:

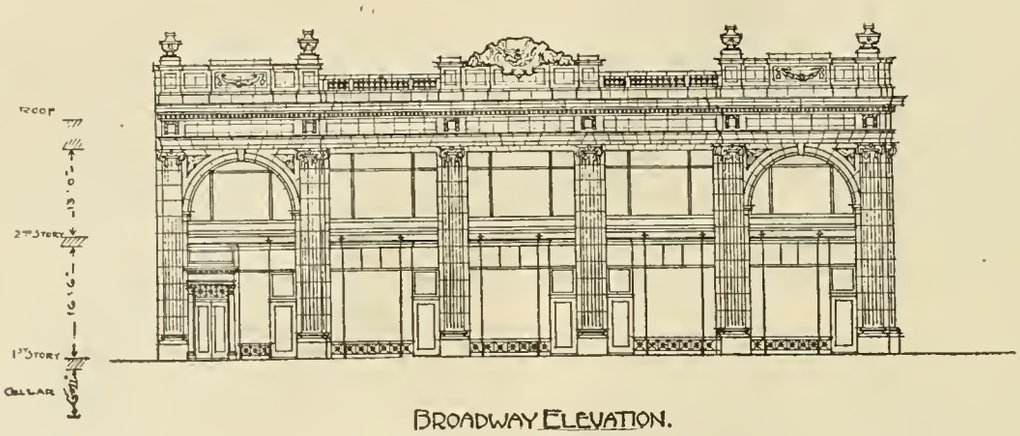
"There are twice as many people moved up and down every day in New York than moved horizontally. This may seem strange, with all of our surface, elevated and subway cars, but it is a fact. The business buildings are generally so high in this city that elevators are a necessity, and thousands upon thousands use an elevator or an escalator a dozen times a day when they use a car to travel horizontally three or four times.

"This emphasizes the need of some change in the building code in so far as it is related to the regulation of elevators and moving stairways. Revision is needed in the required depth of the pit, the size of the mesh in the car, the rules concerning the counterweight and a number of other things. And in this revision experts on the construction and operation of elevators should be consulted. It is done with railroads and similar public utilities, and when there are more people transported vertically than horizontally every day in New York the best advice should be received before changes are made."

ANNUAL MEETING OF EMPLOYERS' ASSOCIATION.

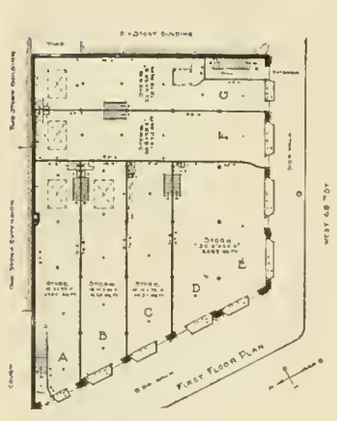
The annual meeting of the Building Trades Employers' Association will be held on Tuesday, April 14. Mr. Isaac A. Hopper, the president, who is now in Florida, will be the chairman. It is expected that the moving of the quarters of the association to the new building will be one of the most important topics discussed. Another matter will probably be the reports of Mr. Benj. D. Traitel, first vice-president of the association, and Mr. Lewis Harding, chairman of the Board of Governors, concerning what was done at the meeting of the National Association of Builders' Exchanges, held in Washington early in March. Messrs. Traitel and Harding attended the meeting. The members are showing great interest in the completion of the new building, and as the meeting will be the last of its kind in the present quarters it promises to be well attended.

THE ARCHITECT
WHAT HE HAS DONE RECENTLY AND WHY HE DID IT.

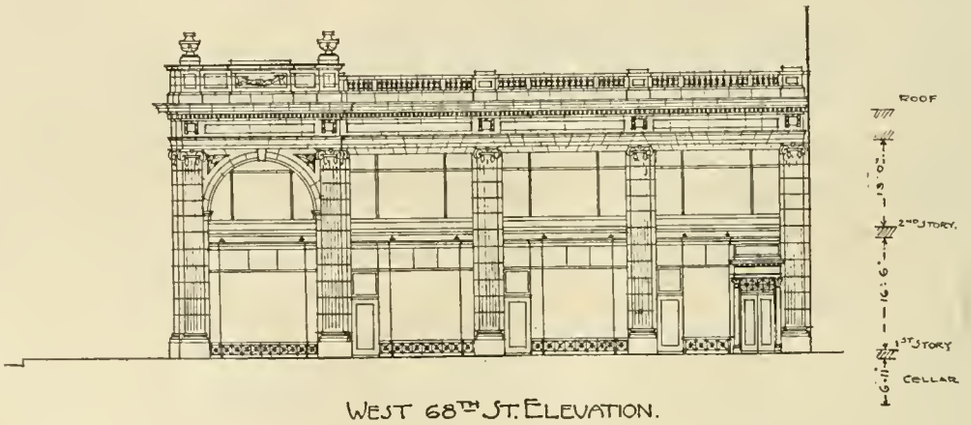


SUGGESTIONS FOR A "TAXPAYER."

(With illustrations.)



THE ordinary 2-sty structure, or, as it is often called, a "taxpayer" building, erected on a piece of property for commercial purposes is generally an unsightly structure, and only built to obtain a certain revenue to defer the fixed charges on the property, pending a later decision as to the ultimate disposition of the site, yet it is often the case that these buildings remain rented to their fullest capacity for many years owing to the fact that they actually yield a large return to the owner, but present in the meantime to the eye of the passer-by a most dilapidated and unsightly appearance.



Therefore in the present instance in the elevation of the Rhinelander Real Estate Company's building at Broadway, the northeast corner, and 68th st, while this building is erected perhaps, for the same reasons above mentioned, yet the owners have been sufficiently imbued with a desire to have a pleasing facade upon this building, and therefore present the taxpayer with some claims' they hope, to architectural beauty. The architects have endeavored to design a facade that will comply with all the conditions of light, space and ventilation, using for this purpose piers with flat pilasters attached and two bays on the north and south ends of the Broadway facade, having a circular archway between the abutting piers. The order rises up two stories with a proper frieze and entablature surmounting them. The style is Italian, or perhaps of late Louis XVI. or French Renaissance.
